HOUSE RESCUES HOUSING FROM SESSION WRECK

Passes Roosevelt Plan, 325 to 23.

Long Fight on Crop Bill

Radical differences between the administration's farm dictatorship bills passed by the senate and house must be composed by the conference committee before final legislative action can be completed at regular session of congress in January. Page 7.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—From the wreckage of President Roosevelt's special session program the house tonight salvaged the housing measure suggested by the chief executive in a special message Nov. 29. The bill was passed by a vote of 325 to 23.

There was a prospect that the senate also would approve the measure before adjourning early next week. If it does, one lone item of the entire program which Mr. Roosevelt outlined when he summoned the special session will be presented at the White House as a yuletide offering.

Bill Cuts Down-Payments.

The housing bill is intended to make the financing of small homes easier for the owner by reducing the down-payment requirements on homes costing $6,000 or less. While a prospective owner formerly had to put up 20 per cent of the cost, he would provide only 10 per cent under the new measure. For costlier homes the requirement remains 20 per cent.

Ballyhooed by the administration as the bill necessary to curb the present depression, opponents say the measure will have just the opposite effect. The opponents were few, however, and the majority by their votes placed reliance in the President's conclusion that the bill will release billions of dollars to the building industry.

The bill continues the present $2,000,000,000 limit on aggregate mortgage insurance under the housing act and provides for the conversion of this sum into a revolving fund. A limitation was included which bars the issuance of mortgages on a basis of more than $1,200 per room [on rooms used for living purposes].

The most important feature to owners is the provision for the insurance of mortgages up to 90 per cent of the appraised value of the property. It is applicable only to owner occupied homes and to properties begun after Jan. 1, 1938.

But this action of the house, taken after nine hours of listless debate, did not rescue the Democratic leaders from the doldrums into which they were plunged by last night's slaughter of the wages and hours bill by a 216 to 198 vote.

Leaders Confer Dolefully.

Speaker William B. Bankhead and Majority Leader Sam Rayburn conferred sorrowfully on the appalling damages resulting from that debacle and found little to comfort them.

Recommittal of the bill to the labor committee, where it may never again see the light of day, split the house into embittered blocs. Northern and southern Democrats were estranged. Industrial and farm groups were muttering threats of vengeance against each other. Defeated proponents of the bill threatened reprisals.

Representative Arthur Mitchell [D., Ill.], only colored member, urged colored voters to oppose the reëlection of Democrats who helped to defeat the bill.

Illinois Delegation Divided.

The Illinois delegation divided, 17 to 10, against recommitting the measure. Six Republicans [Church, Reed, Mason, Allen, Dirksen, and Arends] and four Democrats [Champion, Schuetz, Kocialkowski, and Lucas] voted with the majority to send the bill back. The seventeen Democrats who stood by the administration and voted against recommittal were Long, Mitchell, McKeough, Kelly, Beam, Sabath, O'Brien, McAndrews, Thompson, Boyer, Meeks, Rigney, Fries, Schaefer, Arnold, Parsons, and Keller.

Reprisals against the farm bill, approved by the senate last night, were threatened by Representative Joseph A. Gavagan [D., N. Y.].

"The farm bloc tricked us by their trades," he said. "The farm

U. S. JURY FINDS 36 GUILTY OF MINE TERRORISM

Face Prison Terms Up to Four Years.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The thirty-six defendants in the federal bomb conspiracy case, arising out of the dynamitings during the Illinois mine union warfare from 1932 to 1935, were found guilty today by a jury in the United States District court here.

Gazing at their weeping families, grouped in the courtroom, the defendants heard the sweeping verdict against them on all three counts in two indictments. Under the verdict each defendant faces a maximum sentence of four years in a federal penitentiary and a fine of $20,000.

The defendants, who had been free on bond, were taken into custody immediately pending arrangements for new bonds and an appeal after sentence is passed.

On Trial Over Month.

The verdict was read at 9:24 this morning before Federal Judge Charles G. Briggle, ending a long and involved trial which began Nov. 15. During the sensational hearings the defendants had charged that their prosecution was a persecution by John L. Lewis, czar of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Lewis has been the international president of the United Mine Workers of America for many years and took that union with him into the C. I. O. The defendants are members of the Progressive Miners of America, or sympathizers of that organization and rebelled from Lewis' dictatorial control of the U. M. W. A. in 1932, remaining in the American Federation of Labor when he withdrew.

The jurors received the case shortly before 7 o'clock last evening, retired to their hotel quarters at 11 p. m., four hours later, and resumed their deliberations in the courthouse at 8:30 this morning.

Court Receives Verdict.

The defendants were in court before 9 o'clock this morning. Judge Briggle arrived shortly afterward and, on inquiry, learned that a verdict had been reached. The jurors, most of whom were farmers, filed in slowly, without looking at the defendants.

The balif read out the names of all the defendants on the first indictment which contained two counts, charging conspiracy to obstruct interstate and foreign commerce in coal by the bombing of freight trains and mines in southern and central Illinois. The defendants stared at the bailif, waiting for the all important words at the end of the list of names. At the phrase "guilty as charged," the 36 men shifted nervously.

Wives Sob at Verdict.

Defense attorneys, however, slumped in their chairs and sobs came from the spectators' section where more than seventy-five persons, wives, and children of the defendants, were gathered. The defendants turned in this direction and then faced the bailif again as he read the guilty finding on the second indictment, which charged conspiracy to interfere with the mails.

A motion for a new trial was made by defense counsel and was continued to Wednesday morning. Each defendant has been free on $10,000 bond since the indictments were returned a year ago, but Judge Briggle said new bonds in the same amounts would have to be obtained.

One Bond Increased.

The new bond for one defendant, John E. Tatman of Gillespie, Ill., was raised to $20,000. Tatman was once convicted of murder in Kansas City, Mo., and was sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted and he was later paroled.

The men were taken into custody by United States Marshal Paul Ruppel while their attorneys made efforts to get the new bonds. If the motion for a new trial is overruled Wednesday morning Judge Briggle will impose sentence immediately. Punishment in cases such as this is at the discretion of the judge in accordance with the statues.

Arthur M. Fitzgerald, chief of defense counsel, announced that an appeal will be taken to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Chicago. After sentence is passed, by

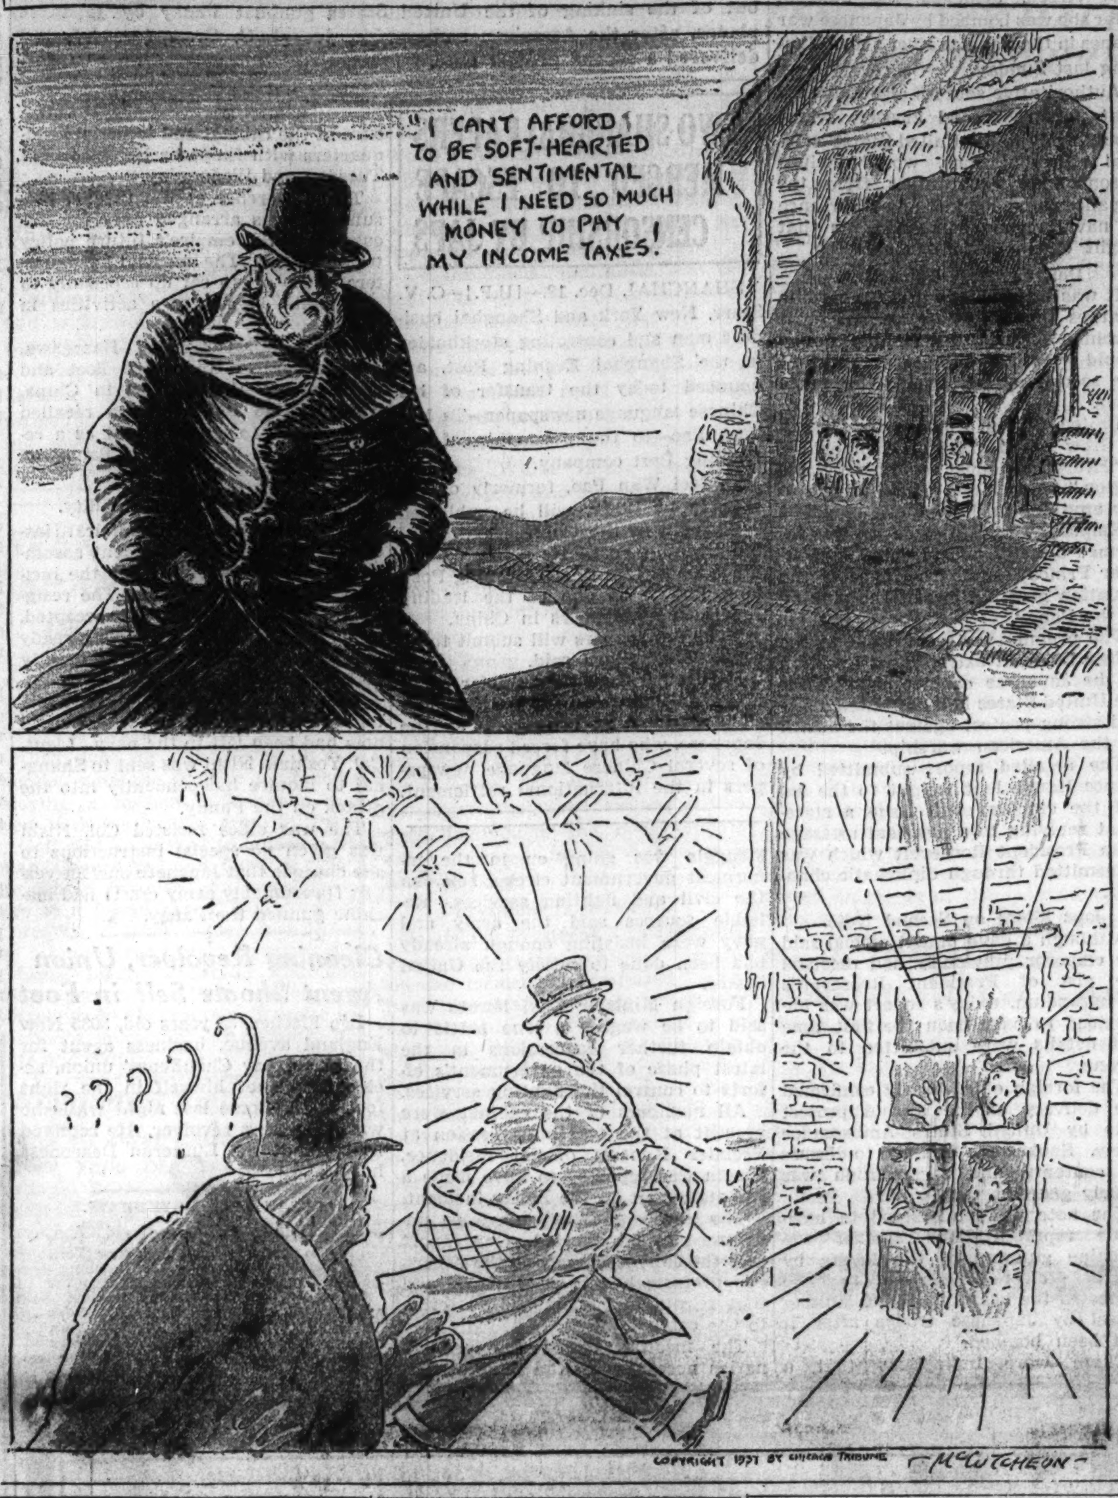
MR. BADFELLOW AND MR. GOODFELLOW



Dating Bureau Boon to Lonely Co-ed and Boy

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Lonely boy can now meet lonely girl at the University of Illinois.

A dating bureau has been established under student auspices with university approval at which students, both men and women, may register their desire for companionship of the opposite sex and make acquaintances under proper surroundings.

Considered of Social Value.

Such a bureau is considered of social value in a school of 12,000 students, hundreds of whom are not members of fraternities or sororities.

Already several hundred students have registered wih the bureau which has an office in the student center on the campus. Results of dates made thus far have been reported successful.

"It is perhaps too early to judge the desirability of any one new organization like a student dating bureau, since its success so largely depends upon the manner in which it is conducted," said W. Russell Tylor, assistant professor of sociology. "In general, however, the idea is a serviceable one.

"To many students, on a large campus, especially those not affiliated with fraternities and organized houses, do not have the opportunities that others enjoy of appropriately meeting members of the opposite sex whose interests are congenial.

Blow at Whilom Romance.

"If a democratically and properly conducted student agency can effect such acquaintanceships the social life of the participating students may well be enriched."

With the date bureau under way a blow was dealt to whilom romance here today when a string of mistletoe that had been placed above the famous boardwalk was ordered removed as a public menace. The custom of kissing him or her, caught beneath the holiday sprigs, is said to date to ancient Greece. Students were reported to regret the removal for cause.

"Mistletoe has a great tradition, but science has robbed it of its romantic meaning by demonstrating that kissing is the real reason for the spread of colds, measles, diphtheria, and scarlet fever," said Dr. J. Howard Beard, university health officer.

"No student should walk under the mistletoe until he has a grade of at least B in bacteriology."

'WIDOW,' RULES COURT, IS A NOUN; AND THE GENDER IS FEMININE!

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The word "widow" was construed by the New Jersey Supreme court today as a noun of strictly feminine gender. As a result, David F. Johnstone, 75 years old, lost his suit for a "widow's" pension as the widower of Elizabeth Johnstone, who was a matron at the Passaic county jail.

SCHOOLS IN KANE COUNTY PERILED BY METHANE GAS

The dangerous methane gas, also known as marsh gas and black damp, has been found near Chicago in Kane county. E. Earl McCoy of Elgin, Kane county superintendent of schools, warned yesterday that the gas is present "in hazardous quantities" in the water distribution of many school buildings.

Facilities of twelve rural schools which depend for water upon deep wells or pressure tank systems were tested, and in some cases enough methane gas was found to cause serious explosions. Mr. McCoy urged immediate steps to prevent accidents.

Only recently several explosions in deep wells in Illinois were traced to methane gas. In one, at Normal, a workman was killed. In another, at Clinton, several workmen were hurt.

You Can Tell It's Joe by His CardboardBox

Joseph Splawski will be back in Chicago this week. The police will be elated; they have been wanting to see Joseph for seven years. So will a number of Chicago citizens of Polish descent who paid up to $10,000 for the tricky little cardboard boxes which Joseph made and which were supposed to turn $1 bills into $100 ones.

Joseph Sikorski was Mr. Splawski's last victim of record in Chicago. Sergt. Frank Raia of the Sheffield avenue station supplied the details last night.

It was in January of 1930 that the two Josephs became acquainted. Splawski was a man of affluence. He was a good spender. He had so much money that he gave $12,000 to Sikorsky one day to hold for him.

How About It, Pal?

Sikorsky began to wonder where all Splawski's money came from. Eventually curiosity got the better of prudence and at the risk of losing Mr. Splawski's friendship, Sikorski asked him about it the day he gave back the $12,000.

Why, said Mr. Splawski, that was very simple. The money came from a wonderful cardboard box. He would demonstrate.

So Mr. Splawski put a $1 bill into the little box he produced and out rolled a $100 one. Out rolled another. Pretty soon there were ten $100 bills. They may or may not have been genuine, but they looked all right to Mr. Sikorski. Just then, however, the blamed box ran out of ink.

But ink was expensive. Mr. Sikorski had proved a fine fellow. Splawski would be glad to give him a share in the machine. Sikorski got $10,500 from the bank and gave it to Splawski, of this, $10,000 was for a share in the box, the other $500 was for more ink. Splawski went to buy the ink.

Hears Poland Calling.

He went clear to Poland. He bought his sister's farm there. Then in 1932 he returned to America to build more boxes. The police at Lawrence, Mass., caught him at it and he went to prison for five years. He got out yesterday, but is being held for Sergeant Raia, who will bring him back this week.

Some half a dozen Chicago victims are wondering if Mr. Splawski will have the ink.

Bingham, U. S. Ambassador to England, Dies

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Robert Worth Bingham, United States ambassador to Great Britain and Louisville, Ky., publisher, died tonight in Johns Hopkins hospital, where he submitted to a diagnostic operation on Tuesday.

Robert W. Bingham.

Mr. Bingham, who was 66 years old, had been a patient at the hospital since Nov. 25.

Death of the ambassador was due to Hodgkins disease, a rare ailment marked by abdominal inflammation, according to Dr. Hugh Young, who was with Mr. Bingham when he died. He said the operation on Tuesday disclosed for the first time the obscure malady. At the time it was announced the diplomat did not have cancer. The doctor said Mr. Bingham had consulted specialists in Europe after his ailment was not disclosed last summer when the ambassador visited Dr. Young.

Family at His Bedside.

With him when he died were his wife and two of his children by a former marriage, Barry Bingham of Louisville and Miss Henrietta Bingham, and his sister, Mrs. R. J. Grinnan. Another son, Robert W. Bingham, lives in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Mr. Bingham was born in Orange county, N. C., Nov. 8, 1871. He was a son of Col. Robert Bingham of the confederate army in the civil war and Delphine Louise Worth Bingham. His great-great-grandfather, William Bingham, founded the Bingham Military school in Asheville, N. C., in 1793.

After the death of his first wife, Miss Eleanor E. Miller of Louisville, whom he wed in 1896, he married, in 1916, Mrs. Mary Lily Flagler of New York, widow of Henry M. Flagler, one of the founders of the Standard Oil company, who left a fortune between $60,000,000 and $70,000,000 to his widow. When she died a little more than six months after her second marriage she willed $5,000,000 to Mr. Bingham. In 1918 Mr. Bingham bought the Louisville Courier-Journal, Col. Henry Watterson's old paper, and the Louisville Times.

Third Wedding in London.

In 1924 Mr. Bingham married Mrs. James Byron Hilliard of Louisville, the former Miss Alene Muldoon, daughter of an old Kentucky family. Their marriage took place in London.

He was a director of the American Creosoting company, the Liberty Bank and Trust company, and the Louisville and Nashville railroad.

The Louisville publisher was appointed ambassador to the court of St. James's by President Roosevelt in 1933.

Early in November Mr. Bingham returned to the United States to undergo treatment at the hospital and on Dec. 8 it was reported that Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the United States maritime commission, would succeed him at the court of St. James.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19 [Sunday].—[U. P.]—The United States cruiser Marblehead steamed swiftly downstream today en route to Tsingtao, where 300 Americans were reported awaiting rescue as Chinese raced through the rich industrial city blowing up and burning Japanese owned mills and homes valued at $100,000,000.

Fourteen rapid detonations shook Tsingtao during the morning and tremendous conflagrations broke out, fanned by high winds. An immediate movement into the city by Japanese troops now on the north shore of the Yellow river was anticipated. They carefully had avoided molesting Tsingtao in a futile effort to avoid damage to the heavy Japanese investments there.

Usher In New Chinese Policy.

It was reported in Shanghai that virtually the entire Japanese second fleet of 10 warships and 68 destroyers, cruisers, and auxiliaries is massed off Tsingtao.

Some observers of Chinese tactics said they believed the bombings and burnings in Tsingtao possibly ushered in an entire new war policy in which the Chinese would abandon passive defense for aggressive counteroffensive action, including the destruction of Japanese property throughout China and the seizure of the Japanese concession at Hankow. The Japanese mill district is situated at Szefang, half a mile behind Tsingtao.

[Tsingtao, 400 miles north of Shanghai, a former German port on the southern side of the Shantung peninsula, is the normal port for removing missionaries and other Americans in the interior of Shantung. It is also the summer port of the American Asiatic fleet. The American cruiser Sacramento is now at Tsingtao.]

Cruiser Speeds to City.

The Marblehead was ordered to Tsingtao along with the destroyer Pope by Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, after he abruptly had postponed his scheduled departure for Manila aboard the flagship Augusta. The Marblehead was the first to leave.

The British flagship Folkestone reported that sufficient British warships were at or near Tsingtao to take care of its 500 nationals there. These included the 10,000 ton cruiser Suffolk at Tsingtao and the 10,000 ton cruiser Dorcestershire, two destroyers and a sloop at Weihaiwei on the Shantung peninsula.

Reports here stated that orders were received several days ago from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking by Admiral Shen Hung-lieh, mayor of Tsingtao, to burn every Japanese cotton mill and other property in Tsingtao, but the admiral, previously reluctant to carry out the orders, said he had passed the buck to a minor Chinese general. Observers regarded as significant the appointment of three communist leaders to the national military council.

3D AMERICAN DIES.

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19 [Sunday].—(AP)—Another American died today of wounds received a week ago in the Japanese air and naval attack on the United States gunboat Panay and the cruiser Augusta postponed its scheduled sailing for Manila because of a situation understood to be threatening in Tsingtao.

Seaman Edgar William George Hul-sebus of Canton, Mo., the third American to die as a result of the attack on the Panay, succumbed to wounds caused by bomb fragments.

300 Yanks in Danger Zone.

His death occurred just a few hours before surviving members of the Panay's crew had expected to leave China on the Augusta, flagship of the United States Asiatic fleet.

An official announcement from the Augusta said the vessel would remain in Shanghai indefinitly because of developments in Tsingtao.

The destroyer Pope sped for Tsingtao this morning and the cruiser Marblehead, which was to have replaced the Augusta here, sailed for the city later today.

Tsingtao Situation Tense.

No official information about the developments in Tsingtao was given out, but it was understood a threatening situation was developing and there were fears the Chinese might begin destruction of Japanese mills and other property of an estimated value of $300,000,000.

Shipping firms reported they had received information the Chinese had blocked the inner harbor of Tsingtao and already had started destruction of Japanese property in the city.

One report said the Chinese had mined all Japanese mills in the city and were determined to blow them up if Japanese forces attempted to land.

Shen Hung-lieh, Chinese commander of the Tsingtao special area, announced his intention to fight the Japanese if a landing attempt was made.

Secrecy Veils Investigation.

Colin McDonald, correspondent for the London Times and a survivor of the Panay attack, appeared before the board late yesterday and gave a complete account of the incident from a detailed record he had kept.

High fleet officers said the board's activities, witnesses it is questioning, what exhibits were presented, and other details could not be discussed by board members.

Witnesses were ordered not to discuss the affair because of the gravity of the situation, which already has brought two American notes of protest to the Japanese government.

The naval court sought to determine whether the Japanese deliberately machine gunned survivors of the Panay as they fled the doomed gunboat in small open boats. Survivors, including American naval officers, have accused the Japanese of such action.

U. S. TO GET JAP GUARANTEE OF NO MORE OUTRAGES

Note to Deny Attacks on Panay by River Ships.

TOKIO, Dec. 19 [Sunday].—(AP)—The Japanese foreign office disclosed today that Japan would reply first to the second United States protest on the sinking of the American gunboat Panay.

Informed sources said the reply would be a complete denial that surface vessels attacked the gunboat after she was bombed by Japanese war planes in the Yangtze river above Nanking last Sunday.

Authoritative sources also indicated that Japan's second answer, which would reply to the United States' original representations, would include "ironbound" guarantees from the Japanese navy against any recurrence of naval or air bombardments that might endanger foreign shipping.

Deliver Reply Tomorrow.

It was believed the reply regarding charges that Japanese surface craft machine gunned the sinking Panay would be delivered tomorrow and that the second answer would be made later.

United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew would make no comment.

"Everything must come from Washington," he declared, "I am unable to say anything or divulge anything."

Emperor Hirohito of Japan was informed directly and in detail by Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoe of the situation growing out of the sinking of the Panay.

The premier yesterday went to the palace from an extraordinary session of the Japanese cabinet called after the United States had presented a second strong protest against the attack on the American warship.

The detailed report submitted by Prince Konoe lent weight to the belief the emperor will issue a statement replying to a personal message from President Roosevelt which was transmitted through diplomatic channels.

Japs Silent on Second Note.

Although a government official said the emperor previously had received the gist of President Roosevelt's memorandum, today's report was understood to have been the first time full details were submitted to the throne.

The foreign office barely confirmed the delivery of the second protest note by United States Ambassador Grew. Spokesmen declined to discuss its contents, and all reaction was closely guarded.

The note was understood to have made representations against the machine gunning of the Panay by Japanese river vessels and to have protested the boarding of the sinking vessel by Japanese troops after it had been bombed.

There were indications that a struggle was going on in the innermost government circles between the civil and fighting services. Reliable sources said the army and navy were insisting enough already had been done to satisfy the United States.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota was said to be waging a lone battle to obtain further concessions in the latest phase of the government's efforts to control the fighting services.

All members of the cabinet were present at the two hour session at Premier Konoe's official residence. Hirota was reported to have made a full statement on the Panay incident.

The government officials were understood to be worried. One report said the Japanese reply to the American protests had been prepared and that Hirota had explained its terms to the cabinet.

The meeting ended the preliminaries necessary to the joint conference of the cabinet and imperial headquarters with Emperor Hirohito next Tuesday and Wednesday.

The conference at the throne, presumably, was arranged only for discussion of the empire's future policy toward China. The imperial headquarters is the organ set up especially to coördinate Japanese activities in China.

Vice Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, commander of the third fleet and chief of naval operations in China, was reported to have been recalled for transfer to another post as a result of the attack on the Panay by naval planes.

Assumes Full Responsibility.

Informed sources said Admiral Hasegawa followed his statement assuming "full responsibility" for the incident with his resignation. The resignation, however, was not accepted. Other sources said Hasegawa already has or soon will be relieved quietly of his command.

The Japanese army officially entered the investigation, which until now had been left to the navy. Lieut. Col. Yoshiaki Nishi was sent to Shanghai to inquire independently into the attack on the Panay.

The war office insisted Col. Nishi was given no special instructions to sift charges that Japanese surface vessels [presumably army craft] had machine gunned the Panay.

Figures in New Protest to Japan

TWO SHANGHAI PAPERS MERGED TO ESCAPE CENSORSHIP BY JAPS

SHANGHAI, Dec. 18.—[U.P.]—C. V. Starr, New York and Shanghai business man and controling stockholder in the Shanghai Evening Post, announced today the transfer of his Chinese language newspaper—Ta Mei Wan Pao—to the ownership of the Evening Post company.

Ta Mei Wan Pao, formerly owned entirely by Starr, will be published henceforth as the Chinese edition of the Evening Post. Its policy will be the same as that of the Evening Post, long known as one of the leading American newspapers in China.

"The newspapers will submit to no censorship," Starr said.

It is understood the transfer of Ta Mei Wan Pao was made to avoid possible attempts at censorship by the Japanese, who have forced suspension of several Chinese language newspapers in the international settlement.

MOST OF CHINA'S AIR FORCE RUINED BY POOR FLYING

More Planes Cracked Up than Japs Shot Down.

BY C. YATES McDANIEL.

[C. Yates McDaniel, Associated Press correspondent, reached Shanghai yesterday from Nanking, where he had remained from early in the Chinese-Japanese war until after Japanese forces occupied China's abandoned capital.]

SHANGHAI, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Four times as many Chinese planes crashed from poor piloting as Japanese guns shot down. That tells the story of what happened to China's air force.

Not one American flyer took to the air in action against the Japanese. Russian airmen, who flew 50 planes to China from the soviet union, were the only fighters to join the Chinese air force in action.

Late in November several Russian planes were brought down around Nanking and two injured Russian aviators were treated at the American hospital.

Italian Advisers Recalled.

China's Italian air advisers ended their services when hostilities began because of political coöperation between Japan and Italy.

[Japan, Italy, and Germany are joined in an anti-communist agreement.]

Furthermore, the Chinese were in constant fear that the Italians might aid the Japanese.

When the government moved from Nanking, its air force flew off, leaving the capital's defenders entirely without aerial support during the Japanese siege.

Anti-aircraft batteries, which fired hundreds of rounds every day, shot down only one enemy plane during the attack, leaving Japanese wings over Nanking the freedom of the skies to bomb, power-dive, and strafe within a few hundred feet of the ground.

Most of Planes Cracked Up.

Most of China's American-made planes have been cracked up. Take-off and landing errors and use of planes for purposes to which they were not suited cost China fully 100 planes. Of six expensive American-made heavy bombers assembled just before the war, five were cracked up within a month because of faulty handling.

Thirty speedy American attack ships for ground strafing and light bombing were lost when they were misused for heavy bombing and as pursuit ships.

More than 50 American pursuit planes were sent to junk heaps and repair shops because the Chinese airmen could not learn to use their retractable landing gear.

American advisers still are at Hankow, where part of the Chinese government now is located, fulfilling contracts. They still are trying desperately to teach Chinese pilots to avoid the tactical errors that have cost China a fighting chance in the air.

BRITAIN TO SEND 3 BATTLESHIPS TO CHINA WATERS

London Hears U. S. Will Mass Fleet in Pacific.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The British cabinet has decided to send three capital ships to the far east in view of reports that Japanese military movements toward South China are a threat to Hongkong, it was reported today. The admiralty denied that the battleships are preparing now to leave for the orient, but did not deny that a decision to send them there was made.

The cabinet's intentions became known in connection with reports from the United States that American public opinion was moving toward approval for a naval demonstration and a massing of the American fleet in the Pacific.

Hopes for Strong U. S. Stand.

British newspapers reported, and public opinion here hopes that the United States is going to take strong measures over the sinking of the United States gunboat Panay. The measures they look for are the recall of Joseph C. Grew, American ambassador to Tokio, and concentration of the fleet around Hawaii.

Downing street, it was said, has been informed by Washington that it has decided to take a firm stand against any effort by Japan to turn China into a closed and preferential area. The British have promised complete assistance, it was reported.

Avoided Sending Big Ships.

The British decision was made, presumably, in coördination with American naval authorities. Hitherto the British have not sent big fighting ships to the far east because to do so means weakening British power in the Mediterranean and the North sea, creating a situation which Dictators Mussolini and Hitler might be able to use advantageously.

SEEK TO RETURN SPANISH SOLDIER IN SLAYING QUIZ

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 18.—(AP)—County Attorney Ed J. Goff said today he would ask the Spanish embassy in Washington to arrange to return here for questioning in connection with the Patrick J. Corcoran slaying a former Minneapolis man now with the loyalist army in Spain.

Goff said he wished to question the man, George R. Lund, about a report he sent a Spanish gun some weeks ago to a friend here. Police believe Corcoran, a labor leader, was killed by a bullet fired from a Spanish gun.

Lund, former organizer and business agent of a filling station and petroleum workers union, is under indictment here for abandoning his wife and child.

FLEET MANEUVER TO GO AHEAD; NOT AIMED AT JAPAN

Admiral Leahy Visits with President.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The White House today flatly denied reports that the United States is planning an immediate naval demonstration in the Pacific in the event Japan fails to meet American demands in connection with the sinking of the U. S. S. Panay.

The reports were occasioned by the visit of Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, to the White House late yesterday. The admiral carried official dispatches of the Panay incident to the President. Admiral Leahy was with with Mr. Roosevelt about fifteen minutes.

Despite official assurances that the visit was only for presentation of the dispatches, reports that the conference included discussion of moving up the annual fleet maneuvers from March and April to early January gained credence.

Denies Altering of Plans.

At the White House Secretary Stephen Early said arrangements for the fleet maneuvers had been made long before the Panay incident and that plans would not be altered because of the bombing and sinking of the gunboat by Japanese flyers.

Official circles maintained silence on the Panay incident awaiting the findings of a navy board of inquiry in Shanghai. A second protest was given to the Japanese government today by United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew. The latest protest supplemented that sent earlier in the week to include the developments which followed Japan's "all a mistake" apology.

President Is Gratified.

Meanwhile President Roosevelt was represented today as being "gratified and tremendously pleased" with the "calmness" that has characterized the attitude of the nation as a whole and the press in the situation growing out of the Panay incident. He was gratified all the more that what might have occurred in past history did not take place at this time, Early said.

Mr. Roosevelt was said further to feel that the support given him by the nation and the press "has been tremendously" helpful in the handling of the Panay affair.

Following his usual custom Mr. Roosevelt did not come over to his office in the White House executive offices, but remained in his private study in the White House proper.

'DON'T TRY TO VOTE,' RUMANIAN FASCIST PAPER WARNS JEWS

[Copyright: 1937: By the New York Times.]

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 18.—With police toleration the newspaper Tara Noastra, organ of the Goga Fascists, daily publishes an order to adherents of Octavian Goga's and Prof. A. C. Cuza's anti-Semitic groups to prevent Jews, by terrorism, from voting in the coming election. Every means must be employed, the party orders say, to prevent Jews from casting ballots. The paper warns Jews not to appear at polling stations as their presence might provoke "reflex movements."

JAPANESE CALL TEMPORARY HALT IN CHINESE DRIVE

SHANGHAI, Dec. 19 [Sunday].—(AP)—The Japanese army was busy today consolidating its occupation of Nanking.

Gen. Iwane Matsui, Japanese commander, was expected to establish headquarters in China's conquered capital, taking over palatial buildings that once were the fountainhead of Republican China.

The direction of the next Japanese drive was not known. Japanese troops have fanned out in all directions a little beyond Nanking, but apparently have now halted temporarily before launching a new phase in the undeclared war. Japanese reported that their air force, however, was continuing attacks beyond Nanking.

Quiz Discharged Workers in Eastern Train Wrecks

Two other reported attempts at wrecking trains were being investigated. Recently dismissed employés of the railroad are being questioned.

LOYALIST TROOPS CLAIM TERUEL WILL FALL TODAY

Surround Strategic City of Eastern Spain.

MADRID, Dec. 19 [Sunday].—(AP)—A Spanish government communique said today that the last defenses of Teruel, strategic insurgent city in Eastern Spain, had fallen before a surprise government offensive begun three days ago. The army high command, the announcement said, planned a final assault on the city this morning after civilians had been given a chance to escape.

Ten prisoners of war were sent into Teruel last night carrying a government promise of safety for all civilians and insurgent soldiers who would leave the city and enter government territory before 9 a. m.

Claim Rebel Loss Heavy.

The communique said rebel forces made a desperate effort to break through the circle around Teruel, but all attempts were beaten back with heavy losses to the enemy.

The first eye witness accounts of battle for Teruel told of fierce fighting in a blizzard. The wind reached a velocity of 50 miles an hour, it was bitter cold, and snow lay from 6 to 36 inches deep on the mountain battle ground, these stories indicated.

Government troops, it was indicated, also have extended their initial gains northwest of Teruel, which is the easternmost point of a salient created by the rebels in a drive to split government Spain.

The newly captured positions, government dispatches said, cut deeper into insurgent territory along the rebel corridor to the northwest. This corridor links the Teruel front to Saragossa, a rebel stronghold from where Gen. Francisco Franco, rebel commander in chief, has been expected to launch a "final" drive to isolate loyalist Catalonia.

In Communications Network.

Teruel is the control center of a strategic communications network of railroads and highways.

[An insurgent statement denied Teruel was encircled. It claimed the rebel lines had been opened as a trap to permit small government forces and sixty tanks to penetrate the sector the night of Dec. 16. After the government forces entered, the trap snapped shut, holding the attackers within a circle of fire despite reënforcements sent to extricate them.]

Just before news from Teruel was received by jubilant government officials it was announced that sixteen persons were killed and thirty-two injured when an insurgent shell landed in a street in the south part of Madrid. Fourteen of the dead were children, the others women.

Money, Documents Missing.

[Copyright: 1937: By the New York Times.]

GIBRALTAR, Dec. 18.—After eight weeks of preparation the Spanish insurgents have decided to postpone their offensive against Almeria because of the government attack at Teruel, it was learned today. Rebel losses there were reported to be serious. Visitors from southern Spanish towns told of rumors that secret documents and large sums of money disappeared from the rebel headquarters at Salamanca. The recent closing of frontiers was to prevent the loot being taken away. It was reported also that two rebel leaders bolted from La Linea to Gibraltar with funds belonging to the La Linea customs.

Greater London's Oldest Inhabitant Is Dead at 105

SUTTON, Surrey, Dec. 18.—[U .P.]—Fanny Louisa Griffiths, 105 years old and believed to be the oldest inhabitant of Greater London, died today.

BESIEGED REBEL CITY NEAR FALL

The Spanish government announced today the last defenses of the rebel held city of Teruel, in eastern Spain, had fallen before a loyalist offensive. A drive to capture that strategic city will be made today, the government said. Reports indicated authorities of the rebel regime were making efforts to trace money and documents stolen from their headquarters at Salamanca. Lined portion of the map indicates rebel territory, the shaded part loyalist.

CONFESSED KILLER TO BE BROUGHT BACK FROM MILWAUKEE

Lieut. Otto Erlandson, head of the detective bureau homicide squad, was planning yesterday to send a policeman to Milwaukee to bring back Soccorso Felice D'Andrea, who confessed there that he shot and killed his brother-in-law, Vincenzo Alleruzzo, at 3251 South Wells street in 1924. D'Andrea was suspected at the time, but was released when his sister, Mrs. Ida Alleruzzo, took the full blame for the crime. He was arrested in Milwaukee when his wife, after a quarrel with him, asserted that he was the killer.

HOLDS IT'S CRIME TO GIVE AWAY ANTI-NAZI PAPERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—"Any person in Germany who passes on a foreign newspaper notorious for its lies concerning Germany can be charged under the law against insidious attack on the state, even if the contents of that particular issue are not known to him," declared Public Prosecutor Kraner in an action before a special court at Munich in which a husband is charged with telling rumors to his wife, who retold them to others.

In this particular case the defendant was acquitted, but the prosecutor indicated to what extent enforcement of the law might be carried. It was pointed out that although grumbling might be permitted in the family circle, yet any one "poisoning the minds of his family with lies" was liable to punishment. The prosecutor further emphasized that expressions of opinion against the state constituted high treason if linked with propaganda for communism.

INDIA SEEKS 50% CUSTOMS TAX ON FAMED NECKLACE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Bombay customs authorities set a record for high levies in imposing a duty of 105,000 rupees [about $37,500] on the Marie Antoinette diamond necklace which the maharajah of Darbhanga recently bought.

When the famous necklace reached Bombay, the customs men demanded a 50 per cent duty. The maharajah's lawyers maintained no duty could be charged at all because the jewels were more than 150 years old and therefore are antiques. The customs officials allowed the jewels to be taken in and maintained their original demands pending adjudication.

The Indian potentate bought the jewels last July at Sothby's here in London for 15,000 pounds [about $75,000], equivalent to 210,000 rupees. The necklace consists of twenty-nine diamonds and thirteen pendants. It was sold by the Archduchess Bianca of Austria and her sister, Beatrix, who jointly inherited it. The forty-two stones weigh 180 carats.

DAUGHTER, CUT OFF BY ED HOWE, TO SHARE ESTATE

Atchison, Kas., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Mateel Howe Farnham, daughter of Ed Howe, publisher of the Atchison Globe, who was left only $1 in her father's bequest, will receive $100,000 from his $365,000 estate, it was revealed tonight. His two sons, James P. Howe of Walnut Creek, Cal., and Eugene A. Howe, newspaper publisher of Amarillo, Tex., have announced they would divide their share of the estate with her. Ten years ago Mrs. Farnham, who lives in Westport, Conn., wrote a novel "Rebellion," in which the father was pictured as unusually stern. It was generally believed that because of this Howe cut her off with $1.

DOMINICANS AND HAITIANS TO TALK PEACE IN U. S.

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Indications that arbitration may bring peace along the Haitian-Dominican frontier were seen today after another week in which fatal clashes were reported there. President Rafael L. Trujillo of the Dominican republic announced today he had accepted an invitation to a conciliation meeting in Washington, D. C.

President Stenio Vincent of Haiti already had invoked treaties providing for arbitration, and had enlisted the efforts of the United States, Mexico, and Cuba as mediators.

But up in the mountainous frontier country, Haitians and Dominicans have not been reconciled. Fighting with crude weapons continued just as it has every week since the first of October. The Haitian president termed it "mass murder" and estimated 8,000 Haitians have been slain on Dominican soil. Trujillo, "strong man" of the West Indies, referred to the outbreaks as a "local incident."

Some observers believe there is a Dominican desire to annex Haiti—the two republics share the same West Indian Island. Others blame efforts of Haitian squatters and pillagers to take Dominican property.

Traditional hatreds and economic rivalry, however, are considered more likely causes of the trouble. The Dominican republic holds sway over two-thirds of the island and has about 1,500,000 citizens. Haiti has a third of the land and a population more than 2,550,000. Haitians have invaded the Dominican republic three times, the last in 1922.

The October outbreaks definitly were linked with the pre-season plans for harvesting the Dominican sugar crop. Husky Haitians annually are hired for work in the cane fields at 20 to 25 cents daily.

MAYOR OUTLINES A NEW PLAN TO ENLARGE AIRPORT

Herman's Price Out of the Question, He Says.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

Mayor Kelly yesterday announced a new plan for enlarging the Chicago airport, declaring that the city would not pay an "outrageously high price" for land controled by Raymond E. Herman, real estate broker, to do the job.

The problem involves the removal of tracks of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad from the strip of land which bisects the mile square field. The mayor previously had hoped that the tracks could be moved to the right of way of the Indiana Harbor Belt Line, a block north of the airport. This would require purchase of 2.78 acres from Herman, and purchase of other land from the Indiana Harbor Belt Line, in which Herman holds reversionary rights.

Tells New Proposal.

However, after Herman demanded three times as much for the property as the city would offer, the mayor said:

"Rather than pay outrageously high prices for Herman's, or any other land, we will change our plans so that we need not go north of 55th street, and yet the field can be enlarged from 320 to approximately 630 acres, just under the square mile measurement."

Herman originally had asked $60,000 for the property, but after a Chicago Real Estate board appaisal committee had set a valuation of $65,323 he raised his price to that figure.

The airport tract is bounded by 55th and 63d streets and Cicero and Central avenues. Only the south half is developed for airplane purposes, because the C. & W. I. tracks run through the middle, along the line of 59th street.

Plan in Two Forms.

The mayor's new plan has alternate features. They are:

1. To purchase a strip on the north side of 55th street, about a block south of the Indiana Harbor Belt right of way. This would require the purchase of land owned by Herman, but it could be taken by condemnation proceedings, while his reversionary rights in the other strip cannot. Yesterday Herman said: "I'll block the whole airport project for a year or two if the city tries to take any of my property through condemnation proceedings."

2. To provide a right of way for the C. & W. I. along the north edge of the airport, just south of 55th street. This strip would be less than 100 feet wide and would make the land available for airport purposes a little less than a full square mile.

One Difficulty in Way.

The second suggestion, favored by the mayor, could be executed quickly, and would open virtually the entire airport area to landing field use. Bureau of air commerce engineers said the tracks and railroad cars would cause no more hazard for air trafic than hangars and other essential structures at the edges of the field. They also ponted out that the presence of the tracks along the northern boundary would not materially decrease runway lengths.

The only practical difficulty in the path of this proposal is the fact that the airport tract is owned by the Chicago Board of Education and leased to the city. It would be necessary to acquire title to the land before the tracks could be transferred, city authorities said, since C. & W. I. attorneys insist that the railroad be supplied with full title to a new right of way if it is to surrender its present strip of property along 59th street.

Demands $65,323 for 2.78 Acres.

Difficulties with Herman arise from the fact that he demands $65,323 for his 2.78 acre strip of land, while the city is willing to pay only about $20,000 for it. Arthur Kruggel, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, who was chosen as the third independent agent to aid in fixing a price for Herman's holdings appraised them at only $27,407.

While the mayor was insisting yesterday that the city would not pay Herman's price for the land, the records revealed the names of the five appraisers from the Chicago Real Estate board who appraised the land on Herman's request, and submitted it over Kruggel's signature, although Kruggel said he had not authorized it.

Herman had asked for the decision without waiting for Kruggel's decision as the arbiter, and said later that he believed the committee's appraisal would be binding on Kruggel.

Holdover Committee Chairman.

The chairman of the committe was John J. Fischer, who has a real estate office at 10 South La Salle street. At the real estate board yesterday it was explained that Fischer was a holdover from the administration that preceded Kruggel's, and that Kruggel was to replace him with an appointee of his own choosing. Elected members of the committee besides himself were John F. Jones of Jones and Kerfoot, 134 North La Salle street, and William H. Hart of Hart & Whetston, 1 North La Salle street.

Herman's petition was filed before Kruggel had time to appoint another chairman, and Fischer, it was said at the board yesterday, appointed Lester W. Porter of Hodge, Nicolson & Porter, Inc., 231 South La Salle street, and Louis B. Beardslee of Louis B. Beardslee & Co., 100 North La Salle street, to act on the committee with him and Hart and Jones.

Members of Same Club.

Realtors said Fischer, Porter, and Beardslee are members of a realty club to which Herman belongs.

Herman, on withdrawing from negotiations on Friday, said that when he agreed to the selection of Kruggel as third man, he did so in the belief that Kruggel could not act personally, under rules of the board, but would have to appoint a committee.

He said he would rather rest his chances with a committee than to accept the decision of Kruggel, who, he said, was familiar only with north side real estate values.

New Plan to Solve Airport Tangle

Map shows relocation of Chicago and Western Indiana railroad tracks, now at (1), proposed yesterday by Mayor Kelly in a new move to speed enlargement of Chicago airport. The mayor suggested the use of one of two routes at (2), on either side of 55th street, abandoning the route previously sought (3), because of the high price asked by Raymond E. Herman for the property it crosses.

MAN WHO DIED AFTER $150,000 OFFER FOR BRIDE AN EX-CONVICT

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Fingerprints of the man found dead in a hotel here after he threatened suicide when a Baltimore divorcee rejected his offer of $150,000 to become his wife proved today that he was James C. Carrington of Greenwood, S. C. He was on parole from the Ohio penitentiary where he was sent from Columbus for embezzlement.

The woman to whom he proposed marriage said he had identified himself as Harold Franklin and said he was a wealthy Cleveland broker.

Federal bureau of indentification files show Carrington was arrested in Kansas City, Mo., in 1929, on a charge of forgery and released after two days. He was arrested April 4, 1934, at Cleveland and later convicted of embezzlement, receiving a one to ten year sentence. He was paroled Aug. 1, 1936.

MOVE FOR COURT ACTION TO CLEAR AIRPORT SMOKE

Clearing Factories Held Liable to City.

The city moved yesterday to combat the smoke screen which officials of Chicago airport have termed dangerous to planes landing on or taking off from the field. The smoke pall is thrown over the airport by factories in the Clearing industrial district on days when the wind is from the south or southwest.

Frank A. Chambers, head of the city smoke abatement department, declared that unless the factory owners adopt smoke control methods they will be brought into the Municipal courts on charges of violating the smoke nuisance ordinance. While Clearing is outside the city limits, City Prosecutor Michael L. Rosinia held yesterday that the city has the right to control and license outside industrial plants operating within a mile of Chicago, which create a nuisance inside the city.

Ready for Test Case.

"I will be glad to handle any smoke nuisance case that Mr. Chambers brings in from the Clearing industrial district," Rosinia said.

The dangers of the smoke screen were brought out a few days ago in a letter sent to Chambers by John A. Casey, airport superintendent. He said that commercial airline and charter operators and military flight officials have made many complaints about the dense smoke clouds.

"We understand that several of the factories in the district are willing to coöperate," Chambers said yesterday, "but, until a general agreement is reached, investigators will watch all plant there for evidence of smoke nuisance."

Names Six Concerns.

The six Clearing plants named by Casey as the chief offenders are: Trumble Asphalt company, 5500 West 67th street; McGrew Paint company, 5544 West 67th street; Onalac company, 6540 South Central avenue; Fry Roofing company, 5302 West 66th street; Continental Can company, tinplate division, 5531 West 65th street; the Amalgamated Roofing company, 6600 South Central avenue.

CARDENAS TELLS POPULAR FRONT PLAN FOR MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 18.—(AP)—President Lazaro Cardenas today announced a plan to replace the famed National Revolutionary party—present political base of his government—with a "popular front" of workers, peasants, and soldiers.

Addressing an extraordinary meeting of the party executive committee, Cardenas proposed that the party be abolished.

He suggested that all left wing organizations be welded together into a "popular front" to provide the government the necessary organized support.

HOUSE RESCUES HOUSING FROM SESSION WRECK

Roosevelt Plan Is Passed by 325 to 23 Vote.

bill was saved by votes from New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia. They'll never get those votes again when we vote on the conference report. We'll kill the farm legislation."

Members who were not angry were depressed. Prominent among these were the radical group led by Representative Maury Maverick [D., Tex.].

Pledges Broken, Says Maverick.

"The Democratic party is breaking its pledges," said Maverick. "In such a situation, conditions of business and labor will only get worse. What we ought to do is boldly face the facts and go ahead, or else we will get a first class depression."

Many were the stratagems considered by the frightened Democrats. Representative Martin J. Sweeney [D., O.], wrote a letter to the President in which he pointed out that the defeat of the wage-hour bill was being regarded as a rebuke to the administration. He appealed to Mr. Roosevelt to exercise the power and influence of his office to bring about harmony between the Green and Lewis factions of labor.

Expect Adjournment Tuesday.

Leaders placed considerable faith in the passage of time to smooth out their difficulties. They looked forward to adjournment by Tuesday. With the exception of possible action by the senate on the housing bill, the special session was at an inglorious end.

The only measure emerging thus far from the extraordinary session to be placed before the President for his signature was a $225,000 appropriation for mileage expenses of senators and representatives. Since most of the legislators will remain in town for the regular session beginning Jan. 3, this fund constitutes a modest but satisfactory Christmas bonus for the statesmen, ranging up to $1,200 and more for those fortunate enough to represent districts far from Washington.

Four "Must" Programs.

When the President summoned congress back to Washington to deal with what he termed an emergency, he outlined four pieces of major legislation and marked them: "Urgent—Rush." Chances of enacting two of the bills, calling for reorganization of the government and establishment of a regional planning administration, faded quickly. The third, calling for regulation of wages and hours, met defeat last night.

Only one measure, that providing for an ever normal granary for farmers, survived the bruising attack leveled upon the entire program. And that bill, passed in widely differing form in the two houses, will be locked up in conference for weeks. Representative Marvin Jones [D., Tex.], chairman of the house agriculture committee, said today that the first conference meeting would not be called until after Christmas.

Wage Bill Technically Alive.

The wage-hour bill technically remains alive. The committee on labor may draft an entirely new measure in January and start the battle all over again. In that case the measure must again run the gauntlet of the rules committee, which successfully stifled the first measure for many months.

A new approach to the labor standards problem was discussed tentatively by some of the supporters of the beaten measure. They considered a system of federal licensing of firms in interstate commerce, as proposed by Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney [D., Wyo] and William E. Borah [R., Idaho].

Representative Jesse Wolcott [R., Mich.], member of the house banking committee, led the opposition of a small but determined group against the housing bill today.

"Officials of financial institutions have informed me there can be no increase in loans to home builders when this bill proposes to reduce the owner's equity in their homes, thus increasing the risk to the bankers," he said.

"It's like reducing the premiums on insurance while increasing the risks. Naturally the policy holder wants the reduction, but insurance companies wouldn't want to write much insurance. Every one would like to see home owners helped, but I am afraid that in our zeal to help them we will dry up the source of credit which this bill purports to broaden in scope."

Effect of Housing Bill

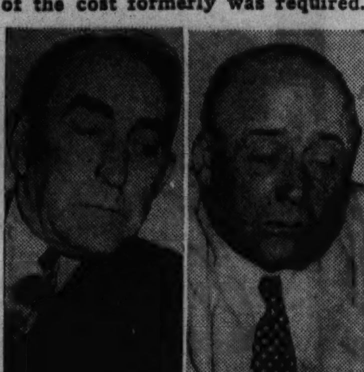
The housing bill approved in Washington yesterday by the house would require down payments of only 10 per cent on homes costing $6,000 or less, whereas 20 per cent of the cost formerly was required.



Meanwhile Speaker William B. Bankhead (left) and Majority Leader Sam Rayburn were reported downcast because of previous action by the house killing the administration wages and hours bill.

BRAZIL DICTATOR ORDERS NATION 'AGGRANDIZED'

[Copyright: 1937: By the New York Times.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Dec. 18.—"All danger is past and we are now ready to go to work for the aggrandizment of Brazil," Dictator Getulio Vargas, who seized power recently in a bloodless coup, told the army today.

The dictator said every citizen must realize that full coöperation is expected of him in the building of the nation. He said Brazil could not continue under what he called such a chaotic situation as that created by politicians.

"This change of régime was brought about calmly without altering the rhythm of the nation's life," he said. "The people received the change gladly and sympathetically, because they know what they want and they could not wait any longer for that old political machine, already worn out during its forty years of abuse."

Plan to Add 5,000 Workers to Downstate WPA Rolls

With Chicago already started on the first of seventeen new WPA projects which are to provide work for about 10,000 more reliefers, Charles E. Miner, state Works Progress Administration director, announced yesterday that 5,000 workers will soon be added to downstate WPA rolls. He said $1,000,000 has been allocated to Cook county for the next three months for new projects and the same amount will be given for downstate projects.

Mackay Improves After an Emergency Operation

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Clarence H. Mackay, head of the Postal Telegraph and Cable company, was reported in a "very satisfactory condition" today after undergoing an emergency appendectomy in Roosevelt Hospital early this morning. Mr. Mackay, who is 63 years old, was taken from his home shortly after midnight when his personal physician decided his condition was too serious to wait any longer before operating.

Three Dead, One Unhurt in Crash of Hospital Plane

CONSTANTINE, Algeria, Dec. 18.—[U.P.]—A French army hospital plane, returning from a desert outpost with a wounded soldier and its crew of three, crashed into a mountain near Setif during a storm today. The three members of the crew were killed but the wounded man was not further injured.

POINT TO RISING FASCIST TREND IN THIS COUNTRY

Defense of Dictatorship in Brazil Cited.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—With the Roosevelt administration defending the Vargas dictatorship in Brazil and promoting the creation of various agencies of authoritarian government at home, apprehensions are increasing that the advent of Fascism in the United States is just around the corner.

The administration was only temporarily checked by the Supreme court's invalidation of the regimentation of agriculture under the AAA, of industry under the NRA and of coal operators and miners under the Guffey coal control. It has already reestablished the Guffey coal control in only slightly modified form and is endeavoring to revive the regimentation of farms and of governmental farm price fixing under the pending farm dictatorship, delayed at least until next session.

Although the administration received a major setback in the defeat by the house last night of the bill for the political control of hours and wages, such legislation is considered still on the must list for the next session of congress.

Candor Despair of Aids.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, whose candor is the despair of his fellow radicals, has pronounced the compulsory crop limitation provisions of the farm bill as too drastic a regimentation of farmers and has characterized the substitute price fixing measures proposed by Senators Josh Lee [D., Okla.], and William G. McAdoo [D., Cal.], and Representative Sam C. Massingale [D., Okla.], as a step toward Fascism.

"These price fixing programs which sometimes are called domestic allotment plans, sometimes the two-price system, in order to be carried out, involve the licensing of all business men who purchase farm products," said Mr. Wallace. "They also involve licensing all farmers. If the situation were utterly desperate it might be all right to do that, but if the situation gets that desperate, then you are in the gravest danger of having to take a step toward that which they abroad call Fascism."

Similarity Cited.

The similarity of the authoritarian control proposed for American farmers to the authoritarian control of German farmers under Dictator Hitler's Nazi government is being cited. The fixing of coal prices now being effected under government supervision, which it is estimated will increase the cost of coal to consumers anywhere from 20 to 200 millions of dollars a year finds its counterpart in Mussolini's Fascist régime.

The still technically wage-hour legislation was repudiated by the American Federation of Labor when that organization felt the teeth of authoritarian government in the shape of the so-called national labor relations board operating with partiality for John Lewis' rival C. I. O., and moreover came to realize that with the government fixing wages and hours of labor there would be no more reason for the existence of labor unions than there is in Fascistic Italy, Nazi Germany, and communistic Russia, in all three of which totalitarian countries labor unions have been abolished.

Economist Tells Views.

Dr. Virgil Jordan, the noted economist who is president of the nationial industrial conference board, says: "We are now in a major depression which involves the possibility of a breakdown of our economic and political organization. . . . Whether the outcome will be the Fascist or the communist form of collectivization, no one can be sure as yet."

Though professing abhorrence of dictatorship, President Roosevelt has obtained from congress enormously greater powers than ever exercised by a predecessor in time of peace and is ever reaching out for more and more power. Until unanimously rebuked by the Supreme court he arrogated to himself the right to remove members of the quasi judical commissions and boards when, as he expressed it, their minds "do not go along with mine."

Checked in that effort the President is now endeavoring to accomplish the same results through a reorganization of the administrative branch of the government whereby the quasi-judical commissions and other independent agencies would be brought under his thumb.

That Mr. Roosevelt possesses the instincts of an authoritarian ruler to an eminent degree often has been noted. In the flush of his regimentation of industry under the NRA he said that never again would a factory owner be allowed to extend his plant without the consent of the government. In 1933, he decreed that prices shall go up and then last spring he decreed that they should go down—that is, all except farm product prices. He once set out to bring about reduction of the salaries of movie stars, which he said were far too high, being greater than the President's $75,000 salary.

President Thwarted.

He sought under the NRA to subject newspapers to possible discipline by the government whereby the American press could have been controled as effectively as the press is controled in Germany, Italy and Russia today. The President was thwarted by the refusal of the newspapers to waive the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press.

From the beginning of his régime, the President has sought to circumscribe the powers of the legislative and judicial branches and concentrate all power in the executive. He drafted legislation and sent it to congress to be rubber stamped. During his first term congress generally complied. He caused the delegation to himself of vast legislative authority. Then, last February, he moved to subject the Supreme court to his will.

Brazil's Case Cited.

All these were efforts to establish under democratic forms the authoritarian governments set up by more direct methods in Italy, Germany, Russia and several South American countries. The Brazilian minister of justice, in an attempt to rationalize the Vargas dictatorship, said that "there is a worldwide movement to withdraw from parliaments the power of initiating legislation and have parliaments delegate their functions to the executive."

Vargas was dictator of Brazil a year ago, when Mr. Roosevelt, stopping at Rio de Janeiro on his way to the Argentine, hailed him as brother.

ATTORNEYS SEARCH FOR MISSING POLISH PRINCE AND FIANCEE

WARSAW, Poland, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Family attorneys and Warsaw courts today sought information on the whereabouts of Prince Michael Radziwill, 67 years of age, and his Jewish fiancée, Mme. Jeanette Suchestow.

Attorneys said a search of the numerous Radziwill estates and the prince's Warsaw haunts disclosed no trace of them. It was believed they might have left the country, but authorities said if they did so it was without proper passports.

When the prince announced his engagement to Mme. Suchestow, who is 31 years old, opposition arose. His family regarded his marriage to a Jewess unwise.

The prince's second wife, mother of his children, claimed she and Michael never were properly divorced. Mme. Suchestow's efforts to become a Christian were frustrated. Catholic priests refused to baptize her.

TWO FARM BILLS DIFFER WIDELY; SEE LONG BATTLE

Senate, House Disagree on Crop Control.

BY CHESLY MANLY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Radical differences between the senate and house drafts of the administration's farm dictatorship scheme remain to be composed by the conference committee before final legislative action on the measure can be completed, probably not until well in January of the coming regular session of congress.

Both bills provide for a system of compulsory production control through allocation of state, county, and individual farm marketing quotas by the secretary of agriculture, but no marketing quota could be proclaimed unless approved by two-thirds of the producing farmers participating in a referendum. The compulsory quotas could be proclaimed for any or all of the five basic commodities, wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, and rice.

Measures Compared.

The bills differ widely with respect to the supply levels at which the compulsory quotas would be invoked and in their definitions of what constitutes a normal supply. The senate bill is far more drastic in this respect. The following table shows how the quotas would operate for the major crops of corn, cotton, and wheat:

	Normal supply.	Marketing quotas.
WHEAT. [In bushels.]
Senate bill.....	770,000,000	847,000,000
House bill	840,000,000	1,050,000,000
CORN.
Senate bill	2,323,000,000	2,555,000,000
House bill	2,486,000,000	2,859,000,000
COTTON. [In bales.]
Senate bill	17,500,000	17,500,000
House bill	18,200,000	20,900,000

The asserted object of each bill is to maintain at all times a normal supply of each commodity or "an ever normal granary," as Secretary of Agriculture Wallace calls it. The compulsory marketing quotas would be imposed when the supplies reached the levels in the second column of the above table. Secretary Wallace concedes that the senate levels are much too low, since the cotton quotas, for example, would go into effect on a normal supply, and might result in permanent scarcity instead of an ever normal granary.

Quotas Fixed by Secretary.

The marketing quotas would be fixed by the secretary at a point which, in his opinion, would reduce the total supplies to normal in the following year. All commodities produced in excess of the allotted quotas would have to be stored and sealed on the farms or in approved warehouses.

Penalties would be imposed for marketing of commodities produced in excess of the quotas. The house penalties are 2 cents a pound for cotton and 15 cents a bushel for corn and wheat. The senate penalties are 75 per cent of the selling price for cotton and 25 per cent of the "parity" price for corn and wheat.

"Parity" is definited as a price that would give the farmer a purchasing power in non-agricultural commodities equivalent to the purchasing power of farm commodities from 1909 to 1914.

Loans on Stored Commodities.

Each bill provides for loans on the stored commodities. Under the house bill the loans and their rates would be wholly discretionary with the secretary of agriculture, the commodity credit corporation and the President. The senate bill is wholly discretionary with respect to cotton, but sets up definite rate levels for corn and wheat loans. The loan rate for these commodities would range from 52 per cent of the parity price when the supply exceeded 114 per cent of normal down to 85 per cent of the parity price when the supply was not more than normal.

In addition to the provision for compulsory marketing quotas, each bill revises and extends the existing soil conservation act, under which subsidies for acreage diversion and crop curtailment aggregating 500 million dollars a year are being paid. The house bill authorizes no additional subsidies, no other form of production control.

Similar to Dead AAA.

The senate bill, however, authorizes, in addition to the compulsory marketing quotas, so-called voluntary adjustment contracts similar to those employed by the invalidated AAA. The farmers would agree in these contracts to reduce their acreage according to the regulations of the secretary of agriculture.

The senate bill also provides for subsidy payments in addition to the 500 million dollars in "soil conservation" bounties. It authorizes the appropriation of "such sums as are necessary" to give farmers a "parity" price on their corn, cotton, and wheat. Tobacco, rice, and other agriculture commodities now receiving soil conservation payments would continue to receive these and no more.

However, the senate bill provides that the so-called parity payments on corn, cotton, and wheat shall be prorated on the basis of available funds, so that the farmer would not necessarily receive parity. It is estimated that full parity payments on the three commodities would bring the total cost of the program up to as high as 1 billion 500 million dollars, and congress so far has provided only 500 million. President Roosevelt has demanded additional revenue unless the farm program could be held to that figure.

Plans Dairying Protection.

The "parity" payments authorized for corn, cotton and wheat by the senate bill range from 15 per cent of the parity price when the supply is normal or less up to 30 per cent of the parity price when the supply is 114 per cent or more of normal. As of October, the latest month for which figures are available, the parity prices were: Wheat, $1.175; corn, 85.6 cents, and cotton, 16.5 cents a pound.

Each bill contains a provision, adopted over the opposition of the administration leaders, designed to protect the dairy industry [largest agricultural industry in the country] from new competition. It prohibits the use of land diverted from wheat, corn, etc., for the growing of feed stuff for live stock or poultry for market, or the marketing of their products.

The final important difference between the two measures is the crop insurance title of the senate bill. This is the bill passed by the senate at the last session, setting up a 100 million dollar corporation to administer a crop insurance system for wheat only. The house took no action on the measure at the last session.

First Patient to Use New Iron Lung

Part-Time Occupant

Miss Mary Dee McTaggart, 17 years old, 7234 Myrtle avenue, was the first infantile paralysis victim to use the new, rotating iron lung installed yesterday at the Presbyterian hospital. Miss McTaggart's arms and diaphragm have been paralyzed since last July. After several months in an iron lung, with daily physical therapy, she is now able to spend short intervals outside the respirator. A feature of the rotating respirator is that it enables the patient to change position frequently.

Mattson Kidnap Suspect Is Freed with Apologies

It was cloudy Friday afternoon, and visibility in the loop was low. But two detectives who met Hans Kessling, 32 years old, of Beloit, Wis., thought he resembled an artist's conception of the kidnaper who killed Charles Mattson, 10 years old, at Tacoma, Wash., last December. Kessling was arrested and questioned. Yesterday the police learned he was in Minneapolis at the time of the kidnaping. Kessling was released with apologies.

ROBINSON FLIGHT MYSTERY POINTS TO MEXICO EXIT

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—When careful search of steamship passenger lists failed to reveal their names, federal agents today considered the probability that Donald L. and Ruth N. Robinson, under arrest in Moscow, left for Europe by way of Mexico. Agents also returned to the theory that the couple who call themselves Robinson, known to be an alias, are somehow associated with Trotzkyism and involved in the schism within the communist party.

Reports today that Robinson in reality was Raymond Joseph Healey, red baiter and self styled American Hitler, exploded when Healey was found working in a Chicago department store.

Neither could authorities link the Robinsons with disappearance of Miss Juliet Poyntz, 51 years old, formerly of Omaha, Neb., who has been a communist leader in New York for 17 years. Formerly a Socialist, she went over to the reds in 1917. Miss Poyntz's attorney said she had been missing for seven months, although her apartment and bank account have remained untouched.

DALHOVER, LAST OF BRADY GANG, TO DIE ON APRIL 8

James Dalhover, sole survivor of the Al Brady gang, was sentenced yesterday by Judge Thomas W. Slick in Federal District court at Hammond to die in the electric chair April 8 for the slaying of Paul Minneman, an Indiana state policeman. The punishment was set by a jury Dec. 9, and the execution will take place in the penitentiary at Michigan City.

Dalhover was captured at Bangor, Me., last fall by federal agents who killed Brady and Clarence E. Schaffer Jr. Dalhover is the first federal prisoner ever sentenced to die in the electric chair for murder.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The federal communications commission ordered the National Broadcasting company tonight to submit a copy of Mae West's Adam and Eve broadcast of last Sunday night. Asserting it had received letters protesting the skit was profane and insulting, the commission said it would reserve judgment until it had the facts. The order was contained in a letter from Chairman Frank R. McNinch to Lenox R. Lohr, president of NBC.

EGYPT'S KING MAY OUST CABINET IN FIGHT FOR POWER

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The struggle for power between Egypt's young King Farouk and his premier, Mustapha Nahas Pasha, today threatened to bring dismissal of the Nahas government.

The king's close political adviser, Ali Maher Pasha, said he was making "final" efforts to avoid a complete break. The crisis had been believed averted earlier this week by a compromise on controversial legislation.

The premier's government wants "constitutional safeguard" legislation which would prevent a premier named by Farouk from carrying on without a parliamentary majority unless there were quick general elections.

Cary, my pet:
How's about a little frankness this Christmas? Instead of the sweet little knick-knacks you usually buy me—now, darling, you KNOW I loved them—could I persuade you to whisper to Mr. S. Claus what I REALLY yen for? But definitely! I hear the new Bromfield, The Rains Came, is super-swell! And I'd love to reminisce about New York—remember the fun we had there together—with Imperial City. And after seeing Garbo in "Conquest" I'm all a-twit to read more about the fascinating Walewska and Napoleon in So Great a Man! And, being a glamour gal myself, I'm mad to read Ludwig's Cleopatra, on account of I hear she was quite a woman! Of course, you think I'm too, too definite, but Miss Horn at Kroch's—now SHE knows ALL the types of books I like best. ACRES OF DIAMONDS

By CALEB

PERHAPS no spoken address has ever been delivered more often than the late Russell Conwell's famous Acres of Diamonds. I never heard it delivered, but many years ago I was told the story and often have I heard it mentioned. It has to do with the man in a far-off land who left his home to go in search of wealth. Returning years later to his native abode, he found that he had left behind him—acres of diamonds. He learned that while he searched abroad for wealth, it had all the while been under his feet in his native abode.

Recently we received a letter from a woman who entertained two West Coast friends at luncheon here. They were on their way home from Europe. One of them gave her a very beautiful handwrought sterling pin, set with lapis lazuli. One of the friends explained:

"Everywhere we went abroad, E—— hunted for something that was good enough and that suited you. After walking into every kind of store and shop, we decided we would find nothing just right for you.

"This very morning we were walking through Field's when she saw this pin—your gift that we hunted for all over France, Italy, Belgium, and England.

"We have decided that next time we go to Europe, we will buy gifts for our friends at Field's, where everything is assembled and displayed to advantage from all over the world."

This is a not uncommon experience for people who travel a great deal. Many people tell us after their first trips abroad that they return somewhat disillusioned. "For," they say, "we had presumed that in cities like London and Paris there would be stores like Field's. But there are none."

And that is true.

We were told the other day that in all of England there is no collection of fine English china such as we show in Chicago. Many of our sections present the most extensive collections anywhere.

We do not tell you this in a spirit of boasting. We mention it in the hope that it will lead you to discover new satisfactions in our store which you may have been overlooking. Here at home, we endeavor to have the world's offerings available for you, in better array than a world trip could provide you.

TYPHOON HELPS MOROS UPSET QUEZON'S ARMY

Lost Flyers Rescued, but New Trouble Brews.

BY VICENTE ALBANO PACIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, Dec. 18.—A handful of Mohammedan Filipinos—more popularly known as Moros—have been at their favorite pastime of throwing monkey wrenches again. This time, aided by a typhoon, they threw so large a one that its damage still has not been calculated.

The present difficulties involve the Moros only indirectly and go back to Oct. 6, when President Manuel Quezon ordered the destruction of 200 Moro cottas [combination homes and forts] around Lake Lanao in Lanao province, Mindanao.

Army Well Organized.

At this time the Philippine army was a well organized machine. It had absorbed the constabulary of 6,000 men and had trained some 40,000 regulars and reserves. It had acquired officers from the United States army and had purchased modern equipment, including bombing planes, and had graduated four aviators from its service school.

The campaign to clean out the cottas met with little success, to judge from the number of wounded soldiers sent back from the expedition. So the army embarked on what seemed to have been a mobilization intended to frighten the Moros.

A company of picked troopers was shipped to Lanao, and three army bombers were dispatched. Maj. Gen. Paulino Santos, chief of staf; Col. Fidel Segundo, and various other high officers followed in an army transport plane piloted by Lieut. William Lee, head of the air corps.

Detachment Heads Back.

When it was believed the effects of this display of strength had effectually cowed the Moros, the detachment headed back to Manila.

One of the bombers had been damaged in landing at Mindanao, and had to be left there. The other two and the transport took off from Lanao on Dec. 4. Bad weather forced them down the same day in Oriental Negros and in Cebu the following day.

A typhoon had begun to cross the Visayas Islands from the Pacific, and army headquarters warned Gen. Santos it would be unsafe to continue the flight.

Orders Flight to Continue.

He ordered it continued, however, and the storm forced down two of the bombers, their occupants landing safely. But the transport plane with Gen. Santos, Col. Segundo, and Lieut. Lee vanished in the typhoon.

A frantic search was begun Dec. 7 when the storm subsided, and twenty-four airplanes circled the area, returning to report no sign of the transport. Three days later, however, the pilot of a bomber, flying over the area in which it was believed the missing plane must be, observed three persons frantically wigwaging on a tiny island.

3 Flyers Rescued.

He returned to Manila to report the discovery, and an amphibian was sent to the Island Anirong in the bigger maps, unidentified in others. The castaways were indeed the three officers. Their ship had been forced down by the typhoon, but Lieut. Lee had landed on a short strip of beach.

But the matter was not ended with their return to Manila. There have been rumbles and rumors and talk of legislative investigations and courts martial as a result of the accident. President Quezon has made no statement, but it is known he is not pleased with the turn of events. The search cost an estimated $250,000, and the whole matter—all going back to the recalcitrant Moros—is a source of discomfort.

Princess Constance Pignatelli.

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Whether the former Constance Grenelle Wilcox, Princess Guido Pignatelli I. still is the wife of the Italian nobleman rests in the hands of Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Shientag.

She has asked the justice to set aside the Reno decree the prince obtained last April. She also wants to make the prince contribute to the support of their 9 year old daughter, Marielena. She told Justice Shientag that she once had an income of $12,000 to $15,000 a year, but that now it scarcely is $1,000.

Prince Pignatelli offered no defense. He now is in Czechoslovakia hunting with the princess No. 2, the widowed Mrs. Edward V. Hartford, Atlantic and Pacific Tea company heiress.

Twins with Single Body Alive 6 Weeks in Russia

MOSCOW, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Russian scientists disclosed today that a two-headed baby girl, also described as twins with a single body, had been under observation at the All-Union Institute of Experimental Medicine since birth six weeks ago. Prof. P. Anokhin said the two heads and four arms were attached to a single torso with only two legs. He said only one such case had been reported before. In that case the twins lived only a few years.

Quezon Supporters Win in Philippine Elections

MANILA, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Returns compiled by the interior department today showed Commonwealth President Manuel L. Quezon's Nacionalista party made a clean sweep of all gubernatorial posts in Tuesday's election. The provinces elected 31 new governors and reëlected 13.

DIES OF GUNSHOT WOUNDS.

Jacksonville, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Floyd Riley, 23 years old, died at Our Savior's hospital today, the result of a gunshot wound inflicted accidentally yesterday afternoon on a farm eight miles east of Winchester. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Riley of Chambersburg.

6 KILLED WHEN AUTO RUNS INTO STALLED TRUCK

5 in Family Die in Crash Near La Porte, Ind.

Six persons, including five members of one family, were killed late last night when their automobile crashed into the rear of a stalled motor truck on state road 2, eight miles east of La Porte, Ind.

The victims were Edward Snyder, 603 Ohio street, La Porte; his wife, Velma; three of their five children, Betty Jane, 11 years old, Doris, 9 years old, and Ronald, 5 years old, and Harold Northam, 32 years old, 1143 Lafayette street, South Bend, Snyder's brother-in-law.

Two Children Escape Crash.

Northam had driven to La Porte to take the Snyders to his home for the week-end. Mary Snyder, 14 years old, and her sister Katherine, 12 years old, stayed at home. A few minutes after the others left the auto, driven by Northam, crashed into the truck. On orders of the coroner Sherif Joe Wolf held the truck driver, Jack Wetter of South Bend, for the inquest in bond of $10,000. Wetter said his stalled truck carried warning lights, but deputies said they could find no evidence of the flares.

Hit and Run Victim.

Michael Trcak, 55 years old, 4409 North Francisco avenue, was killed early today by a hit and run car at Ashland avenue and 18th street. George Orloff, 489 Milwaukee avenue, a Yellow Cab chauffeur, pursued the driver for several blocks, but was outdistanced.

Trcak was a subscription salesman for a New York Croatian language newspaper. When he was killed he was carrying a letter written on White House stationery, and signed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's secretary. Trcak evidently had written to Mrs. Roosevelt asking her to help him find work, and the letter was a reply expressing regrets.

Dies of Old Injuries.

Struck by an automobile Nov. 24 in 95th street near South Chicago avenue, Johan Aager Olson, 58 years old, 9850 Avenue H, died of his injuries yesterday in the County hospital.

Joseph Cosentino, 68 years old, 702 South Marshfield avenue, died yesterday in the Mother Cabrini hospital of injuries incurred when he walked against the side of an automobile at Roosevelt road and Ashland avenue.

An unidentified colored man, about 45 years old, was killed last night when he was struck by a hit and run car in South Park avenue at 59th street.

Hurt in Freak Accident.

Raymond Boegen, 38 years old, Bellemead, N. J., may lose his sight as the result of a freak automobile accident yesterday in Leclaire avenue and Irving Park boulevard. His automobile skidded in the street car tracks and crashed into a taxicab. Thrown to the street, Boegen landed face down in a pool of gasoline from the punctured tank of his car. The gasoline became ignited, burning his face.

Melvin Kirschnick, 14 years old, 4337 South Whipple street, was critically injured last night when he was run over by an automobile while coasting on his sled. The accident occurred in front of his home. The driver, Frank Goldeck, 26 years old, 2511 45th place, said he could not avoid the accident. He was not held. The boy is in the Southtown hospital.

Up to 4 p. m. yesterday 1,034 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these, 787 were killed in Chicago, where 21,914 were injured in the same period.

Gunmen Kill 2 Policemen Who Try to Question Them

Cleveland, O., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Two Cleveland policemen were shot and killed tonight when they attempted to examine an automobile carrying four men near an east side gasoline station in a busy night life area.

The patrolmen, Virgil Bayne and Gerald Bode, were walking toward a suspected car to question the occupants when they were met with a burst of gunfire.

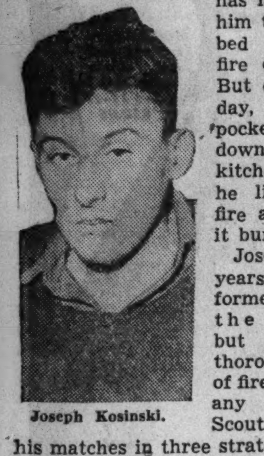
FIREBUG VISITS HIS OLD SCHOOL; LOSS: $10,000

Arrested as He Watches Flames for Thrill.

BY MARCIA WINN.

Joseph Kosinski says he does not like fires. A wild siren in the night has never caused him to leap from bed to join the fire engine trail. But early yesterday, finding his pockets weighted down with 200 kitchen matches, he lit a $10,000 fire and watched it burn.



Joseph Kosinski.

Joseph is 19 years old, and a former inmate of the Bridewell, but he did as thorough a job of fire building as any Eagle Boy Scout. He tossed his matches in three strategic, papery spots, and then ran like mad. Locating the spots was simple, he admitted last night in the Brighton police station, because, after all, he was burning his alma mater, the Seward Elementary school at 4600 South Hermitage avenue.

He Just Happens By.

Not, he added quickly, that his years of labor at Seward had prejudiced him. School was "all right." He finished the eighth grade in 1935, and was glad he did. He just happened to be passing there at 4 a. m. with a stomach full of beer and a pocket full of matches.

"I just wasn't feeling right," he explained. "That's all."

He always carried kitchen matches, anyway, he said, as he smokes roll-your-own cigarets, and when you buy a sack of tobacco for a nickel you can't expect a free packet of safety matches, too. As for the two boxes of safety matches the police found in his pockets when they arrested him as he gazed at his flaming handiwork, why, he supposed he had stolen them.

Gets a Pair of Punchers.

So far as a muggy head would permit him to recall, Joseph thinks he went into the school on a sudden impulse to steal. [A similar impulse, directed toward a private home, landed young Joe in the Bridewell for a year's sentence in June, 1936.]

"All I remember taking in the school," he said, "is a pair of punchers. You know, like street car conductors use. I guess I took some other articles from the desks there. Anyway, they were in my pockets.

"I had to break in a basement window to get in, and I guess I walked around some. I threw some matches in a waste basket in the basement, and then I started a fire under a wood stairway.

Supply Room Third Stop.

"After that I went to the supply room. It's on the first floor and full of papers and books and stuff. It started going fast, though, so I had to get out quick."

He then sauntered casually down the block. Soon fire engines began their screaming rush toward the school. Joseph had never seen so many before. And when enough neighbors had gathered to watch the blazing four story brick building Joseph joined them, standing beside Vincent Garucka of 4607 South Paulina street, whose mother has given him a home since September. [From June to September he was in a CCC camp at Ontario, Wis., but resigned. "It wasn't any fun."]

Joseph doesn't like fires. But the police still call him a firebug.

YOUTH CAN SEE THROUGH EYE HE GOT AS GIFT

New Orleans, La., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—Frank Chabina, 19 years old, saw the light today—through the "gift eye" he obtained in a rare operation ten days ago.

"See anything, Frank?" asked a young surgeon.

"Why, you've got two fingers up there," was the reply.

The surgeon said it appeared that the operation—transplantation of the disc of the cornea—had been successful.

Chabina's left eye was seared by lime dust two years ago, and the injury left scar tissue which began menacing the eyeball.

The youth became a patient in Charity hospital, and there he met John Wesley Amos, 68, whose failing left eye had a sound cornea.

One day Amos heard that the youth's sight could be saved only by the transplantation of the cornea disc. He summoned the surgeon and said:

"Frank's been mighty good to me. If my eye will do him any good, he's welcome to it. I'm an old man and won't be needing it much longer."

The surgeon, who had performed three similar operations successfully, made the transplantation Dec. 8.

Mrs. Vera Daukskis, 27, one of ten persons seized in hunt for parolee suspected of being gunman who battled police.

FOURTH VICTIM OF FIRE IN MATCH FACTORY IS DEAD

The fourth victim of the fire at the Superior Match company plant at 60 West Superior street died early today in the Passavant hospital. She was Miss Annabelle Murphy, 19 years old, 5257 Aberdeen street.

The three others died Friday morning. They were Miss Jean Lasky, 19 years old, 2143 North Austin boulevard; Miss Anna Monde, 21 years old, 733 West 17th place, and Miss Catherine Terleski, 19 years old, 819 Cleveland avenue. The fire occurred Thursday morning. The girls were employés of the company. Four other employés also were burned.

FIND EX-CONVICT DEAD OF POLICE BULLET WOUNDS

Identified as Fugitive Who Battled Detectives.

An escaped convict, said by police to be one of two desperadoes who shot two detectives and two citizens at North, Damen, and Milwaukee avenues in a gun battle Thursday night, was found dead of a bullet wound in his sister's flat at 6204 South Park avenue last night.

He was William S. Thomas, 29 years old, 922 East 62d street, a former southern Illinois miner, who escaped from the Joliet prison honor farm in May, 1935, and had since been a fugitive. He was serving a sentence for robbery.

Killed by Police Bullet.

The bullet that killed Thomas came from a police gun, but because the hoodlums in the North avenue shooting were involved in another gun fight with police a few hours later, police were uncertain early today in which encounter he was shot.

The death of Thomas and discovery of his body came while police were seeking the two gunmen. Thomas' identity was said to have been known during the search, but his name was withheld. Police revealed only that they were hunting for John Wolfe, a paroled convict from the prison for the criminal insane at Menard. Ten persons were in custody last night during the inquiry, among them Wolfe's wife, her mother, and Mrs. Vera Daukskis, 27 years old, 1934 South Union avenue, who was questioned to ascertain if she was the woman seen fleeing in a taxicab with the wounded gunman.

Police Raid Home.

During their search for the hoodlums police raided Thomas' home in 62d street, but found no one there. Blood stains indicated the previous presence of a wounded man. The first definite clew to the whereabouts came at 9 o'clock last night when Mrs. Florence Brown, 6204 South Park avenue, called for police aid, saying a sick man was in her home.

When police arrived more than two hours later they found Thomas dead. Examination revealed a bullet wound in the left part of the abdomen. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Juanita Thomas, the gunman's widow, who is 27 years old, were taken into custody. Mrs. Thomas admitted, police said, that her husband told her he had been shot by police. She had taken him to his sister's home for aid.

Chief Deputy of Detectives Walter Storms said Thomas was one of the two men sought for the police shootings.

In the first shooting, in North avenue, Detectives Patrick Griffin and Fred Crowley and the two civilians were shot. In the second affray, at 542 Cullerton street, police wounded a suspect who came up in a car. He escaped with a woman friend.

The search for Wolfe was intensified this morning. Wolfe, originally sentenced for robbery from Marion county, was paroled in May, 1936, to H. W. Beegle, a Chicago manufacturer, and later to Herman Lisse of Kincaid, Ill. Wolfe subsequently violated his parole.

BOY KILLED BY FALLING BRICK.

Dearborn, Mich., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—His nose pressed against a store window, where he was watching a toy Santa Claus, David Mayott, who would have been 8 years old on Christmas day, was crushed to death last night by brick coping which fell upon him from the roof of the building.

U. S. JURY FINDS ALL 36 GUILTY IN BOMBING CASE

Court Orders New Bonds for Defendants.

Judge Briggle, writs of supersedeas will be sought to free the defendants on bond before Christmas. The men convicted are:

Anthony J. Chunes, William Crompton, John H. Fancher, Anton Victor Gent, Arthur Gramlich, Joseph Laverso, Edward Lee, Daniel Mataya, Daniel J. McGill, Anthony Profeta and his father, Salvador, and John Schneider, all of Springfield.

Jess R. Anderson, Earl R. Evans, sherif of Saline county; George Heine, Harry Irving Lowe, Carl Maddox, and Harry Melton, all of Harrisburg.

Jess Chandler, John Costello, Sam Doah, Henry Johnson, and William Henry Thompson, of Eldorado.

John E. Tatman, John Taylor, and Russell Wagner, of Gillespie.

Andrew Newman of Jacksonville.
Anthony Banca of Blue Mound.
William Bennett of Harco.
Charles Rudolph of Herrin.
John Stewart of Detroit, Mich.

Five Cases Dismissed.

There were originally 41 defendants in the case, but five of them were dismissed at the close of the government's case on Dec. 1. William Keck of Belleville was granted a mistrial because of illness, and Burrell Warren of Bluford, Herman Stoval of Alton, James Harrison of Johnson City, and Ralph Bridges of Gillespie were freed on directed verdicts of not guilty.

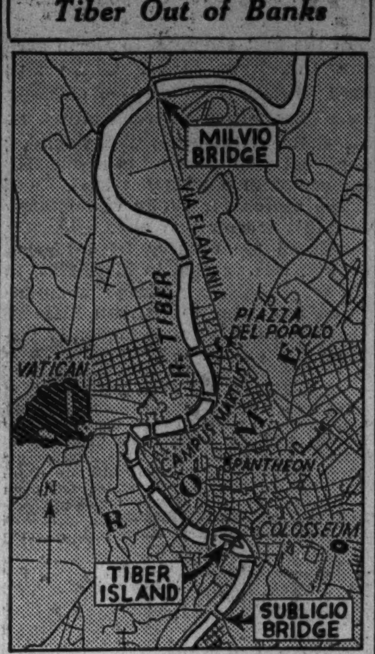
The two indictments listed 36 railroad and mine bombings, 7 attempted bombings and one railway bridge burning, but the government undertook to prove only about twenty of these crimes. On the indictment charging conspiracy to obstruct interstate and foreign commerce the men convicted face maximum penalties of 1 year in the penitentiary and a $5,000 fine on each count. On the mail conspiracy indictment, the maximum penalty is 2 years in prison and $10,000 fine.

The union bloodshed, which formed the basis of the trial goes back to 1932 when a faction of the U. M. W. A. refused to accept Lewis' leadership in his agreement with the Illinois Coal operators to a wage reduction from a basic pay of $6.10 a day to $5. Lewis signed the contract after a miners' election in which he said the ballots had been stolen and the result could not be announced.

The Progressive group, organized at Gillespie in September, 1932, rebelled at Lewis' dictatorial action and asserted that a count of the ballots would have shown the miners had repudiated any wage reduction agreement.

Then followed a period when the Progressives negotiated their own wage agreements with individual mine owners and clashes between the rival unions were frequent. Bombings occurred in the central and southern counties and 21 Progressives were slain, allegedly for opposing the U. M. W. A. The dynamitings added to the wave of terror, which did not stop until government agents began an investigation in August, 1935. The indictments were a result of this investigation.

Tiber Out of Banks



The city of Rome and rural areas along the famous River Tiber watch flood waters recede slowly after rains sent the river to highest stage in 67 years.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Reports from Rome indicated that city waiting anxiously today to see whether the next 24 hours would bring continued sunshine, as predicted, and speed the recession of flood waters in the Tiber river valley. The river crest dropped slowly today from its 55 foot 7 inch stage, the highest in 67 years. Large sections along the banks are inundated.

Soup kitchens provided food for thousands driven from their homes. Trastevere, an area of workers' homes, was especially hard hit. Troops and workmen labored to keep leaky sandbag barricades in order.

Officials feared for a time that the famous Sublicio bridge, where Horatius fought in 507 B. C., might be washed down. Arches of the Ponte Milvio, built in 109 B. C., also were endangered. Boats stood ready to take patients from a hospital on Tiber island after the bridge to it was closed.

PICKETING RUNS RIOT; NEW YORK POLICE SHACKLED

Public Compels Feeble Corrective Measures.

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—With little to fear from a police force handcuffed with restrictions decreed by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, organized labor's imagination has run riot in New York during the last year and the picketing racket has grown out of knee pants and become Big Business. Few streets in the five borough are without their picket lines these days and long suffering New Yorkers are pretty weary of the whole business.

Pickets are to be seen parading on the pavements, lying on the sidewalks, sitting on stoops, plodding along the curbstones.

Public opinion has risen up to force some feeble corrective measures against this expanding mode of labor coercion, but picketing is now intrenched on a business basis.

Court Deals Heavy Blow.

Initial step in the direction of curbing the epidemic was a presentment of the November grand jury in Brooklyn, expressing a sympathetic interest in organized labor's hopes but citing, pointedly ,that "the abuse of the picketing system is slowly but surely alienating labor's friends." The grand jury said it believed that the majority of the laboring classes were law abiding citizens and that "they may have become the victims of unscrupulous leaders who are sacrificing the many to the few."

Another blow at the picketing racket was the decision of the Court of Appeals in Albany, less than two weeks ago, holding it illegal to picket the place of business of any one who is not a party to a labor dispute for the purpose of coercing the owner to take sides in a controversy in which he has no interest. The court ruled that any secondary strike action must be peaceful and make plain the cause of controversy.

The majority opinion condemned the lie down, mass picketing, and sidewalk blockading and declared these should be suppressed by police.

But in New York City the police wear shackles imposed on them by the mayor. Hands off labor disputes till after the election was the city hall edict before Nov. 2, and with the election six weeks past the same orders largely stand.

Favorite Tramping Ground.

Runaway picketing continues to flourish, harassing its victims and the other millions who can't avoid the consequences of sidewalk disorders, trafic tieups and business impediments. This was obvious once again last Wednesday night when 100 men and women pickets returned to a favorite tramping ground, an Automat restaurant in the heart of the throbbing Times Square theatrical district on Broadway. They clashed with police, imperilled pedestrians, halted business in the entire block, and tied up all trafic for several blocks at the height of the evening.

The Automat pickets ripped the doors off a patrol wagon before forty-nine of them were eventually carted away; scratched, kicked and elbowed police and tore the badge from a police captain's jacket and smashed it on the pavement, meanwhile giving the other policemen a thorough working over.

Of those arrested in the Automat strike, 80 went to jail. The toll: Sixty male pickets were sentenced to 30 days in jail and one to 90 days; twelve women pickets were given 20 days each, with alternative fines of $50; seven others received varying sentences. All were members of the Cafeteria Employés' union.

Picketing is evolving into a profession here, and the pickets today, in the majority, have no torch to bear. They are workers by the hour. Many of them are not union members or striking employés. They're just pickets.

Police Have Their Troubles.

Meantime the police have their troubles, too, and can't do much about them. They have had to assimilate a lot of punishment, vocal and physical, in the last year. Police have been severly injured in fights between shipyard pickets, spat on my pickets who can't read the signs they carry, blinded by black pepper, pushed around by WPA rioters, mocked and sworn at by sit-downers and lie-downers.

Picketing—at 30 cents to $1 an hour for professionals, depending on union treasury status; or 20 per cent of former salary for striking employés—has reached its full bloom under these conditions.

Pickets marched in front of Tammany hall because a district leader selected by the sachems didn't meet with approval. They picketed a cemetery in Jersey. Grave diggers in Brooklyn sat down in protest against layoffs while bodies awaited burial and had to be stored in a vault.

An Episcopal church on Long Island was picketed on successive Sundays because—the signs said—nonunion labor was used in constructing a parish hall.

FRENCH POLICE RAID VICINITY OF MURDER VILLA

Demand Identity Papers of All Residents.

BY ALEX SMALL.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Police today made a raid in the vicinity of the murder villa of Eugene Weidmann, German exile who has admitted killing Jean de Koven, American dancer, and six other persons. The raid was spurred by revelations of Weidmann's activities and newspaper demands for stricter surveillance of the several million foreigners in France.

More than 300 police, including twenty commissaires—precinct captains—and forty inspectors participated in the raid. The entire district in the suburb of St. Cloud was surrounded, and every house was entered with a demand for identity papers from every occupant.

Inhabitants Frightened.

The streets looked for a time as if military law had been established, which really was the case for a few hours.

One of the reasons for the raid was the consternation of the inhabitants, who have been unable to sleep since the revelation of Weidmann's crimes, and who have been clamoring for what the French call a "police cleansing."

Roger [Scarface] Million, arrested as an accomplice of Weidmann, and said to be head of a kidnaping gang in which Weidmann operated, was questioned by the examining magistrate and the evening newspapers predicted that despite his repudiation of what he calls "that monster Weidmann" he will share Weidmann's fate under the guillotine.

Unable to Explain Gun.

Million has been unable to explain away the fact that Roger Leblond, one of Weidmann's victims, was killed with a gun of the caliber Million possessed. Weidmann's gun was of another caliber.

In the meantime Anna Karrer, one of the women who disappeared and who was believed to be one of the victims of the Weidmann-Million gang, has reappeared, declaring she never knew Weidmann.

Foreigners in France are indignant at the idea they may have to be finger-printed—a measure suggested by the press for better surveillance. The British especially are resentful of this proposal to make more difficult their present easy entrance into France, asserting that the number of criminals they contribute to France's underworld is negligible.

Third Son Born

Countess Edda Ciano, daughter of Mussolini, who gave birth to her third son yesterday in Rome.

ROME, Dec. 18. — (AP) — Countess Edda Ciano, Premier Benito Mussolini's daughter and stanch supporter of his ideas—including his "big family" policy—today gave birth to her third son. His name is Marzio.

The overjoyed Duce received the news from the father, Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italy's foreign minister.

There is little doubt that Mussolini's eldest child is a political influence in Italy. Her husband's elevation to the foreign ministry after only a brief diplomatic and military service was attributed widely to the persuasion of Il Duce's daughter.

But her first job is that of mother. Her other sons, Fabrizio, 6, and Raimondo, 3, are getting an early start in swimming and skiing as well as Fascist loyalty under her tutelage.

ITALY RAPS H. C. L. WITH STRICTER PRICE CONTROL

ROME, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Italy was embarked today on a program of more rigid control of the prices of necessities to check the rising cost of living. The central corporative committee voted the new regulations after an exhortation yesterday by Premier Mussolini. Il Duce told the committee that "economic discipline" to protect the purchasing power of the masses was indispensable to Italy's program for economic self-sufficiency.

FIRE DESTROYS SAWMILL.

Bemidji, Minn., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Fire destroyed the sawmill of the Bemidji Wood Products company at noon today with loss estimated at $75,000. Twenty-five men working in the building escaped without injury.

PROMISE QUICK TEST IF BOOKIE LAW IS PASSED

Mayor to Push Action; Fee of $5,000 Planned.

Mayor Kelly said yesterday that if the city council passes the proposed ordinance to license brokers to receive and transmit money intended for betting at race tracks, the measure will be rushed to the Illinois Supreme court for a complete test of the city's power to enact the legislation. The proposed license fee has been tentatively set at $5,000.

His statement concerning the Supreme court was made because of rumores said to have been traced to opponents of the proposal, that the administration is looking forward to some form of legal trickery in connection with the ordinance. One report was that efforts will be made to sidetrack any court attack on the ordinance so that the newly licensed brokers can continue operating despite drawn out litigation.

Exhaustive Study Made.

"The finance committee," said the mayor, "has made an exhaustive study of this whole field including the legal questions. Its members have been advised by the most competent counsel available and they are convinced there is no violation of the constitution or the statutes in licensing brokers.

"The broker would not wager against the customer's money. He would merely send that money to the track to be paid into the pari-mutual system authorized and licensed by the state, the state receiving a substantial share of the proceeds of the system.

Quick Test Promised.

"If the council thought the plan illegal it would not pass the ordinance. If I were advised that it was illegal, or if I even thought it was illegal, I wouldn't sign it.

"If the ordinance is passed and goes into effect it will be up to the administration to see that it is enforced properly. Instead of delaying a final test of its validity, which would lead to uncertainty, turmoil, and inadequate enforcement, the administration, confident of the outcome, naturally would lose no time in rushing the first case possible to the state Supreme court.

"If there is public demand for it, I am willing to see the ordinance go to a city advisory referendum in the primary next April, and let the ordinance stand or fall on the result. I'll help gather the signatures for the referendum petition."

State Paid Nearly Million.

As if in answer to Gov. Horner, the strongest opponent of the licensing plan, the finance committee's subcommittee which studied legalized betting systems in Omaha and in California, added to the report of their observations a tabulation showing that the state of Illinois received a total of $960,903 from the six race tracks in the Chicago area this year. Of this amount $517,403 was the state's percentage from the pari-mutuals and the rest was from daily license fees paid to the state.

"The state of Illinois," said the report, "is thus shown as a partner of the race track, and its share of something slightly less than a million dollars is almost equal to the purses paid at the tracks."

Three aldermen, George D. Kells [28th], William A. Rowan [10th], and Frank Keenan [49th], signed the report.

MINISTER CONVICTED OF SLAYING WOMAN BEGINS LIFE TERM

Pittsfield, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The Rev. C. E. Newton, convicted of the hammer slaying of Mrs. Dennis Kelly and sentenced to life in prison, was taken to the Menard penitentiary today by Sherif Wendell Johnson. Since his conviction Nov. 24, the pastor has insisted he is innocent of the slaying, and attorneys have said an appeal will be taken.

Mrs. Kelly, described as a loyal friend and devout church worker, was slain at Paris, Mo., and her body was thrown into the Mississippi river. Newton was arrested July 14, the day after her body was found.

Since conviction the preacher, who is 51 years old, has expressed eagerness to be taken to the penitentiary. Levi Collins, starting a one to ten year term for hog theft, was taken with the pastor to Menard.

Paris Bakers to Bake Again; Stay-in Strike of 2,500 Ends

PARIS, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Arbitration of wages between bakery operators and employés today ended a stay-in strike involving about 2,500 workers. The bakery stay-in accounted for half the strikers in a new wave of disputes in several industries.

ROMEO THRILLS OPERA CROWD AT FINAL GALA SHOW

Performance of Season's "Finds" Exquisite.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

As if to display its most precious new wares in the smallest possible compass of space and time, the Chicago City Opera company last night elected to include the short second act of Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" in the gala final program of its 1937 subscription season. Thus a huge Civic Opera house audience enjoyed one more opportunity to watch three of the major discoveries of the year in action.

These major discoveries are Elen Dosia, Greek soprano; her French tenor husband, André Burdino, and the Russian conductor, Jacques Samossoud. Utter strangers to vulgarity and practitioners of an art of the most patrician variety, the members of this lordly trio united their talents in a performance which absolutely requires that the superlatives be shaken around a bit this morning.

Conclusion Exquisite.

You will live through many a season without hearing a more exquisitely shaped phrase than the one which concluded this act of "Romeo." The shapers were Messieurs Burdino and Samossoud. And that balcony will be old and creaky before it bears the weight of a more polished, fragile, and vocally and histrionically lovely Juliet than the Elen Dosia who sang her wistful music from its height last evening.

The cause of sociological ballet, if there is such a thing, was furthered last night by the première of "An American Pattern." Intended to depict the struggle of the individual, in this case a young wife with ideas, against the standardizing influences of her environment, this provocative new work is a product of the talents of Ruth Page and Bentley Stone [choreography], Jerome Moross [music], and Nicholas Remisoff [scenery and costumes]. It was presented by Miss Page and the opera company ballet, with Albert Goldberg conducting.

Ranks High as Ballet Work.

In its pat caricature of important types, its perverse originality of choreography, music, scenery, and costumes, "An American Pattern" ranks among the most winning efforts of its creatress and her collaborators. A nervous, giddy little piece, designed to mirror a nervous, giddy world, it was performed as nervously and giddily as the most exacting specialist in this sort of thing could demand.

Miss Page herself took the lead, miming the ever seeking wife through her disillusioning encounters, with the gigolo, the banker, the mystic, and the more futile type of social worker.

All of this was preceded by the second act of "Rigoletto" [Lane, Bentonelli, Czaplicki] and followed by the corresponding chapter of "Madame Butterfly" [Mason, Paggi, Czaplicki]. The afternoon was given over to a highly successful repetition of "Rosenkavalier," in which the light and beautifully calculated touch of Richard Strauss seemed hardly more important in the rarely lovely finished product than the work of such performers as Stueckgold, Lehmann, Claire, List, and Weber. This is creative interpretation of a high order.

Post-Season Performances.

Although the seven week 1937 subscription series is over there are to be post-season performances to keep the Civic Opera house active for some time. The first is due tonight, when "Rigoletto" will serve as vehicle for the debut of Josephine La Placa, 18 year old resident soprano. An "Aida," in which the title rôle and the part of Amonasro are to go to colored singers, comes next Sunday. A Jepson-Schipa "Martha" will see the old year out.

Rhodes Candidates

Two Princeton university students were chosen as the Illinois candidates for Rhodes scholarships by the Illinois Rhodes scholarship committee at the University of Chicago last night.

They are Jere W. Patterson, 20 years old, 60 East Scott street, and Thomas R. McMillen, also 20 years old, of Decatur, Ill.

Patterson and McMillen will compete at Indianapolis, Ind., tomorrow for two of the four Rhodes scholarships available to this area—Illinois, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, and Wisconsin. Each state will send two candidates, who are entered according to their home state, not their university. The winners go to Oxford university in England.

● The fortunate person who finds this lamp by his Christmas tree will be doubly grateful. For this is a lamp that serves two purposes. Its English bronze finish and bell-shaped shade make it an attractive floor lamp that will harmonize perfectly with the furnishings of any living room.

For lighting the bridge table, reading chair, or piano, a touch of the finger swings the double arms out as much as 17 inches from the base. And its I. E. S. diffused light makes seeing easier and more comfortable.

The shade is hand-tailored in eggshell or sand novelty crepe with white satin I. E. S. approved lining. Hand-sewed trimming in champagne and brown.

To cover interest and other costs, a somewhat higher price is charged for Lamps sold on deferred payments

Open Evenings Until Christmas

MR. S. CLAUS HAS A VERY BUSY DAY AROUND CHICAGO

Christmas Spirit Spreads Throughout City.

Santa Claus abandoned his reindeers yesterday, as unusually early calls were made for his services. With several Christmas parties occurring during the day, and many others scheduled for this week, he caught a southbound train and arrived in Chicago in time to distribute presents to thousands of waiting youngsters.

The northland visitor faces a busy week. While yesterday's parties were in progress, tons of food for special dinners and truckloads of gifts were being carried into hospitals, orphanages, charitable institutions, and jails, and plans were being completed for holiday parties.

Goes to Work at Once.

Mr. Claus arrived at the Union station and immediately took charge of a party for employés of children of the Milwaukee road. He was welcomed by the Bensenville boys and girls band and the Milwaukee road choral club. American Legion members served as marshals and assisted him in distributing gifts to more than 1,500 children.

A short time later he dashed to the Medinah Temple, 610 North Wabash avenue, to greet nearly 15,000 children of employés of the Commonwealth Edison company. A few moments later he slipped away to keep an appointment at the Congress hotel where 600 employés and their families, fêted by the hotel's management, awaited his coming.

Chimp in Charge at Zoo.

At Lincoln Park zoo, Skippy the Chimp was a swaggering Kris Kringle. Costumed in red suit, and long, white whiskers, he distributed simian goodies to the 75 inhabitants of the primate house. His gifts to them all were unvaried—large, extra portions of grapes, lettuce and celery wrapped gaily in red paper.

Blue Island high school student choristers, singing in behalf of the 31st annual sale of Christmas seals, sponsored by the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, gave a concert of carols at noon yesterday at the corner of State and Madison streets. They were directed by George Bishop.

Plans for Yuletide celebration were announced for public institutions. At St. Vincent's orphanage, there will be a large tree on every floor, a turkey dinner party, and gifts for every child.

Nurses to Distribute Gifts.

A nurse will distribute gifts to the children in Cook county hospital, Dr. Ole C. Nelson, assistant warden announced. A chicken dinner will be served patients, with sweets for children.

A roast chicken dinner for Christmas day, religious services, and caroling by religious groups have been planned for the county jail. In addition to the gift of freedom to prisoners convicted of disorderly conduct and misdemeanors, who will be pardoned on Christmas eve by Mayor Kelly, a chicken dinner, fruits, and gifts of tobacco will be given Bridewell prisoners. A tree will stand in the jail yard.

Patients well enough will be allowed to leave the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium on Christmas eve, to return the day after Christmas.

At the Juvenile home a group of children will appear in a concert Christmas morning. The story of the Christ child will be told in pageant Friday evening when gifts will be distributed.

Special services will be held in the State Industrial Home for the Blind, the Marine hospital, and at Edward Hines Jr. Veterans hospital. Toys will be sent to children of Hines' patients who have families, and boxes of clothing dispatched to the dependents of those in need.

POSTOFFICE SET FOR BIG FLOOD OF CHRISTMAS MAIL

Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen announced yesterday that the Chicago postoffice and its branches will remain closed Christmas day except for limited service in the main office in the United States courthouse. Two mail collections will be made in the city.

The postmaster estimated that 250,000,000 cards and letters and 32,000,000 parcels will be handled from Dec. 15 to 25. Sixteen thousand employés, one-fourth of whom are extra help, are handling the Christmas mail at the main postoffice. For deliveries and pickups 1,200 vehicles are being used.

Chicago Chinese to Have Bonfire of Jap Goods Today

Chinese merchants of Chicago will have a bonfire of Japanese goods at 2:30 p. m. today in a lot at 22d street and Wentworth avenue as a protest against the Japanese invasion of China. The merchandise will come from Chinese shops.

Sues for $270,000

Dorothy Dunbar Lawson.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The former Dorothy Dunbar, one time movie star, brought suit in District court today to establish her right to approximately $270,000 in trust funds which she said were due her from the estate of one of her husbands, Thomas Bucklin Wells II. of Minneapolis.

Wells died Dec. 4, 1928, while returning from Liberia, Africa, where he had been connected with a rubber company. He and Miss Dunbar had married after a romance in Hollywood several years previously. She is a former wife of Max Baer, the boxer.

The plaintif, now known as Dorothy Dunbar Wells Lawson, named as defendants Frederick Brown Wells, her former husband's father; Mary Wells Staples, his sister; Frederick Brown Wells Jr. and Frank H. P. Wells, his brothers, and the First National Bank and Trust company.

The former actress contends that the defendants by misrepresentation induced her to sign waivers of her interest in the trusts.

6 IN FULL DRESS PICKET SHOW OF PRINCETON CLUB

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Six young men in full dress picketed the Princeton university Triangle club show, "Fun de Fol," at the Hudson theater at curtian time tonight in a campus querrel between the drama club and the Tiger, Princeton's humor magazine.

A crowd gathered and a mounted policeman was busy maintaining trafic as the pickets paraded, bearing picket signs with such legends as: "This Is Not a Right Triangle" and "The Triangle Club Is Not Square."

"It's not the principle," a spokesman said. "It's the money. In past years a special edition of the Tiger has been sold at the Triangle club performance. This year the magazine published some things the Triangle people didn't like and so they barred it. We thought this was tough, because we had printed 500 extra copies."

Two young women joined their escorts on the picket line before the six dispersed.

PIANIST AND HIS EX-WIFE AGREE ON GIRLS' CARE

Roy F. Bargy, pianist and music arranger for the Paul Whiteman orchestra, and his divorced wife, Mrs. Gretchen Bargy of the Plaza hotel, agreed yesterday in the court of Judge John J. Lupe on a program for custody of their two daughters. The girls, Jeanne, 16 years old, and Patricia, 13 years old, will spend half their Christmas holidays with their mother here and the other half with Bargy in California. They are then to return to a school in Fort Worth, Tex., where they were placed by their father. Mrs. Bargy had protested earlier that he rhusband violated a court order by sending the girls, who had been awarded her in a divorce proceeding, to Texas. Bargy retorted with a cross-petition in which he disputed the mother's fitness to care for them.

10,000 Crowd Auto License Bureau to Get 1938 Plates

More than 10,000 motorists crowded the branch office of the state automobile license bureau at 120 South Ashland avenue yesterday to obtain their 1938 state license plates. Stanley R. Kosinski, chief clerk, estimated that 40,000 sets of plates have been issued since the office was opened last Wednesday. The deadline for securing plates has been set for Jan. 1. Kosinski announced his office would be open from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. daily except Sunday.

Police Send Woman and 2 Men Back to Pennsylvania

Two men and a woman captured Friday at 6140 University avenue were started back to Pennsylvania yesterday, where the two men admitted they are under indictment for some twenty offenses, most of them for safe breaking. The men are Clyde Cobaugh and Harry Kent, 33 and 35 years old, and the woman is Rose King, 21 years old.

CHRISTMAS TREE ORIGIN IS HIDDEN DEEP IN LEGEND

Early Christians Avoided Rite as Pagan.

BY DORIS LOCKERMAN.

Half a million evergreen trees will glimmer this week in Chicagoland as decorative symbols of Christmas. Festooned with colored trinkets and laced with lights, the Christmas tree has long been accepted as a part of the festive celebration.

Yet for three hundred years after the birth of Christ churchmen refrained from any kind of celebration on Christmas. They particularly avoided use of a Christmas tree, believing it a pagan symbol.

Origin Lost in Time.

The origin of the Christmas tree custom is obscure. In a collection of charming legends Dr. Donald Bond, instructor in English at the University of Chicago, quotes authorities who claim its source for France, Scandinavia, Egypt, England and Germany.

Only one legend connects the Christ child with the Christmas tree. The story goes back to the manger at Bethlehem. Trees arrived from all over the world to do homage to the divine Child. These included small fir, which attracted little attention. But suddenly, says the legend, star after star fell upon it until it shone with the brilliancy of 1,000 heavenly lights.

Trace Source to Alsace.

Germany is commonly believed to have introduced the decorated tree, since Germany emigrants brought the customs to America in 1843.

But whether its origin be pagan or Christian, the Christmas tree custom has developed a business of large proportions. About 111,000,000 electric tree bulbs are sold in America every year.

WPA TO CONTINUE RECONDITIONING COURT RECORDS

H. K. Seltzer, Chicago works progress administration director, announced yesterday that Washington WPA officials have approved the continuation of two projects involving the rehabilitation of records of more than 1,000,000 items in the Superior court and coroner's offices.

The program calls for transcribing, reconditioning, cataloging, and indexing old records, and will take a year to complete, he said.

He said that at present the old files of the two offices are in disorder and not properly cross indexed.

YULE CONCERTS FOR SHOPPERS BEGIN TOMORROW

Loud Speakers Carry Music of W-G-N.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Beginning tomorrow a week of Christmas music originating in the studios of W-G-N will be heard in the near north side territory surrounding Tribune Tower and on State street in Chicago's loop district through huge public address system speakers. The programs will be aired on the speaker systems from 5:15 to 6:15 p. m. each evening. Parts of each day's program will be broadcast by W-G-N and the Mutual network.

This is the sixth consecutive year that Christmas concerts have been presented by W-G-N. Loud speakers, audible for several blocks, have been mounted on Tribune Tower to flood the nearby streets with the music. On State street, with the coöperation of the State street council, additional public address speakers have been installed to carry the music into the loop.

Widely known artists, choirs, and the great W-G-N concert orchestra will be presented on the programs. All of the music will be of a holiday and sacred character most of which is well known to all music lovers. The choirs invited to participate were selected from a list of several hundred singing organizations.

The week's holiday musical will be climaxed on Christmas morning when the Chicago Civic Choral society singers under the direction of William F. Mullen will render the famous Bethlehem Oratorio by Maunders. The choruses and artists who will appear on the evening programs are:

FRANCE'S ALLIES ALL SING SWEET PROMISES, BUT—

That's About All Delbos Got on European Tour.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos today ended a nineteen day tour of France's central European allies with a suitcase full of promises.

When he returns to Paris tomorrow after visiting Poland, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, and Czechoslovakia, after making thirty speeches, attending twenty-four banquets, and traveling 6,000 weary miles, he will bring two conclusions:

1. Franco-German rapprochement is the key to Europe's peace.

2. Closer economic relations and better every day political relations between the four countries and Germany cannot wait any longer on their political agreements with France.

Finds Allies Wavering.

In brief, Delbos' series of talks showed that while France's allies integrally maintain their alliances, they are looking for commercial understandings with Germany as a practical necessity of life—and if either obligation is to give way it will be the alliances.

Basing his trip on a detailed conversation between the heads of the British and French governments, Delbos sought to bring Poland and the three little Entente nations into a new Europpean collective security system.

He had to deal with a Poland sandwiched between Germany and Russia, a Czechoslovakia with a German minority of 3,000,000, and a Rumania and Jugo-Slavia linked to Germany and Italy by better trade relations.

Fails in Polish Mission.

Delbos failed at the outset of his trip to bring closer relations between France's Polish and Russian allies. Poland, he was told, must continue to walk the diplomatic fence.

In Czechoslovakia representatives of the German minority told Delbos better French-German relations were the best means of solving their problem. Germany insists upon the right to extend Nazi influence among these Germans in central Europe's greatest armament making country— a nation Germany insists is leagued closely with communism.

Both Rumania and Jugo-Slavia refused to consider guaranteeing military support for Czechoslovakia in case of German attack. They pointed to their huge trade with Germany as a practical reason for not wishing to offend Berlin.

All France's allies told Delbos they would march side by side with France if war comes, but until then they must march economically with Germany.

Begin New Laramie Ave. Bus Service Tomorrow

Bus service on the new Laramie avenue route, extending from North avenue to Harrison street, will be started at 5 a. m. tomorrow by the Chicago Surface Lines. What the Working Girl Should Eat

This seems like a lot of food, but according to survey in New York it's what the average working girl should consume in a year for adequate nourishment.

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The average working girl, 1937-'38 streamline model, may appear frail and sylphlike, but look at the amount of food she should consume in a year:

184 pounds of flour, bread, and cereals.

137 pounds of potatoes.

72 pounds of tomatoes and citrus fruit.

176 pounds of other vegetables and fruits, including dried ones.

42 pounds of sugars.

Those foods, or their equivalent, plus tea or coffee "for pleasure if not for nourishment."

In the face of that, said Miss Frieda Miller, director of the division of women in industry of the New York state department of labor, it isn't surprising that the working girl must spend at least $7.28 a week to eat if she lives alone, and at least $5.70 a week if she lives with her family and pays her proportionate share for the food and its preparation.

"This, we feel, is the minimum on which a working girl in New York state can be assured adequate nourishment at the current price levels," said Miss Miller after directing a seven month survey of working women's needs.

Annually the minimum adequate food budget would be $378.53 for the lone working girl, and $296.07 for the girl who lives at home.

Honor 2 Nurses Tomorrow for 25 Years at Sanitarium

Miss Amelia Peterson and Miss Ida Benson will be honored by the women's auxiliary of the Birchwood sanitarium at a tea there tomorrow afternoon in recognition of twenty-five years of service on the sanitarium nursing staf. Edgar B. Baumann, president of the board of directors, will award them silver pins. Miss Benson was the first nurse at the sanitarium.

RUSSIA LAUNCHES DRIVE TO BOLSTER FAILING INDUSTRY

New Five Year Plan Will Begin with New Year.

MOSCOW, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Railroad and industrial workers today urged increased output as the major aim of the third soviet five year plan to be started with the new year.

In a challenge published in the soviet press, the workers said January would be the "Stalin month of Stakhanov records," linking the name of the soviet's dictator with that of the coal miner who devised a stepped-up production system.

The government is trying to revive its faltering industrial system with banners, badges and honor rolls as the second five year plan merges into the third.

All Plants to Compete.

With the slogan of "Socialist competition," the banners and certificates are being tried out as rewards for increased production in the machine building and heavy industries.

Coal mines, oil refineries, electric plants, chemical, copper, nickel, gold, iron ore and coke works, automobile factories and allied plants all are competing for the red banners of industrial leadership.

A special badge is awarded factory managers and Stakhanovites [shock workers] for "distinguished service" in increasing the production of labor and a certificate of honor is awarded other outstanding workers.

Industrial Production Lags.

The official press has complained of the industrial lag and the failure of some industries to keep up the budgeted output.

Lazar Kaganovich, commissar of heavy industry, criticized workers in the copper industry after that branch failed to keep its schedules and the losses from accidents increased.

"There is no discipline; machinery is mishandled and repairs are poorly made," his appeal for new efforts said. "Orders of executives are not carried out."

DRUGGIST SHOOTS TWO BANDITS.

Bismarck, Mo., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—Omer Regan, 31 years old, early today shot and killed one bandit and seriously wounded another when they attempted to rob his drug store.

Issues Warning on Fire Perils of Christmas Trees

William A. Jackson, assistant city commissioner of electricity, yesterday warned Chicagoans of Christmas tree fire hazards. Lighting sets should be carefully inspected to see that the insulation is intact, he said, and bulbs should be screwed into the sockets so that no live metal is exposed.

HONESTY IN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.

Any one who has examined a registration statement for the sale of securities under the SEC must be impressed with the disclosures corporations must make when they sell stocks and bonds to the public. There are balance sheets and profit and loss statements, prepared by public accountants, running back over a period of years, and when any item requires explanation or qualification nothing is held back. Personal liability attaches to the making of false statements or the withholding of material information.

Industrial corporation securities to the extent of about 4 billion dollars were issued in the full year 1936, subject to these requirements. But while industrial companies marketed 4 billion dollars' worth of securities the government sold in excess of 9 billion dollars' worth, and without making a full and accurate disclosure of its condition. Thus the government is selling not only more bonds than all companies put together, but is doing so without complying with the spirit of the law compelling honesty in the sale of securities.

It has now been estimated that the government, which is not required to reveal all of the facts about its condition, has been holding back some facts that are important. A study by the Brookings Foundation for the senate committee on reorganization brought out that 2½ billion dollars of the assets which the government carries on its balance sheet are worthless.

The assets in question are a part of the capital stock and notes of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, which total about 4 billion dollars. The treasury carries them at par, or face value. But the Brookings report showed that the notes are not worth more than 50 cents on the dollar, and that the stock is worthless.

The reason the notes are worth only 50 cents on the dollar is that 2½ billions of the funds of the RFC have been diverted for relief and for the regular expenditures of other agencies, none of which amounts are recoverable. The President himself may not have known that worthless assets were given a value running into billions of dollars on the books of the government. That would be the kindest inference to be drawn from the fact that the President stated in his Pittsburgh speech during the 1936 campaign that the government held 6 billions of assets to offset its debts. But to arrive at that figure the 2½ billions of worthless RFC paper would have to be be included.

How the RFC money came to be spent outright was explained to a member of the senate by the acting director of the budget. He said that easy method was employed to get money for certain governmental purposes without asking congress to make a specific appropriation.

Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC said last week that he plans to ask congress to write off the missing 2½ billion dollars, and thus make the corporation's balance sheet and that of the treasury show the true condition. That will square the accounting, but not the accountable officers. The financial condition of the country was one of the important issues of the 1936 campaign. Mr. Roosevelt's assertion that the treasury had 6 billions of assets to offset its mountain of debt was one of the most effective arguments used in convincing the people that the financial management had not been as bad as the opposition had represented. A corporate management which withheld such important information when directors were being chosen would certainly hear from the stockholders and probably from the law when the facts became known.

The scandal of the vanishing 2½ billions should bring an end for the time being of the more flagrant juggling of funds at Washington.

DOCTORS AND THE VENEREAL PLAGUE.

A gratifying result of the campaign against venereal disease is the increase of reports by private physicians. In 1936 only one-eleventh of the reports of cases were contributed by private practitioners, but last month their reports were a fourth of the total.

The progress and ultimate success of this campaign depend largely upon the coöperation of the medical profession. Public health officials all over the country are now acting energetically and the press has broken the taboo against public discussion and is supplying the public with information. Medical associations are enlisted, but without the active participation of the rank and file of doctors the campaign will not get far. We hope every practitioner will realize his own responsibility and join without delay in the warfare now so encouragingly under way. It is his duty under the law to report every case of venereal disease within his knowledge to the proper authorities. And it is his duty professionally and as a citizen to coöperate fully for the success of all measures directed at the elimination of the plague.

The urgency of this problem is shown in the estimate of a public health service report on conditions in Chicago that no more than one-third of the probable total of 45,000 cases of syphilis are under treatment. And this does not show the full gravity of the situation, for it is also asserted that 85 per cent of the cases actually under treatment have sought treatment after the first year when the disease is most infectious. Also, many patients relax or give up treatment before cure is accomplished.

These estimates should insure the adoption, if practicable, of Ald. Cusack's proposal to establish a new clinic and hospital in the Cermak Memorial building in the Bridewell grounds, which he says is now insufficiently used as a hospital for firemen and policemen.

COMMUNISTIC RUSSIA LIQUIDATES ITSELF.

When Leon Trotzky, exiled in Mexico, asked for a chance to prove that he had not plotted with Germany and Japan to kill Stalin, partition soviet Russia and restore capitalism, his American friends undertook to give him a hearing. An international commission headed by Dr. John Dewey of Columbia university went to work. The examiners were nearly all partisans of Trotzky, a fact which, added to the impossibility of procuring anything like court proceedings, was supposed to make the inquiry valueless, not only judicially but historically. That conclusion, however, was unwaranted although the findings of the investigators, now made public, that Trotzky did not instigate a conspiracy against the soviet union involving plots with the Fascist nations, may seem to justify the preconception.

When Lenin fell sick the other revolutionary leaders fell out. They included Kamenev, judicially murdered last year; Zenoviev, judicially murdered; Rykov, now a hidden prisoner; Bukharin, a hidden prisoner; Trotzky, exiled, and Stalin, the survivor and perpetrator of the purges, bloody assizes, banishments, and torments. The victims of liquidation, purges, judicial murder, starvation, exile, and suicide are beyond credible estimate. Mass terrorism began under Lenin and it has never ceased. Hundreds of thousands of the Russian and other peoples in the soviet union have perished.

The most celebrated of the so-called trials began a year ago last August. Since then Stalin has liquidated all but a few of the old commissars and bolos, and with them eight generals, many diplomats, and innumerable technicians, agriculturalists, transport men, industrialists, and humble workers, all described as Trotzkyite wreckers and counter revolutionaries. To put a face upon these murders Stalin appealed to world opinion with a transcript of the trials of last January. That was a mistake in judgment. Darkness was at least mysterious, but when what purported to be soviet justice came out in the light a grisly, frightening thing appeared.

There was a scene of men falsely swearing their own lives away, of torture and lynch law dressed in judicial robes, of acts without any human rationality against a background of war, fantastic plots, suicides, and a terrorized people under a merciless, hypocritical dictator who must be spoken of reverentially and who was more Fascist than Mussolini or Hitler. The publication of the transcript of that trial invited investigation. It gave Trotzky an opportunity he might otherwise not have had to expose the soviet government of the last ten years and it gave him a reason for doing so.

As a result communism has been blasted beyond repair or redemption. Trotzky may say that it is not communism but Stalinism, but he when in power was in charge of liquidations and a director of mass terrorism. Dr. Dewey in the report of the investigators says the early idealism of the revolution has been betrayed. The early practices of the revolution have merely been continued. When only bolshevists could be victims in the death struggle for control bolshevists became the victims.

Further Dr. Dewey says: "This is no strife of personalities or of political factions which the American public can afford comfortably to ignore. It signifies the repudiation by a disciplined political organization, world-wide in its scope and influence, of the principles of truth and justice upon which the foundations of civilization are laid. It signifies a danger against which our own people must guard themselves without illusion and without compromise."

The repudiation of truth, justice, and civilization has its prominent place in our own politics, taking its doctrins from Rusisa and its inspiration from Stalin.

What Trotzky was able to do when he had the opportunity to reply to the charges of the soviet government was to give from his intimate knowledge a story of what has taken place in Russia, illuminating the dark recesses of a country which is almost completely closed to reliable news reports. The censorship is so complete that an understanding of what is going on, even when it may affect much of modern history, is obscured.

It may be a great irony but it seems to be undoubtedly true that the self-styled democracies of Europe owe part of their present plight to the fact that a terrorized Russia has been removed as an effective threat to the security and designs of the military Fascism, which with its hands free is outbluffing and outmaneuvering France and Great Britain. If Russia had been a real menace to Japan in China the Japanese would have thought twice before so extending themselves, and Washington and London might not be burning lights late at night over the bombing of American and British warships.

TRIAL BY JURY.

In the makeover of the Brazilian government the new court practice and procedure code will hold a jury liable for a verdict contrary to the evidence. If the verdict astonishes or offends the court, the jurymen may be prosecuted. In trying this experiment to fix a new responsibility in the jury box the Brazilians are reverting to the earliest practices connected with the development of trial by jury.

Scholars haven't spoken conclusively about the origin of the jury trial in our jurisprudence, but it is their conviction that it grew out of feudal inquiries and in the beginning bore more resemblance to the grand than the petty jury. It appears to have followed the Normans into England and the procedure came out of the practice of sending representatives of the king into localities to ascertain what matters required the cognizance of justice. When a case arose, the plaintif and the defendant presented neighbors, who took their oaths. The verdict went according to the predominance of the oath takers.

Men testified as of their own knowledge and the witnesses gradually became the jury which decided the trial of matters of which they might not themselves have first-hand information, deciding upon the testimony of other witnesses.

In one of the earliest cases which some legal historians are definitive enough to say was the introductory instance of the jury trial certain lands were in dispute between the church and William the Conqueror. The sherif, the king's representative, was a stout fellow who intended to get the land for the king. The judge in the case was Bishop Odo of Bayeux, the king's brother and chief justiciar. The neighborhood folk as witnesses were afraid of the sherif. They testified of their own knowledge that the lands had not been held by tenants of the church. Twelve were chosen to give a decision. It was for the king. It was discovered afterwards that they had perjured themselves and that some of them indeed were church tenants on the land.

Odo, either a just judge or more of a churchman than a brother, reopened the case, granted a new hearing and ordered the jury itself to trial. Under the compulsion of new fears the jurymen confessed the truth and were fined.

Trial by jury was imposed on the early English rather than sought by them. They believed in private justice, seeking either retaliation or compensation or, failing in that, in appeal to divine determination of justice through ordeal.

DON'T PUNISH YOURSELF WITH ALKALIS.

ARE you on the alkaline side of life? If you are, dismount—and that speedily. Several hundred million words have been uttered in an attempt to convince us that every ill to which we are heir is due to too much acid. The preachment is, "If you lack pep, take alkalis; if you have that tired feeling, take more." Acids are blamed for everything and we poor deluded mortals are admonished to fill up on baking soda or else risk translation—in a puff of vapor—into the spirit world. How dreadful—but how absurd.

Now, the fact of the matter is, that even though we abuse health by swallowing uncalled for alkalis, every effort will be made by our fluids and tissues to neutralize them. They are as bad—or worse—than too much acid. The average diet holds within it the proportion of minerals which the system requires and every time that we add either substance we oblige some important depot to give up one or the other.

The circulation—the blood—is maintained in balance constantly by innumerable forces. In fact, if the changes are slightly toward alkalinity or acidity, extra exertion is demanded to restore equilibrium.

Most of us take with our food one gram of calcium and two grams of phosphorus daily. This is more than we really need, hence the surplus is excreted via the bowel and the kidneys. This is nature's way of regulating our mineral requirements. The large amounts which we imbibe with our foods produce no symptoms.

Unfortunately, however, this is not the case with alkalis. Even small quantities may be too much for you or me. Appetite is lessened and the whole episode may bring on a sense of fatigue and result in vague pains, particularly in the upper abdomen. Great thirst and frequent urination are common. With larger doses, we may experience nausea and vomiting, headache, dizziness, or even mental confusion. It has long been known that the powders employed in the treatment of gastric ulcer may be responsible for all of the signs noted above, and physicians recognize this danger.

Then, too, there is the state called alkalosis, which may prove a real menace. This occurs whenever the carbonate or the bicarbonate saturation of the blood is above normal. The effects may be mild or severe. If the body fails to find in its various depots enough acids to counteract the oversupply, symptoms will appear such as headache, drowsiness, and pains in the calves of the legs and the muscles of the arms. Some victims will complain of a feeling of weakness or faintness and occasionally a sense of numbness in the extremities. Persistent users may even develop delirium.

Here is a curious fact. Physicians have observed that during fevers—in fact, in the course of almost any infection—the tendency is to swing to the alkaline side. Whenever temperature rises sufficiently high the very existence of this state of affairs—quite apart from the disease—may be productive of much discomfort. Respiration is embarrassed and the sufferer may be on the verge of collapse, particularly if he is on a full diet. Inasmuch as starvation causes acidity, omitting food is helpful.

Why any one would deliberately and with malice toward his constitution reproduce within his frame a response identical with fevers and infections, is difficult to explain. And yet that is what players at the alkali game accomplish. Who knows whether we need soda or not? Well, some day perhaps we will learn that the less we tinker with the economics of the body the more certain are we to keep well.

Unless there is a real reason for so doing, no one should become a bicarbonate eater. A little of this drug for some types of stomach distress may be quite in order, but to employ it as a daily ration is about as sensible as swallowing twopenny nails.

PERNICIOUS ANEMIA.

Mrs. H. M. K. writes: I have had pernicious anemia for seven years but I am getting along fine, look well, and have a good appetite. I have to take six pounds of liver a week, which we prepare in the following way:

We grind the six pounds through a food grinder, put to each pound a pint of cold water, let stand overnight to draw, stirring once in a while. Then we rub or press it through a sieve [not too fine]. On the pressed out part we put a little more water and wash it through for economy's sake. Then we bring the liquid to a boil, using a low gas flame, as it burns very easily, stirring often. We let it just boil up and turn off as it loses quality through boiling. After that we squeeze it through the sieve again, salt the liquid, cool and bottle it. The containers are then placed in the refrigerator. It spoils very easily, but it is too much work to prepare just one or two pounds at a time. I take one cupful in the morning and one in the afternoon—slightly warmed. In the beginning I had to take three pounds of liver daily for I was very low.

REPLY.

An excellent method for preparing liver extract at home. Be sure the bottles are sterile, i. e., scrubbed and rinsed in boiling water, as contamination with bacteria brings on spoilage. Others may follow your suggestions advantageously.

CARBUNCLES.

H. A. S. writes: After having had six carbuncles, staphylococcus aureus vaccine has been recommended to establish immunity. Would you advise it? What is your opinion of one's own serum, or X-ray for the same purpose?

REPLY.

Many people afflicted with boils and carbuncles are aided in setting up immunity by the administration of vaccines, auto or otherwise. The use of X-ray is of curative value only [not preventive] and if applied early in the development of the skin lesions may bring about termination of the infection.

PERNICIOUS ANEMIA.

M. E. writes: Is it necessary to have a blood count to make a diagnosis of pernicious anemia? What are the symptoms of this disease?

REPLY.

Diagnosis can be made with certainty only from the blood examination. The affection begins insidiously with increasing languor and pallor, the muscular weakness compelling the patient to take to his bed. Cardiac palpitation, dyspnea, attacks of fainting, and swelling of the ankles follow. Most cases will respond favorably to liver feedings.

PRESUMPTION OF DEATH.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. After a person has been gone for seven years and has not been heard of or seen since, is the person legally pronounced dead? My father disappeared the 15th of December, 1929, and has not been heard of since. My mother has a $1,000 policy on him and wishes to collect, as she has been paying it during this time. She consulted her insurance company and they informed her that they would try to trace him and if they could not find him would pay her the full value of the policy without any argument. This was in April, 1937. Now they have informed her that they cannot locate him and will pay only a small cash surrender [which is $44.14].

2. Can this insurance company be compelled to pay the life policy the same as though a person is legally called dead? We understand that after seven years of absence the law officially calls such a person dead. F. E. B.

1. Seven years' absence is ground for a presumption of death, but the presumption would not stand if it later developed that the person is actually alive.

2. Some policies contain express wording against liability based on the presumption of death. Your rights depend upon the wording of your policy and upon the proof as to the unexplained absence. We advise the employment of an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

RIGHTS IN PROPERTY.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Prior to June, 1932, my mother and father owned a home under joint tenancy. My father was threatened with suit by one of the tenants and the property was quit claimed from my mother and father to an aunt.

After a time the lawyers for the tenant found the property had been changed and there was no bank account and the tenant had no money to pay the lawyer, so the investigation was dropped. Then the property was quit claimed from my aunt back to my mother. My mother died about a year ago and the property still remains in her name.

1. My father says we have a dower right in the home as long as we live, and if he marries [2] what share would be his property?

3. What steps should we as heirs take to share this property equally? R. S.

1. It is the surviving spouse rather than the children that receives dower.

2. If he elects to take an absolute share you would acquire an inchoate interest in his share.

3. If he has not yet married and is willing to coöperate with you, we suggest that he employ an attorney to arrange an antenuptial agreement.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PARTY WALL.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I own two houses in a block of seven. Recently these houses were torn down to mine.

1. The wreckers left part of the other wall on mine.

2. This is very unsightly and gives my house an uneven side.

I want to know [3] if I can compel them to finish off this wall?

Also [4] can I make them clear away the débris they left there?

This is an eyesore to my property and [5] I shall appreciate any information you can give me. A. N.

1. We assume that the wall straddled your lot line. It would be called a party wall if there was a party wall agreement at the time of building. In absence of such agreement it is not likely that you can compel them to remove more than they choose to remove.

2. In general, the law does not give remedies against mere unsightliness.

3. Probably not.

4. Not unless you can show some other reason.

5. Try reporting the facts to the building commissioner, city hall.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY W. A. O'CARROLL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, Australia. — Australia's post-abdication sentiment regarding the duke of Windsor is settling down as emotion subsides and time brings into clearer perspective the circumstances allied with the event.

The people have regained their regard for the duke, of whom they have affectionate recollections as a royal visitor, and whose abdication, rather than his marriage, puzzled and pained them. The Sydney Sun crystalized their feelings in a recent editorial.

"The idea that the duke of Windsor is but another king in exile is, we feel sure, abhorrent to most of the British people," the editorial said. "By an agreement he signed with the government he consented to remain out of England—with an implied suggestion that when circumstances permitted this provision of the abdication might be waived. His general demeanor suggests that he has laid down the burden of the crown gladly, that he values his freedom, and that his only regret is that he is debarred from his country.

"It is certain that his tact and his care for the welfare of the British people are so considerable that he would refuse any ill-advised attempts to awaken the dynastic issue, nor is there the slightest doubt that he was sincere when he laid down the crown and agreed to the act of succession. His manner of abdication was manly and dignified. Here was no king deposed by an angry people, but a well loved monarch, choosing his path amid the regrets of all who knew him.

"About the man, be he prince or commoner, who is shut out of his native land, a certain unhappy aura clings—some suggestion of the disapproval of his countrymen. Whatever may be the Englishman's ideas of the choice of the duke of Windsor, it cannot be denied that there was something courageous in it, something we might not have found in the more conventional course, had he adopted it.

"If the duke and duchess of Windsor are to settle down anywhere, the best place for everybody's sake will be England."

STRIP MINING AN EYESORE.

Wilmette, Ill., Dec. 14.—In THE TRIBUNE of Dec. 12 there appears an editorial headed "Lost: One Birthright," in which mention is made of the efficiency of strip mining and the lower price made possible thereby.

I have no quarrel with the editorial as a whole, and am quite in sympathy with your opposition to government meddling in business, price fixing, production regulation, etc. But I do question that, when all factors are taken into consideration, there is any economy in strip coal mining.

I have not seen the strip mine at Canton, Ill., mentioned in the editorial, but I have seen the one at Middle Grove, Ill., some fifteen miles northwest of Canton. This mine has now been "worked out," and what has it left? Hundreds of acres of good farm land completely destroyed, useless forever for ordinary farm crops. Clay, hardpan, shale, rock, and other débris piled mountain high over all the area—desolation personified. The only thing to which I can compare it is the Bad Lands of North Dakota. Not only is the good earth ruined but the natural beauty of the landscape for miles around is also destroyed.

I am a user of coal, but I would prefer to pay the higher cost of underground mined coal than to see great areas of the country devastated as strip mining certainly does devastate it. See it yourself before you indorse an economy attained by such destruction.

Strip mining should be outlawed by proper legislation. It is America's public enemy No. 1. ALBERT A. MCKEIGHAN.

PHILATELIC OLD STUFF.

Warsaw, Ind., Dec. 8.—As a stamp collector I was much interested in the editorial of Dec. 8 on "The Hawaiian Stamp," and agree with the deductions.

But do not blame or credit Mr. Farley. Like all of the New Deal it is not original with him or Franklin D., but it is an old idea worked over.

Stamp collectors recognize the figure as a front view of the statue of King Kamahameha I. which appears on the kingdom of Hawaii stamp of the 1883 to 1886 issue. This is the 25 cent dark violet stamp of that issue. The figure in a side view appears on the 5 cent roselake stamp of 1894 and the 5 cent blue stamp of 1899. CLINTON L. CHALFANT.

PARTY HOURS.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—If there is some hidden potency in small hours whereby dances and card play take on an added charm, I for one have never discovered it. When our children are to spend three hours in fun, I think 8 to 11 would be just as acceptable as 10 until 1. At least it would save a good deal of wear and tear on us parents who still worry a bit about our children. G. SERPE.

FOOD FOR THE BIRDS.

Evanston, Ill., Dec. 6.—This weather is hard on the birds and animals that are without shelter. In the average home there is much food thrown out that would at least feed the birds. I have a system which makes it very easy to save all the scraps from my table. After breakfast I put a piece of newspaper somewhere in the kitchen and starting with breakfast I save all the dry cereal and pieces of toast and bacon. The same at lunch, and then after dinner I cut up all the bits of fat and meat that are left over. I use the shears to cut with; it's easier.

The next morning I throw it out on the parkway and you should see the birds and squirrels! They are so hungry it all disappears in no time.

In the city the food could be put on a window sill or a back porch. It would be a good idea for mothers to teach the children to think of the birds, and when they can't go out they would have something to do and something to think of besides themselves. Putting the food out may help many a homeless dog or cat, too. I can't imagine anything worse than being cold and hungry for man or beast. GUSSIE B. WARD.

UNCLE SAM AS EMPLOYER.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—This is a desperate plea from the forgotten men of the government service—the substitute postoffice clerks.

The working conditions in the postoffice are no better than in the sweat shops that Mrs. Roosevelt fought against. It is operated more like a prison than a public service organization. We must not talk under any circumstances. We must get permission from the foreman to go the lavatory and may not remain there longer than ten minutes. If we find it necessary to go a second time during the course of the evening, permission to do so is refused.

During the summer months we work in temperatures of 100 degrees or more. We breathe dust thick enough to be cut with a knife. If ill, we cannot leave without permission from the postoffice doctor. The speed-up system of the sweat shops is used quite freely.

The postoffice department is also violating a federal statute which requires a 6-1 personnel ratio—six regular clerks to one substitute. The present ratio is six temporary appointees to one substitute. SUBSTITUTE.

ILL WIND.

Farmington, Mo., Dec. 13.—The present depression is bad business for all affected by it, but it may save America from a dictatorship in this decade. Continued success of the policies of the New Deal as reflected in economic prosperity would have been a great boost for a "planned society." PAUL HOWARD.

SCIENTISTS FIND MAN VICTIM OF AN UPSET WORLD

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The atmosphere and fear and uncertainty in which much of civilized humanity is immersed today, whether in war, business, politics or labor struggle, may be regarded as a causative factor in many common ailments, such as ulcers, high blood pressure, and even the common cold.

This is one of the conclusions drawn from the report on five years of work which has just been made public by the Institute for Psychoanalysis of Chicago.

Man is regarded as a sort of biological trinity, a body-mind-society unit, in this approach. Two hundred and twenty-six persons have been accepted for analysis in the institute since its opening. The chief result has been a better understanding of these individuals, but a few general formulations begin to emerge.

Study Emotional Relationships.

"Man is a complicated physiological machine and at the same time an individual personality," it is stated in the report. "He is also a member of a social group. His mental disturbances can only be understood in the light of his emotional relationships to the group.

"Since chronic emotional tensions may lead in time to definite organic disturbances, and since these emotional tensions arise partially as a result of group life, there is a direct connection between social organization [culture] and disease. There are clear indications that sociological factors are of distinct importance in many well defined bodily disturbances common in our civilization. [To mention only two examples: peptic ulcers and essential hypertension.]

"Chronic emotional tensions—intense ambition, aggressive competitiveness, fears and uncertainties of existence—which act as causative factors in these and other bodily disturbances—are to a high degree socially determined. It seems that in certain civilizations in which the emotional attitude of the group members is different, these disturbances occur much less frequently. [Among African Negroes essential hypertension is found much less frequently than among North American Negroes.]

Dr. Alexander Heads Staf.

The institute is in close contact with medical and hospital organizations and considers much of its work as educational research. The members of its staf, headed by Dr. Franz Alexander, give many lectures, and regard the sociological and criminological implications of the work as of extreme importance. The institute has a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation.

A working hypothesis concerning the emotional factors in high blood pressure based on clinical evidence will soon be published and more attention will be given to the treatment of these cases. The influence of hostile aggressive impulses which have been inhibited or suppressed by the individual upon this type of disease has been pointed out. It is not healthful, in other words, to hold hate in secret against one's neighbors, job, boss or family.

In gastro-intestinal disturbances, the report states, the psychoanalytic technique has proved effective in a number of cases.

How Treatments Succeed.

The tables of results in the report show that in the group of organ neuroses [nerve diseases] with 27 patients, treatment was 78 per cent successful. In character disturbances, with 39 cases, there was a 71 per cent success. In 27 cases of psychoneuroses, there was 60 per cent success. Two of four cases of epilepsy and eight cases of disturbance of sexual functions, had a successful outcome, as had two cases of chronic alcoholism and single cases of migraine and stammering.

Mexico Oil Workers Get 10 Million a Year Pay Raise

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 18.—(AP)—An arbitration board in Mexico's $400,000,000 oil industry's dispute with labor late tonight approved a verdict granting workers increased benefits. A high labor department official predicted that the terms of the draft decision would cost the companies 26,332,000 pesos [about $7,372,000] a year. According to the companies' figures, cost increases were estimated at from 36,000,000 to 42,000,000 pesos [from $10,000,000 to $11,760,000] a year.

DISTRICT JUDGE NAMED TO IOWA SUPREME COURT

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel tonight announced appointment of District Judge Ernest M. Miller of Harlan, Ia., to fill the Iowa Supreme court vacancy caused by the death of Justice James M. Parsons.

Mr. Miller, who is 47 years old, was elected judge of the 15th judicial district in 1932—the first Democrat to gain the bench in that district. His appointment maintains complete Democratic domination of the Supreme court bench of nine justices. Miller and Kraschel have been friends for twenty years.

Justice Parsons, who died Thursday from a kidney ailment and complications, was buried this afternoon at Des Moines, his home since 1906.

Gypsy Woman Is Slain, Mother Beaten by Bandit

A gypsy woman was beaten to death last night and her mother was seriously beaten by an unidentified colored man at 831 Maxwell street, in the heart of the Maxwell street business district. The woman killed was Catherine Eli, 25 years old. Her mother, Mary Eli, 42 years old, is in the County hospital, suffering from a skull fracture. Police said their assailant clubbed them with a length of pipe and then robbed them of $1,000.

MANY RECALLED WHO RENOUNCED U. S. CITIZENSHIP

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Barbara Hutton's renunciation of her American citizenship follows similar action started back in the '90s by the Goulds and Astors.

While the Woolworth 5 and 10 cent store heiress gave up her American citizenship ostensibly because her marriage to Count Haugwitz-Reventlow made her also a citizen of Denmark under Danish law and thus raised legal complications, it probably will deprive the United States government of about $30,000,000 in inheritance taxes when her fortune passes on to her son, Lance, now 2 years old.

Anna Gould, headstrong daughter of old Jay Gould and heir to $18,000,000 of his railroad holdings, automatically renounced her citizenship when, in 1895, with the family's ardent blessing, she was married to the impoverished Count Boni de Castellane in Paris. She had been, to the family's discomfiture, a bit too romantically inclined toward an American actor.

Her Brother Undeterred.

The count ran through $3,000,000 in American gold in five years, and Anna divorced him. But her experience did not deter her brother, Frank Jay Gould, from formally forswearing America for France.

There was a great to do in 1899 when the Astors began going British in flocks.

First to turn his back on his native land and take his cash with him was William Waldorf Astor. He was followed by his sons, Waldorf and John Jacob. When Waldorf married the dashing Nancy Langhorne in 1903 she renounced citizenship in one of the first families of Virginia, but eventually she became Lady Astor, M. P., which seemed to make up for it.

Trades Duke for Earl.

The fashionable renunciation was continued by Helena Zimmerman, daughter of the late Eugene Zimmerman, Cincinnati railroad tycoon, when she was married to the duke of Manchester in Paris in 1900. He was called the poorest duke in England, and she had $15,000,000. She divorced him in 1931, but kept her record clear by marrying the earl of Kintore in Edinburgh.

The Philadelphia born Mrs. Harry Symes Lehr not only renounced American citizenshsip formally by marrying Lord Decies of London, but as recently as two months ago she informally repeated her renunciation of saying she would not live in New York on a bet.

Millicent Rogers, daughter of Col. Henry H. Rogers of the Standard Oil millions, ran into parental disapproval when she eloped with the impecunious Austrian count, Ludwig Salm. She divorced him, wed an Argentinian, divorced him in turn and married an American, Ronald Balcom, to return to her native heath.

U. S. PLANS DRIVE AGAINST SOCIAL SECURITY FRAUD

The internal revenue department for the 1st district of Illinois will start a drive after Jan. 1 on errors and cheating in connection with the social security tax, Collector Carter H. Harrison announced last night. A similar drive will be started in other parts of the country.

Mr. Harrison said investigation has shown that thousands of employés are being unlawfully deprived of shares in old age benefits by employers who have never paid the tax. The inquiry also revealed that one-fifth of the employers who are paying the tax failed to file returns for the first six months ended June 30, and that one out of every four returns filed was inaccurate.

SYPHILIS GREAT DISABLER, REPORT OF SURVEY SHOWS

Of the 19,071 cases of syphilis reported in the Chicago survey, 11,251 victims, or 59 per cent, are under the age of 30 and only one of ten can afford treatment.

These facts, made public yesterday from the United States public health service's report on the survey made last spring, tend to bear out the assertions of some authorities that syphilis probably has a greater economic effect than any other communicable disease.

They regard syphilis as a vast disabling force which curtails or destroys the activity of its victims, leaving them as public charges more frequently than it kills them outright. Thus, the disease appears not only as a health but a socio-economic problem in Chicago's control campaign.

At Peak Between Age 20 and 24.

The survey showed that the disease's prevalence here reaches its peak in persons between the ages of 20 and 24. Forty-four of every 10,000 Chicagoans have syphilis, according to the survey, and of these, 23, or more than half, are between ages 20 and 24.

Having pointed out previously that only 7½ per cent of all syphilis cases here receive enough early treatment to insure a cure or to render them noninfectious, the report said:

"Neglect of treatment seems somewhat dependent on the early age of acquiring syphilis. The individuals in these age groups have not, in most instances, reached an earning capacity which enables them to pay even minimum private rates."

Private Doctors Treat Fewer.

The report said 54 per cent of the patients in clinics acquired the disease before the age of 30, as against 45 per cent of patients treated by private physicians.

Of the 19,071 cases of syphilis, private physicians treat only 25 per cent, the rest being distributed as follows: 34 per cent in tax supported free clinics; 18 per cent in free or part pay clinics operated with private funds; 12 per cent in part pay clinics drawing on both public and private funds, and 11 per cent in full pay clinics privately operated.

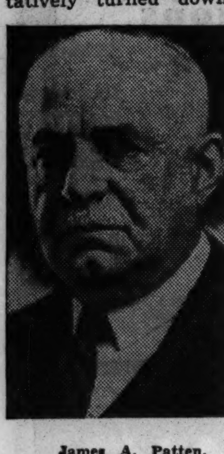
Evanston Council Gets Offer to Swap City Hall for James A. Patten Mansion

PLAN REJECTED, BUT IT MAY BE REVIVED LATER

Northwestern Gets Cash Bid for Property.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]



James A. Patten.

How the Evanston city fathers tentatively turned down an offer to swap the city hall for the town's biggest and best known residence, the former James A. Patten residence, now owned by Northwestern university, and adjoining property, as a new site for a municipal building, was learned yesterday. Various parties involved in the proposed trade outlined the details of what would have been one of the most unusual suburban realty transactions in years.

A wealthy Chicagoan, now living in the east, whose identity was not disclosed to Northwestern university officials or to the Evanston mayor and aldermen, offered to acquire for cash the entire block bounded by Ridge avenue, Lake street, Asbury avenue, and Greenwood boulevard. Half of this block is occupied by the Patten residence.

Offers Additional Cash.

He then offered to exchange this block for the city hall and in addition pay enough cash to the city to permit complete remodeling of the Patten mansion into a new city hall. This would have left the south half of the block for use as a temporary park and a site for a new city hall at some future time, he pointed out.

According to the real estate broker representing this man, the present city hall would have been razed and a modern air conditioned two story business block to cost about $200,000 erected.

This, he said, would not only have increased the value of Evanston's central business district, but it would have added another tax paying property to swell the city's revenues. At present, neither that property nor the Patten residence pays taxes, the latter because it is owned by Northwestern university, which is tax exempt.

Plan May Be Revived.

The project, it was learned, at first appealed to the Evanston aldermen, but later sentiment changed and they rejected it after a discussion as a committee of the whole. It was not brought into the council chamber for formal vote.

According to Ald. Ward T. Huston, chairman of the council real estate committee and head of the Chicago realty firm of Ward T. Huston & Co., the project is far from dead. He said that if a change of sentiment develops it may be revived later.

It was pointed out by the interests supporting the project that it has never had a public hearing of any sort and that the public generally knows nothing about the suggested swap.

Offers $65,000 Cash.

"It was turned down by the council because of a desire not to violate the zoning ordinance," Houston said.

According to the broker in the project a municipality has the right to erect any kind of a building on property it owns, so that no zoning law would be violated by having the city hall in a residence district.

Harry L. Wells, business manager of Northwestern university, said that the undisclosed eastern party had, through his Chicago broker offered to pay the price asked by the university, $65,000 cash, for the Patten residence, if the city would accept his offer to swap it for the city hall.

Two Homes on Site.

The block suggested for trading for the city hall fronts 454 feet on Ridge and the same on Asbury, with 375 feet of frontage on both Greenwood and Lake.

On the north half stands a residence built in 1903 by the late James A. Patten, spectacular Board of Trade operator for many years. It has solid stone walls, cost half a million dollars, and was designed by the late George Maher.

On the south half stands the half-century old mansion of the late George F. Slaughter, well known La Salle street figure for many years. No offer was made to Mrs. Slaughter, widow, who lives on the property, but it was understood it could have been acquired.

Given to University.

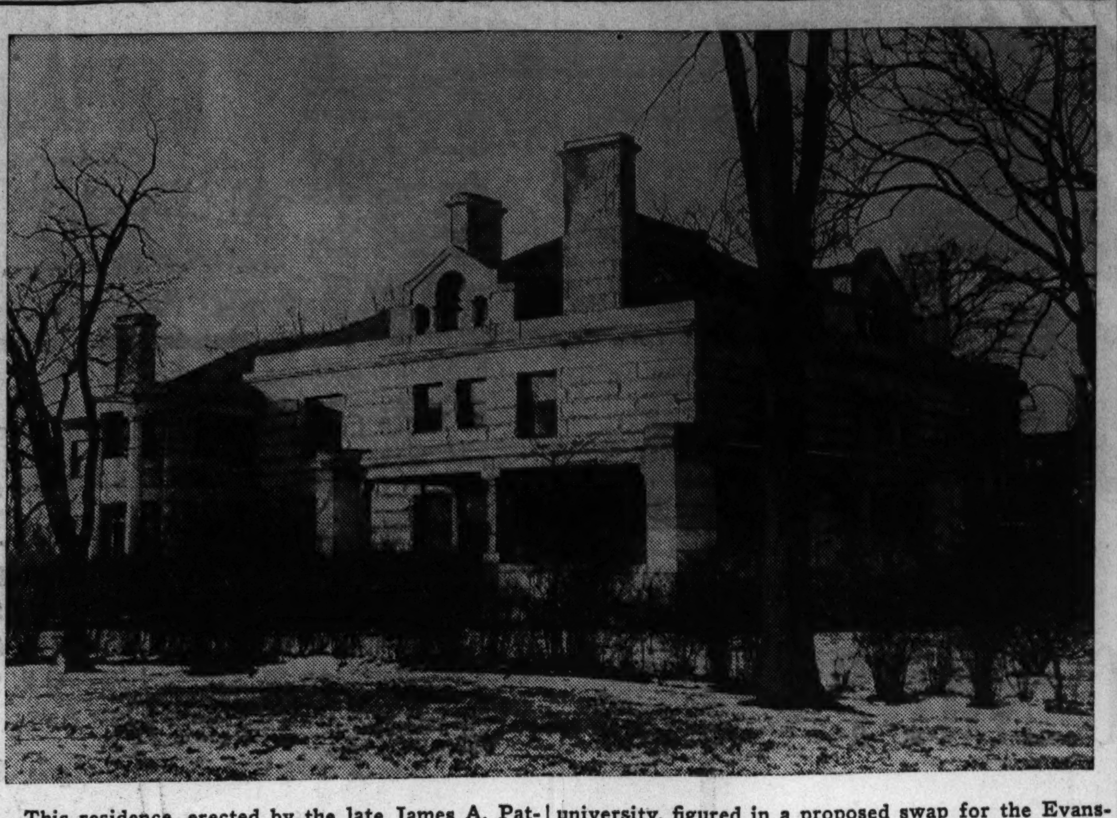
The Patten mansion, which has twenty-two rooms, eight baths, fifteen fireplaces, a large ballroom, and a ten car garage, with an apartment above, was left by Mrs. Patten, who died in 1935, to her children, John L. Patten and Mrs. Agnes Patten Wilder of Santa Barbara, Cal. They in turn gave it to the university with the stipulation that it be used as a memorial to their mother.

If sold, according to Wells, the proceeds will be used to establish scholarships for women at Northwestern as a memorial to Mrs. Patten. The property, he said, still is on the market at $65,000. The house is unoccupied.

Rents Two Story Building on Walton Place for Cafe

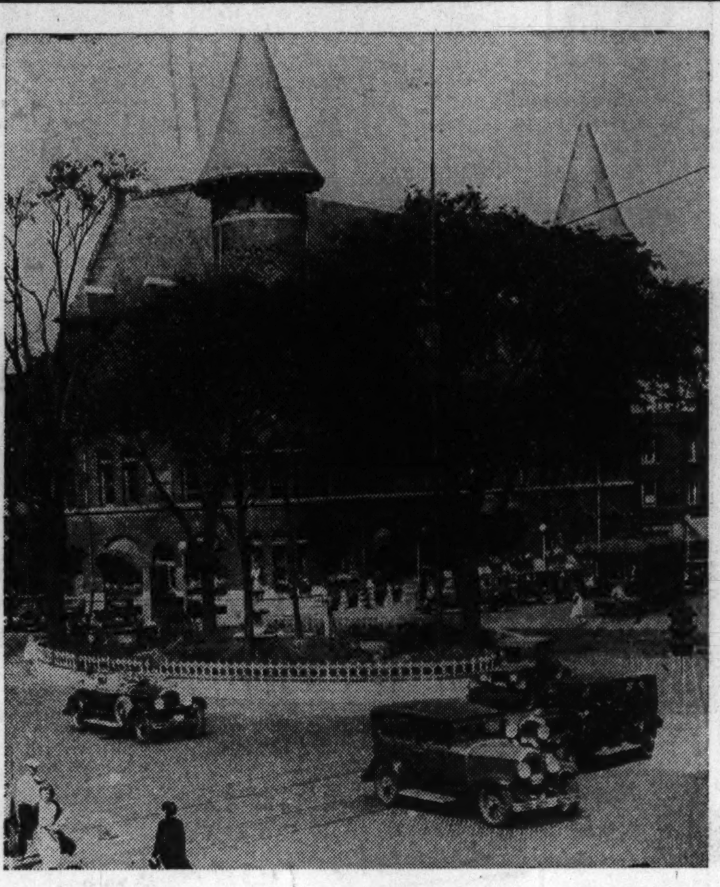
John S. Rich leased the two story building at 69 East Walton place from Cyrus E. Wilder for five years and has remodeled it into a restaurant. Hogan & Farwell were brokers.

Landmark Suggested for Evanston City Hall



This residence, erected by the late James A. Patten at 1426 Ridge avenue, Evanston, in 1903, from plans by the late George Maher, at a reported cost of half a million dollars, and now owned by Northwestern university, figured in a proposed swap for the Evanston city hall. Although the council did not approve the trade, one leading alderman said the project may be accepted during 1938.

Where Evanston City Fathers Now Meet



A former Chicagoan, now living in the east, it was learned yesterday, offered the Evanston city council the former James A. Patten residence and the remainder of the block bounded by Ridge, Greenwood, Asbury, and Lake, together with additional cash, in exchange for the Evanston city hall. Fountain square, Evanston, with the city hall in the background, is shown above. The building is 50 by 150.

Paper Products Company Leases Two Story Plant

The Chippewa Paper Products company leased the two story building, containing 50,000 square feet of floor space, at 2637-59 West Polk street, from the John F. Jelke company, for five years. N. Ray Miller, of Chandler & Montague, was broker.

Modern Entrance

A new entrance to the thirteen story McKinlock building, at the southwest corner of Jackson and Wells, a new lobby, and other details of a modernization program have been planned by Melville Clarke Chatten, architect. Details are given in another column on this page.

M'KINLOCK WIDOW, BUILDING MANAGER, PLANS REMODELING

Mrs. Marion W. McKinlock, widow of George Alexander McKinlock, whose name once was used to designate the Chicago campus of Northwestern university, recently took over the management of the thirteen-story McKinlock building, at the southwest corner of Jackson and Wells. Yesterday she announced through her architect, Melville Clarke Chatten, that she contemplated an extensive remodeling program.

An entirely new entrance will be built on Jackson boulevard, with extensive use of glass brick and aluminum, and with new show windows. This will lead into an enlarged new lobby, with indirect lighting, walls and elevator doors of light mahogany, accented by bands of light statuary bronze. The base and floor will be of marble and terrazzo.

Mrs. McKinlock, who has gone to Florida to open her Palm Beach house, Casa Alejandro, and who has an office in the McKinlock building, said that she intended further interior improvements in that structure. She has taken over the active management of the property from a local real estate firm.

The building is occupied largely by insurance concerns. The Insurance Company of North America recently renewed its lease for four entire floors.

Fewer Vacant Flats Found by City Survey

Apartment building occupancy in Chicago recently hit a new high according to a survey just completed by the Apartment Building Owners and Managers association of Chicago, of which Louis C. Sudler is president. On Oct. 1 it stood at 97.97 per cent, compared with 97.15 per cent on May 15, 1937, and with 94.91 on May 1, 1936.

The survey, compiled by I. K. Smith, secretary of the association, showed only 526 vacant apartments out of 25,766 units of all sizes. It was based on reports from forty-eight property owners and management offices, including banks, insurance companies, liquidation trusts, and estates. The units covered are in more than 2,000 properties, both walkup and elevator type, in all sections of the city.

"The highest occupancy indicated was in the smaller unfurnished apartments, of one to four rooms. In the three room classification it reached 99.07 per cent," said Smith.

"Lowest occupancy was in the larger units, the percentage standing at 89.50 per cent in the suites of ten rooms and over. This is a decrease in occupancy of 0.79 per cent since May 15, 1937."

The survey showed 98.82 per cent occupancy on the south side, 98.33 per cent on the west side, and 97.29 per cent on the north side.

PAY $2,729,355 TO STRAUS BOND OWNERS IN 1937

Distributions Are 10 Pct. More Than in 1936.

More than two and three-quarter million dollars was distributed to owners of bonds in ninety-two reorganized security issues underwritten by S. W. Straus & Co., according to the second annual survey, issued yesterday by M. A. Rosenthal, president of the Securities Service corporation. Since the first reorganization of a Straus bond issue in 1932 to the end of this year the total distribution in dividends and interest on new securities has been $7,288,408, said Rosenthal.

Interest and principal distributions for 1937 were more than a quarter of a million dollars larger than for 1936, a gain of more than 10 per cent. Ninety-two reorganized issues are now on a paying basis.

Four Issues Paid in 1933.

According to Rosenthal there were only four issues paying interest in 1933. A year later there were thirteen, and in 1935 forty-seven. Last year the total had risen to eighty.

The comparison by years is as follows:

Payments 1934 and prior	$ 672,088
Payments 1935	1,416,626
Payments 1936	2,470,339
	$7,288,408

"At the beginning of the depression in 1929 there were 245 bond issues outstanding in the middle west, west, and southwest which had been underwritten by S. W. Straus & Co," said Rosenthal. "The original face value was $250,685,000.

"Six of the issues, amounting to $16,950,000, continued to meet all obligations to the bondholders. The remaining 239, representing original issues of $233,735,000, defaulted. Prior to the defaults the principal had been paid down to $205,101,900.

Many Issues Reorganized.

"Of the defaulted issues 217, with $189,844,900 outstanding, have been reorganized, mostly by various committees, with the Securities Service corporation participating. This leaves twenty-two issues, with a par value of $15,257,000, in process of reorganization."

A number of factors have operated against the interests of holders of new securities, the chief of which is taxes, Rosenthal asserted.

"In some cases taxes made it impossible for the properties to distribute any earnings," he said. "They were assessed entirely without consideration of earning power. In other cases, where recovery of earning power slowly is being accomplished, taxes are consuming an entirely disproportionate share of the net income, leaving practically nothing for distribution to security holders."

TOURIST RELIVES BATTLE OF SHILOH IN NATIONAL PARK

Site in Tennessee Draws Southern Travelers.

This is the fifth of a series of articles by Hal Foust, automobile editor of The Tribune, who is making a trailer trip to the southland with his family.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Shiloh National Military Park, Tenn., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—If the roads in Mississippi have been improved as much as advertised this well posted battleground should become an important stopping point in the migration of motorists between the north and the winter resorts in the south.

Even with highway conditions doubtful south of here, visitors to this 3,600 acre preserve on the west bank of the Tennessee river in the last year are estimated by the government at 320,240, almost double the number in the previous year.

The department of interior provides free guide service for tourists to monuments and plaques which mark the progress from hour to hour of a two day fight in which 20,000 were killed and wounded.

Historic Points Revealed.

An old sunken road through a quiet grove of oaks on a knoll is the "hornets' nest," where three divisions of young recruits in blue withstood twelve rebel charges and thereby saved Gen. U. S. Grant's army from destruction.

In a ravine there is an old oak protected by a fence. It was there that Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston bled to death after a minie ball severed an artery of his right leg. Were it not for this mishap, according to a popular southern viewpoint, the confederate leader would have accomplished his purpose of destroying Grant's forces in a surprise attack.

Also marked is the place where Grant sat under a tree throughout a rainy night after his forces had been driven back to Pittsburg Landing in the day's fighting.

Other Activities Recalled.

That night Grant received the reinforcements that Johnston had sought to forestall, and the following morning the rebels were driven from the field, retreating and being pursued to Corinth, Miss., a railroad intersection, twenty miles south, which was the objective of the union campaign.

The tourist, by reading the markers, can follow the two days activities of individual regiments, many of them volunteers from Chicagoland states. It is history written on the fields in which it was made.

THE TRIBUNE automobile stopped here in the course of a trailer tour to the southern resorts. There will be later reports on those Mississippi roads, and on trailer comforts and discomforts.

Two Women Scream; It's Too Much for Bandit Pair

The screams of two women were too much for two masked bandits last night. The gunmen entered the apartment of Miss Alice Lamb, 30 years old, a sales clerk, at 505 Belmont avenue, and threatened her with torture if she would not surrender her jewelry. She screamed. Mrs. Anna Walter, in a neighboring apartment, heard her and screamed too. The robbers fled—their hands to their ears—without loot.

Two women, one from Chicago, escaped from the Dwight Prison for Women yesterday as they were returning to their quarters at noon in a thick fog, but they were recaptured five hours later. They are Mildred O'Sullivan, serving a year from Cook county for possession of drugs, and Bessie Baker, from Richland county, serving one to fourteen years for manslaughter.

Navy's Flying Battleship Takes to the Air

Literally a fortress of the sky, this is the new battle plane built for the United States navy just before it was launched at San Diego, Cal., where it is to be put through exhaustive tests. It will carry a battery of machine guns and thousands of pounds of bombs. [Acme Photo.]

Costs $1,000,000

San Diego, Cal. Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Combat secrets of the United States navy's new million dollar aerial dreadnaught were guarded closely today as the ship, capable of carrying 15,000 pounds of bombs, soared high above this city. While the navy department has forbidden release of any information about the ship, the manufacturer admitted that it had a wing spread of 115 feet, is powered with four engines, and that commercial models made from the same design could fly 5,000 miles with thirty passengers and 10,000 pounds of freight. The all-metal ship carries armament to protect it from any angle. It weighs thirty tons and can attain a speed of better than 200 miles an hour.

Army Planes Held Equal of Any.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the army air corps, said today the army's military planes "type for type are at least the equal of those found elsewhere in the hands of any possible adversary."

"Some of our types are superior to those available anywhere else in the world," he added in a year-end message to the air corps, National Guard, and reserves.

Jack London of Eli Daiches Case to Be at Showup Today

EXPLAINS USE OF TEMPORARY TEACHERS' LIST

In a report answering inquiries received by Superintendent of Schools William H. Johnson about the number of teachers in the public schools holding temporary certificates, it was said yesterday that the number is not excessive when compared with the records of years prior to the administration of the present school board.

The investigation was made by Henry S. Crane, secretary of the board of examiners of the board of education. His report showed that in contrast to 1923 when 1,703 temporary certificates were issued, there are now 1,012 such teachers.

Temporary certificates are issued to substitute teachers not on the regular eligibility list. The certificates are issued for one school subject only and holders must meet requirements of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary schools.

The examining board secretary said the purpose of the certificate is to provide substitutes to meet an emergency demand when the eligibility list of substitutes is low. He said there are now only 322 substitutes certified in the 62 regular high school courses.

The present temporary certificate teachers are distributed as follows: Colleges, 6; evening schools, 436; Chicago normal college graduates, 148; R. O. T. C., 27; Americanization classes, 38; laboratory assistants, 21; elementary specials, 20, and day high schools, 316. Mr. Crane explained the 148 Chicago Normal graduates holding temporary certificates are teachers on the elementary school eligible list who are also qualified for high school substituting.

Major Part in City's Plan for Unification.

BY WILLIAM BROMAGE.

Complete modernization of Chicago's surface transit system would cost $72,360,000, city traction experts estimated yesterday. Such a program forms a major part of the rehabilitation plan of the city for unification of all local transportation.

Under the plan the surface modernization program would be carried out over a nine year period and would supplement improvements in rapid transit facilities at an estimated cost of $26,368,100. This would bring the total investment in new facilities to $98,728,100.

62 Millions in Six Years.

For the first six years the plan calls for a public investment of 62 million dollars for subways, elevated superhighways, and other improvements.

The surface modernization program provides for a big substitution of buses for street cars. During the first four years of the program 360 miles of single track operation would be abandoned, reducing the present total of 1,040 miles operated by the Chicago Surface lines to 680 miles.

More than 2,600 of the 3,700 street cars owned by the Surface lines would be scrapped as out moded under the nine year program. In the first four years 1,804 old street cars would be abandoned and replaced by 2,107 new vehicles—1,035 modern street cars and 1,072 new buses at a cost of $28,243,400.

In the next five years $15,854,000 would be spent for new vehicles. Tentatively, the city plan provides for the purchase of 1,081 new buses in this period to further replace street cars. This would require the scrapping of 846 more old cars and the abandonment of additional track operation to reduce the total to 420 miles.

The plan allows 15 million dollars for track reconstruction during the nine years. It provides also for the completion of the modernization of the lines operated by the Chicago Motor Coach company at a cost of $2,808,000.

Details of Expenditures.

Following are proposed expenditures for surface modernization as set up by city engineers:

YOUNGHUSBAND IS FINED $100 FOR HITTING WRITER

J. Leslie Younghusband, wealthy lipstick manufacturer, yesterday was fined $100 by Magistrate John T. Fisher at St. Petersburg, Fla., on a charge of assaulting William L. Snyder, a reporter, at a wedding party on Nov. 13 in that city, according to word received here.

The cosmetics maker did not appear in court, but entered a plea of guilty through his attorney, M. L. Blanchard, who said Younghusband was in Chicago because of the illness of his fifth and present wife.

Younghusband was not in his apartment at 233 East Walton street when a reporter called, but a maid said Mrs. Younghusband underwent a minor nasal operation several days ago.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 18.—Notre Dame staved off Northwestern's second half rally to win its 18th consecutive basketball victory tonight, 30 to 27. Twice the Wildcats came within a point of Notre Dame after trailing 22 to 16, at the intermission.

Notre Dame tallied five consecutive free throws in the second half and pulled away to a 27 to 23 lead despite Northwestern's scoring burst which had brought the Wildcats within a point of the Irish at 24 to 23. Then, with only four minutes to play, and with the Wildcats now behind only 27 to 26, Johnny Moir shot a long field goal to make victory possible. It was Notre Dame's only goal of the second half.

Because of the holiday period, many of the students were absent, but 5,000 saw Notre Dame's victory, the fifth of this season and the twelfth consecutive triumph on the fieldhouse court. Northwestern, which won here last year, 38 to 19, was the last quintet to beat the Irish on their home floor.

Loosely Played Game.

This was the fifteenth game in the last twenty-one games of the Northwestern-Notre Dame basketball rivalry which has been decided by four points or less. But it was one of the most loosely played and least interesting despite the score.

Both quintets were off in free throw shooting in the first period. Northwestern only made four in eleven attempts and Notre Dame got two in eleven. Moir was the chief offender, missing five penalty shots in the first half before he connected. He also failed once in the second half.

Each team also was inaccurate in shooting from the field in the final twenty minutes. Notre Dame secured one goal in 29 shots while Northwestern scored four times in 26.

Penalties were frequent. Fred Trenkle, Ad Vance, and Jean Smith of Northwestern were dismissed for four personal fouls each. Paul Nowak, Notre Dame center, accumulated three personals in the first half and was replaced by Mark Ertel, sophomore from Tipton, Ind. But Nowak was sent back after Northwestern's first rally and managed to finish without getting the fourth and disqualifying foul.

Brown Starts Scoring.

Earl Brown opened the scoring on the first shot of the game and Moir followed with a field goal after stealing a Wildcat pass. Baskets by Trenkle and Vance tied the count at 4 all, but from this point on the Irish had from two to four points advantage until the Wildcats started clicking in the second period.

Elimination of the center jump speeded up the contest, but it also seemed to disorganize the offensive formations of both clubs. Inability to shoot accurately, coupled with fouls and excessive dribbling, marred the contest.

Bernie Davis, Northwestern sophomore, turned in a brilliant floor game while Trenkle, with three field goals, was the Wildcats' best marksman. Moir and Tommy Wukovits tied for scoring honors for Notre Dame.

PURDUE, 60; DE PAUL, 50

Purdue's powerful scoring combination—Jewell Young, Johnny Sines, and Gene Anderson—went to work against the De Paul university basketball team last night at the 132d Infantry armory. These three sharpshooters performed so effectively that the Boilermakers started their holiday tour with a 60 to 50 victory over the Blue Demons.

De Paul was able to keep pace for seven minutes in the first half, leading 8 to 7 at that point. Then Purdue's mighty offense began to assert itself.

Pat Howlett (No. 61) drops in a short shot for De Paul in the first half of its game against Purdue at the 132d Infantry armory last night. Purdue won, 60 to 50. Other players are Szukula (No. 62) and Crowley, both of De Paul.

MEDWICK TAKES NATIONAL LEAGUE BATTING HONORS

Joseph M. [Ducky] Medwick of the Cardinals was tops as an all-around man in the National league last season. The circuit's official batting averages, announced yesterday, show that Medwick led the hitters with room to spare, but that was only part of his performance.

Medwick also was No. 1 man in times at bat, in runs scored, in the total of base hits, in total bases and in doubles. He lost out in the home run column because he was tied by Mel Ott of the Giants with 31.

Arky Vaughan Leads in Triples.

It was the second straight year Medwick has led in hits and doubles and his third in total bases, but the first in which he was crowned batting champion. In the latter department he concluded with .374, ten points ahead of his teammate, First Baseman Johnny Mize.

There were a few other "mosts" in the league, but none of them belonged to the Giants, the pennant winners. Floyd Arky Vaughan of the Pirates produced the most three base hits, 17. Jimmy Brown of the Cardinals was the best at nudging runners along, his sacrifice figure being 26. Augie Galan of the Cubs was the leading base thief with 23. Paul Waner of the Pirates hit 178 singles, a mark not reached by any other performer.

Six Play in All Clubs' Games.

Although finishing second in the race, three games behind the Giants, the Cubs were among the élite in other respects. They led in team batting with Pittsburgh and the Cardinals in the two following positions. These two teams were lamentably weak in pitching so perhaps the Cubs' failure to win the flag can be charged to the same department, boasts of the strength of the Cub pitching staf notwithstanding. The Cubs had four hitters in the .300 class, Gabby Hartnett leading the quartet with .3539.

Six players took part in all games

Cubs and Sox to Meet in 16 Spring Games

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox should be able to extract a lot of fun from their training trip chores next spring. They are booked for no fewer than sixteen exhibitions with the Cubs whom they have been trimming for so many years that the National league is beginning to get annoyed about it. But hope springs eternal in baseball as well as elsewhere so the Cubs keep coming back for more.

The sixteen Sox-Cubs arguments were revealed yesterday as part of the 1938 spring training plan. Both squads will be taken to camp in sections. The Sox early squad, composed of pitchers, catchers, and young infielders, will leave Chicago aboard a streamliner the night of March 1, arriving at Pasadena, Cal., the morning of March 3. The balance of Jim Dykes' athletes will report at Pasadena, Cal., March 9. Players in this group will have a bit more than a week in which to prepare themselves for the first tussle with the Cubs March 18.

Grimm to Hold Kindergarten.

Arrangements for getting all the Cubs to their Catalina Island camp haven't been completed. The regulars will leave Chicago Feb. 28, reaching the island camp March 3. A date between Feb. 15 and 20 will be picked as getaway day for the first group, which will be composed of rookies and possibly Pitchers Leroy Parmelee and Clay Bryant, who are troubled by wildness. Before the regulars arrive the rookies will be treated to instructions from Manager Charley Grimm, Coaches Tony Lazzeri, Red Corriden, and Roy Johnson, and Captain Gabby Hartnett.

Along with the Sox, the Cubs will have two other big league teams, the Pittsburgh Pirates and the St. Louis Browns, to contend with before going into the championship season. Charley Grimm's fellows are ticketed for three games with the Pirates, all at Los Angeles. They won't see the Browns until April 7 and then will be with them for seven battles, four at San Antonio, Tex., and the others at

3 CHARITIES GET $30,535 FROM ALL-STAR GAME

4 Year Total Raised to $108,616.

BY ARCH WARD.

Checks totaling $30,535.91 have been mailed by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., to the United Charities, Catholic Charities, and Jewish Charities of Chicago. The amount represents the net proceeds of the 1937 All-Star football game, played at Soldiers' field Sept. 1 between the College All Americans and the Green Bay Packers. The profits were divided equally among the three charities.

This is the second highest amount the All-Star game has netted for charity. In 1936 the figure was $32,143.41. Receipts at this year's game were the largest since the game was originated in 1934, but expenses also were the greatest. There were 66 players on the 1937 squad, as compared with 53 in 1936.

The four games have raised $108,616.46 for Chicago's three leading charity organizations. From the beginning the profits have been shared equally by the three.

Plan for Next Year's Game.

The 1938 All-Star game will be played at Soldiers' field on or about Sept. 1. It will bring together the All Americans, chosen by the fans of the nation, and the Washington Redskins, paced by the brilliant Sammy Baugh. Washington is the first team from the eastern division of the National Professional league to qualify for the contest.

The All-Star game, which annually attracts 80,000, brings more business to Chicago than any other sporting event of the year. Tickets for last year's contest were sold to fans in 24 states. Loop hotels, restaurants, and railroads find their facilities taxed to handle the out of town visitors.

Every one connected with the game except TRIBUNE employés is compensated. The head coach receives $1,000 and each of the assistants $500. The college players each get $150. All expenses, both of players and coaches, are paid for out of the receipts. Members of the college squad retain their uniforms, blankets, and sweaters as mementoes of the game.

Pros Guaranteed Training Costs.

The professional team is guaranteed nothing except its training expenses. If the game returns a profit, as it always has, the pro club receives a share of the net proceeds on a graded scale. The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., has complete charge of all details of operation.

The four games have resulted in one victory for the All-Stars, one victory for the professionals, and there have been two ties. The Chicago Bears were held to a scoreless tie in the original game, in 1934, but squeezed out a 5 to 0 decision in 1935. The Detroit Lions played a 7 to 7 tie with the 1936 All-Stars, but Green Bay went down in defeat, 6 to 0, in the 1937 encounter, due largely to the expert work of Sammy Baugh and Gaynell Tinsley, who completed a forward pass for the only score of the battle.

EASTERN STARS LEAVE

The players, selected from fifteen schools in the east, midwest, and south, were issued equipment and held their only pre-departure practice at Dyche stadium in Evanston yesterday. Head Coaches Andy Kerr of Colgate and Bernie Bierman of Minnesota expressed satisfaction with the condition of the players. Kerr and Bierman are being assisted by Fred Swan of Temple.

The workout yesterday was an easy one, consisting principally of signal drill. Several practices are planned en route.

WINTER ON THE FARM

In his article in the want ad section of today's Tribune Bob Becker writes about such farm activities as smoking turkeys, tramping the woods in search of signs of small wild animals, and baiting for pesky rats which are attacking a chicken house. You will enjoy reading this interesting farm chronicle. You will find it in the want ad section.

Indiana Star Is Awarded Tribune Trophy

Corbett Davis, Indiana full back, has been awarded the Tribune Silver Football trophy, voted annually to the Western conference player judged of most value to his team. Davis' selection by a committee of Big Ten coaches and officials gives Indiana the honor for the second straight year. Vernon Huffman was voted the trophy in 1936. Cecil Isbell, Purdue half back, was one vote behind Davis in this year's balloting.

BEARS RALLY TO TRIUMPH, 28-13, OVER ALL-STARS

Memhips, Tenn., Dec. 18.—[Special]—After trailing by a touchdown in the first quarter, the Chicago Bears, western division champions in the National league, scored four times to defeat a team of All-Stars, 28 to 13, in a shrine benefit before 2,000 today.

It was a pass by the All-Stars, however, which provided the chief entertainment. Green Bay's heralded passing combination, Arnie Herber to Don Hutson, put them in the lead in the first quarter. With the ball on the Bears' 42 yard line Herber hurled a fifteen yard pass to Hutson, who ran twenty-seven yards to the first touchdown.

Bears Start Moving.

Chicago scored three minutes later when Sam Francis plowed through center for thirty yards to the All-Stars' 20 yard line. Just as he was tackled he lateraled to Lester McDonald, who went the rest of the way. Jack Manders kicked the extra point from placement.

The Bears forged ahead in the second quarter, scorin- twice, once on a one yard plunge by Keith Molesworth to climax a twent- yard drive, and again on a twenty-five yard pass, Ray Buivid to Molesworth. Buivid and McDonald kicked the extra points.

Another pass, twenty yards from Chuck Duval to Buster Poole, New York Giants end, provided the All-Stars with their second touchdown. Dale Burnett, another Giant, added the extra point.

Feathers Tosses Pass.

Beattie Feathers, a former University of Tennessee star, passed to Ed Manske in the third quarter, and

Federal Court Denies Right of U. S. to Tax Football Ticket

New Orleans, La., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals held in a far reaching decision today that the federal government had nc right to collect the 10 per cent admission tax to football games or other athletic events at state operated universities.

The case was brought up in an appeal by the collector of internal revenue for the district of Georgia from an injunction against collection of the tax from the University System of Georgia, which operates the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech.

The majority opinion held that the regents of the University System of Georgia formed a constituted department of the state of Georgia and said the tax on those institutions was condemned under the clause which bars the federal government from taxing state governments, or vice versa.

Appeal Is Expected.

A minority opinion written by Judge Hutcheson, dissenting, held that it would be a lack of uniformity to exempt state institutions and tax nonstate universities whose teams play each other and engage in post-season games such as the Rose Bowl, Sugar Bowl, Cotton Bowl and Orange Bowl.

Bureau of Internal revenue officials in Washington said the decision probably would be appealed to the United States Supreme court, adding $119,332 was involved in four pending suits brought by the state universities of Georgia, Iowa, West Virginia and Minnesota.

Aside from the question of the federal government taxing a state, another chief issue was whether football players put on a show for the favor of the public like actors, professional boxers, or whether they perform as amateurs furthering the cause of education.

"An Educational Function."

The court agreed that college athletics was performed as a feature of education which reached back to the times of the ancient Greeks. The opinion of the majority said that although there had been abuse through subsidizing of athletes, the practice was abating.

Under the law, admissions to events whose proceeds go exclusively to religious, charitable and educational causes are exempt from the tax. The court held that where any college hires athletes the admissions are subject to tax.

"It must be admitted," stated the majority opinion, "that there has existed in college football a practice, through the use of scholarships or other things, of securing football players rather than students. This abuse has been due more to enthusiastic alumni than to college authorities, but it has in general been corrected. There can be no such charge made against the management of the regents as exhibited in this record.

"Many Problems."

"There are also many problems connected with such games that have led some institutions to reject them as undesirable, but their value in the educational program is for the judgment of the educational authorities.

"Where the state government includes them as useful and incidentally uses them as a source of income it is not for the federal tax officers nor for the judges to overrule their decision."

INDIANA STAR DEFEATS ISBELL BY ONE POINT

Heap Third; Gmitro Fourth.

Surprised, Pleased

CORBETT DAVIS of Indiana, when informed yesterday he had been awarded The Chicago Tribune's most valuable player trophy, was so surprised he was almost speechless.

"I don't know what to say that possibly could show my gratitude," he exclaimed. "It's the greatest honor that ever has come to me. It's the dream of every Big Ten player. And to think it has come to me! Gee, can you beat that! There were some great athletes among the ten chosen as candidates for the trophy and I didn't think I had a chance. Thanks to everybody!"

Davis is a member of the All-Eastern squad which assembled in Evanston yesterday preparatory to departure for San Francisco for the annual Shrine charity game against a team of western college stars.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Corbett Davis, Indiana universtiy full back, has been chosen the football player most valuable to his team in the Western conference in the closest vote in the 14 years of the award, which annually has been sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Davis is the third Indiana player in history to win the actual size silver football, emblematic of the honor.

Davis was nominated the most valuable player on the Indiana university eleven by his teammates. He was chosen the most valuable in the entire conference by 23 electors who gave him a total of 21 points. Cecil Isbell, triple threat star from Purdue university, who climaxed a three year career for the Boilermakers in the annual Purdue-Indiana game, received 20 points and finished in second place.

Not until the final vote for first and second place awards was received yesterday was the result ascertained.

Electors Cast Two Votes.

Each of the 23 electors—the ten Western conference coaches, ten officials, Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics for the Big Ten; Arch Ward, sports editor of THE TRIBUNE, and the writer—cast a vote for first place and for second place. Each first place vote counted two points; second place one point.

Davis received seven first place votes and seven second place votes for a 21 point total. Isbell was first choice of nine electors, but he received only two second place votes.

Don Heap, captain and left half back of the Northwestern university eleven, was third. During the early voting Heap ran with the leaders, but he failed to receive support in the final days. Heap was second choice of six men and he was paired more frequently with Davis than with Isbell.

Rudy Gmitro Fourth.

Rudy Gmitro, versatile back field star of Minnesota, finished in fourth position and Bob Lannon, veteran Iowa end, was fifth. All of the ten most valuable players nominated by their teammates received support in the election.

The list of the ten most valuable players in the conference, arranged alphabetically by universities, follows:

Chicago—Kendall Petersen.
Illinois—Jack Berner.
Indiana—Corbett Davis.
Iowa—Bob Lannon.
Michigan—Ralph Heikkinen.
Minnesota—Rudy Gmitro.
Northwestern—Don Heap.
Ohio State—Ralph Wolf.
Purdue—Cecil Isbell.
Wisconsin—Howard Weiss.

Each of these players will receive a white gold miniature football as an award from THE TRIBUNE. The actual size silver football will be presented to Davis at a time to be designated by Z. C. Clevenger, director of ath-

De Correvont to Pick College Early in 1938

Bill De Correvont, Austin High school's football star, will not announce the university he will attend until after his return from the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's day. De Correvont, who will be the guest of Warner Brothers at the New Year's day game between California and Alabama, made the announcement last night after his appearance on a nation-wide program was canceled by the National Broadcasting company.

De Correvont had been asked to reveal the school he would attend, but when he refused he was told he was not wanted on the show, which originated in New York. De Correvont was invited to New York, but he declined and was scheduled to speak from the Chicago studios of the National Broadcasting company.

"I was told not to appear on the program unless I would announce on the broadcast what university I had chosen," De Correvont said. "I have not yet decided where I will go, but I expect to know after my return from the coast."

De Correvont will be accompanied on the trip to the Pacific coast by his mother, Mrs. Harriet De Correvont. They will stop in Phoenix, Ariz., to watch the workouts of the Chicago All-Star prep team, which will meet the Arizona All-Stars in Phoenix on New Year's day.

Trammell Knocks Out Matthews in One Round

A BUNCH OF HUSKIES LOOKING FOR A FOOTBALL BATTLE

Cecil Isbell of Purdue gets off a long punt, one of his specialties. He is expected to do a lot of ground gaining, too, when the east stars meet the west. He was runnerup to Davis in the valuable player poll.

California Is TooNearPeak; Coach Worries

Berkeley, Cal., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Coach Leonard B. [Stub] Allison expressed concern today lest the University of California squad reach its physical peak too quickly for the New Year's day Rose Bowl game with Alabama. The squad has had two days of practice.

"After nearly a month's layoff, it was reasonable to expect the boys to be a bit sluggish," Allison explained. "We've just started practice, you might say, and they're running through plays with the zip they showed in midseason.

Must Slow Down.

"In my book that's bad business. They might burn themselves out in practice. It's a case of putting on the brakes because as certain as the sun rises and sets we will have to be at our best for Alabama. If those southern boys don't play inspired football I don't know who does."

While the rest of the town was Christmas shopping the undefeated Californians spent the week-end concentrating on plays from punt formation.

Laterals Are Stressed.

Considerable time has been devoted to laterals off running plays, a phase of attack conspicuous by its absence while California was winning the coast conference championship.

Body contact work took up part of the program. Tackling also came in for attention. All of it was confined to the varsity squad.

THOMAS IS PLEASED

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Coach Frank Thomas, after reviewing one of the longest scrimmages of Alabama's season, today said: "I think we have a good chance to win in the Rose Bowl."

"Our players are all in good condition and we are highly pleased with the fine spirit shown by every man," Thomas said after the last intensive scrimmage the squad will have in preparation for the game.

Forty players, six coaches, and others, bringing to sixty-five the official party, will leave at 10 a. m. Tuesday on Alabama's fifth trip to Pasadena.

SAMMY BAUGH TO WED CO-ED AT TEXAS CHRISTIAN

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—Everything but the date was believed settled tonight for the wedding of Sammy Baugh and Miss Edmonia Smith of Sweetwater, Tex.

Baugh, who forward passed the Washington Redskins to victory over the Chicago Bears last Sunday for the world professional title, returned to Fort Worth this week. He said he wanted to take "Mrs. Baugh" to Honolulu when the Redskins go there next month for an exhibition game.

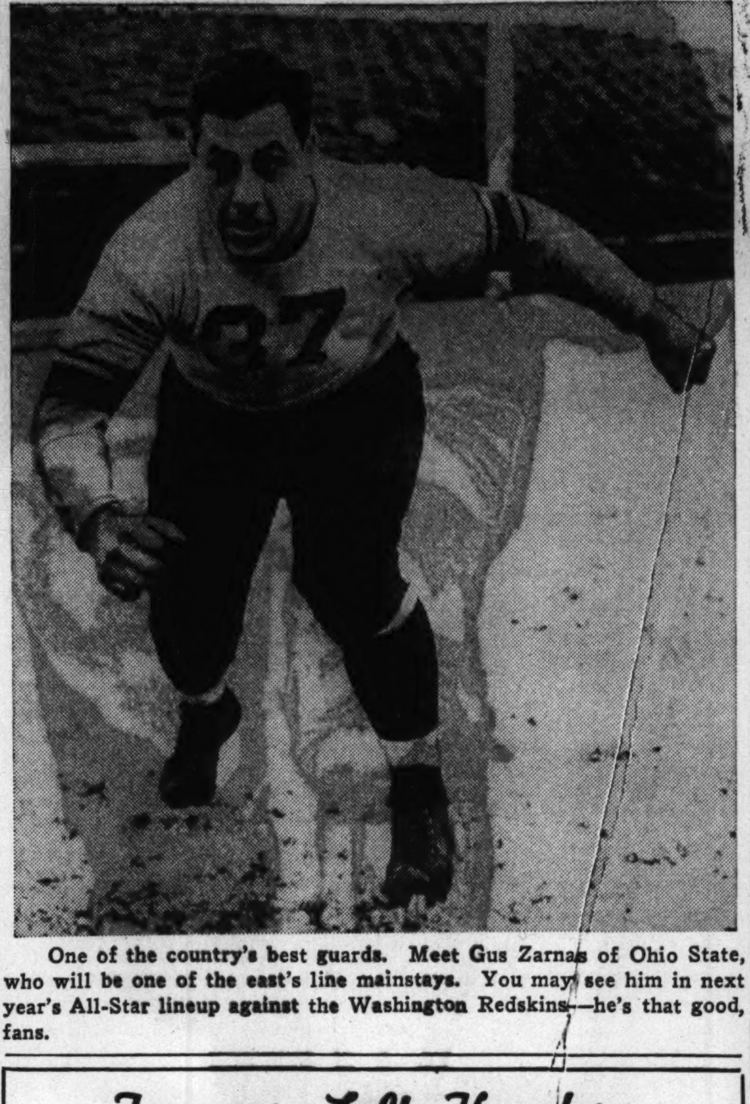
His fiancée, a junior student in education at Texas Christian university, Baugh's alma mater, admitted she would rather be a housewife named Mrs. Baugh than be a school teacher named Miss Smith, and also, that Honolulu in January "must be a lovely place."

ESKIMO ELEVENS FIND FIELD HAS DRIFTED AWAY

King Island, Alaska, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Two Eskimo football teams, preparing for the New Year's day bowl game, were forced to practice indoors today because their playing field had floaed away. The Rev. Bernard Hubbard, who will referee the game, blamed freaky weather.

"There has been no zero weather yet," he said, "and when a gale came along it drove the ice on which the teams had been practicing out of sight. Now there's nothing but water everywhere.'

The Eskimo teams are making excellent progress under the rival coaches, Ed Levin and Ken Chisholm, former Santa Clara stars. They show an aptitude for learning intricate plays.



One of the country's best guards. Meet Gus Zarnas of Ohio State, who will be one of the east's line mainstays. You may see him in next year's All-Star lineup against the Washington Redskins—he's that good, fans.

Baseball Has More than Its Quota; Waddell Leaves the Heritage That Portsiders Are Often Eccentric

[This is the sixth of a series of articles on famous left-handers in the sports world.]

BY FRENCH LANE.

The left-hander may be an oddity, numerically speaking, in most sport competitions, but he's an every day person in baseball. Moreover, he's a welcome person in the national pastime, no matter whether he's a pitcher or merely a fellow who by nature, or cultivation, bats from the left side of the plate.

There was a period when a left armed pitcher was almost unheard of in baseball, and left-handed batters were few. Times have changed. Major league history now is studded with the feats of the unorthodox throwers. And while the southpaw, according to baseball romance, is a fellow of eccentric habits there isnt a big league manager who doesn't desire one with control.

Baseball fans probably would feel they were being kidded if told that in 1880 there was only one left-handed pitcher in the National league. He was John Lee Richmond of the Worcester, Mass., club, the first to turn in a no hit game. Since then left-handers have been in the ascendency.

Waddell Worries Mack, but Amuses Him, Too.

In the last 40 years there have been dozens and dozens of left-handers doing their little bit in the spotlight, but probably none more famous than Rube Waddell, who spent a good portion of his career under the care of the kindly Connie Mack. He was Connie's greatest worry and at the same time Connie's greatest source of amusement.

Perhaps it was the Rube's eccentric actions which since have caused all left-handers to be termed "nutty." Waddell loved to pitch, but before he could pitch someone had to get him inside the ball park. He wasn't always easy to locate. Waddell might see a fish pole on his way to the park and suddenly decide to go fishing—for several days. He was always intrigued by fire engines. Once Mack was shocked beyond words when he saw a brass band going down the main street. It wasn't the band that surprised Connie. It was the leader, who happened to be Waddell. In 1904 Waddell struck out 343 batters, which still stands as a record.

There Have Been Lefties as Catchers, Too.

Many years have rolled by since the big leagues saw a left-handed second baseman, shortstop, third baseman, or catcher, but there have been athletes of this sort. John C. Clements, a left-hander, caught for the Phillies in the late '80's and early '90's. Fred Tenney, also left-handed, caught for the Boston Nationals in 1894, '95, and '96, later becoming a first baseman. Jiggs Donahue was a left-handed catcher before winding up on first base with the White Sox. When Hal Chase was with the Yankees he was tried at second base, but the experiment was soon abandoned. The Phillies once had a left-handed shortstop named Hulen.

The absence of southpaws in the positions mentioned above is easily explained. It is only a matter of the mechanics of the positions. An infielder's chief work consists of throwing to first base. Left-handers, after scooping up a batted ball at third, short, or second, aren't in position to make a hurried throw. But for the same reason a left-handed first baseman finds it easier to make a throw to second base.

A Horse Turns Speaker Into a Left-Hander.

There have been baseball cases which prove that left-handers aren't always born that way. Outfielder Tris Speaker was a right-hander until he suffered an injury to that arm in a fall from a horse. He developed into a great left-handed thrower. Outfielder Eddie Roush started as a right-hander, but the arm went dead. He practiced with his left arm and eventually became an accurate distance thrower. Wallie Stewart became a southpaw pitcher in the American league after an accident had removed a finger from his right hand.

The best earned run record ever produced in the National league was the work of a southpaw. It was made by Ferdy Schupp of the Giant who in 1917 yielded only 0.90 earned runs per game in 190 innings. Rube Marquard southpawed his way to 19 consecutive victories for the Giants in 1912.

Snead's Record 66 Leads in Nassau Open

NASSAU, Bahamas, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., clipped four strokes off par for a record 66 today to lead through the first round of the $3,500 Nassau open golf tournament.

Snead had five birdies and only one bad hole as he took a three stroke lead over the field. Out in 34, one below par, he came back with 32, three under par.

Drops Putts for Birdies.

Snead sank a twenty foot putt for a birdie on the par 4 third and an eight footer for another birdie on the fifth, but on the ninth he three putted from ten feet, missing one from twelve inches, to take a bogey 5.

He resumed his par cracking on the back nine with a six foot putt on the twelfth and niblick approaches within three feet of the cup on the fifteenth and sixteenth—all for birdies.

Willie MacFarlane of Old Oaks, N. Y., who set a tournament record of 266 last year, scored a 69, as did Jack Grout of Hershey, Pa.; Jim Noonan of Chicago, and Bruce Coltart of Haddonfield, N. J. Eight others had par 70s. Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., who won the $10,000 Biltmore open last week, took a 74.

EXPECT MICHIGAN JOB TO BE FILLED AFTER HOLIDAYS

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—Selection of a successor to Harry Kipke, deposed University of Michigan football coach, probably will not be announced until after classes are resumed following the holiday vacation, it was learned today.

Sources close to the university revealed that the board of regents has requested the athletic board to present the name and qualifications of the new coach for ratification. Two regents will retire from the board Dec. 31 and the first meeting of the new board will be held Jan. 10.

DENIES SALE OF BROOKLYN CLUB TO A SYNDICATE

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Judge Stephen W. McKeever, president of the Brooklyn Baseball club, today issued a denial of reports that a syndicate headed by former Mayor James J. Walker was planning to purchase complete control of the club.

The report had Walker heading a group which already had pledged over $2,500,000 for the purpose of buying out the McKeever and Ebbets holdings and installing Walker as its president.

BUDGE BEATEN BY BROMWICH IN SINGLES MATCH

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 18.—(AP)—To 19 year old Jack Bromwich, rising Australian star, fell today the honor of handing Don Budge the first singles defeat of his current tennis tour of the Antipodes.

Bromwich, unknown outside Australia a year ago, whipped Budge, the world's No. 1 amateur, 6-2, 6-3, 8-10, 6-4, in the final match of an exhibition team series which Australia won, four to one. Earlier in the day, Gene Mako, Budge's teammate, had dropped a 6-0, 6-4, 6-4 decision to Adrian Quist in the match that clinched the series.

Fourth 1937 Defeat.

Budge's defeat was only the fourth the California star has suffered in a brilliant 1937 campaign, during which he not only won the British and American championships but led America's successful drive to regain the Davis cup. He dropped an exhibition match to Henner Henkel of Germany in Chicago, 6-4, 10-8, and lost two matches to Bryan Grant last January.

Although scored in a series in which nothing in particular was at stake, Bromwich's victory indicated the youngster is developing rapidly.

Beaten in Zone Finals.

Bromwich was given a place on Australia's 1937 cup team as a reward for his spectacular showing in the Australian tournament when he eliminated Jack Crawford in the semi-finals and carried Vivian McGrath to five sets in the final.

Illness of McGrath and Adrian Quist gave Bromwich his chance in the North American zone finals against the United States but the youngster was beaten both by Bryan M. Grant and Budge in singles.

Manske ran thirty-six yards for the last touchdown. Manders again place kicked the extra point.

Davis Elected Most Valuable; Isbell Second

letics at Indiana university. This customarily has taken place between the halves of a conference basketball game.

Huffman Winner Last Year.

In winning this year's trophy, Davis follows Vernon Huffman of Indiana, winner last year, and Chuck Bennett, who received the award in 1928. Although Indiana thus has become the first university to have received the honor three times, Indiana never has won a conference title.

In the current campaign, Indiana finished third with three victories and two defeats. But the Hoosiers upset Ohio State, 10 to 0, and thus prevented the Buckeyes from sharing the 1937 conference championship with Minnesota. The Gophers defeated Indiana, 6 to 0, in the opening Big Ten game for each team. Then Indiana defeated Illinois, Ohio State, and Iowa before losing the final game of the season to Purdue, 13 to 7. Indiana won two nonconference games from Centre college and Cincinnati, but lost, 7 to 0, to Nebraska, when the Cornhuskers scored on the first play from scrimmage and successfully defended that advantage.

Davis, a 200 pound 5 foot 11 inch full back, was an outstanding factor in all of Indiana's games. His line plunging and threat of a plunge made the passing of Frank Filchock more effective. The two figured in nearly every offensive movement and Davis, with 30 points, led the eleven in scoring.

Catches Sixteen Passes.

Among Davis' achievements for the season:

He caught sixteen passes for a total gain of 255 yards.

He carried the ball 130 times for a total gain of 417 yards and an average of 3.2 yards on each play.

He played in every game, competing for sixty minutes in four of them.

More important, perhaps, Davis was regarded as the best defensive player on the Indiana squad. He backed up the line with driving tackles, and this brought him the nomination of most valuable to his team over George [Sparky] Miller, the center, whose field goal defeated Iowa and whose other field goal of the campaign started the scoring against Ohio State.

Davis went to Indiana from Lowell High school, Lowell, Ind. He played in 1934 and 1935, but an arm injury prevented him from competing in 1936 on the team which Vernon Huffman led to a first division berth in the conference. Completely recovered from this injury, Davis was the bulwark of the Indiana back field this fall.

Although Davis did not score against Purdue this year, he was the leading ground gainer of both elevens and he was responsible for a large share of Indiana's fourteen first downs. He was also adept at breaking up enemy passes.

Wants to Coach.

Davis will be graduated in June and he expects to seek a coaching position. At Lowell High school, where he started his football career, Davis played at tackle, but in his senior year he was shifted to full back where he has been stationed ever since.

Cecil Isbell unquestionably has been one of the great half backs of the Big Ten during his three years of play. In eight games this fall, Isbell gained 503 yards in the 115 times he carried the ball. Isbell and Clem Woltman, right tackle, led the Boilermakers in the number of minutes played.

Last year, when a junior, this star from Houston, Tex., paired with John Drake to form one of the most dangerous offensive combinations in conference history. It is unusual perhaps that last year Drake lost the most valuable player award to Huffman of Indiana as Isbell lost it this year to Davis. This year's vote, however, was much closer. Neither Purdue nor Wisconsin ever has been accorded the silver football award, for it has been the misfortune of their candidates to have been faced by the most formidable opposition.

Against Indiana this fall, in addition to figuring in both touchdowns, just as he did in 1936 when he and Huffman accounted for the 20 to 20 tie—all by passes—Isbell averaged 43 yards on his kicking. Isbell passed for the touchdown against Northwestern and another pass accounted for the 7 to 7 tie this fall with Wisconsin.

But He's in Hall of Fame.

Isbell conceivably might have won the silver football a year ago had he been nominated, but Drake, a senior, received that nomination by the Boilermakers. It was his misfortune this fall to lose the award by one point. There can be no question, however, of his place in the Big Ten hall of fame.

Among the other candidates for the silver football, Ralph Wolf, Ohio State center, and co-captain of the Buckeyes, received strong support, as did Howie Weiss, Wisconsin full back, whom the Badger players regarded as most important in their campaign which gave them a tie with Northwestern, Michigan, and Purdue for fourth place in the conference standings.

REPRESENTATIVES TO INSPECT ROSE BOWL ON JAN. 1

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Members of a house military appropriations subcommittee plan to inspect Pasadena's Rose Bowl, and oddly on New Year's day when Alabama and California meet in football.

Representative Starnes [D., Ala.], a member of the group, said they intended to inspect a number of army posts in the central west and on the coast during the holidays.

"We're going to try to sandwich in an inspection of the Rose Bowl, too," he added, "the day my alma mater whips California."

PRO FOOTBALL ATTENDANCE HITS 1,176,476 TOTAL

National League Winds Up Profitable Season.

An attendance record of 1,176,476 was hung up for the 1937 season by the National Professional Football league, but owners vision even better results. A majority of the league's ten clubs are now on a profit making basis, and the cities which lost money last season only need a winning club to get out of the red.

The biggest loss was sustained by the Cleveland club, making its debut in the league. In five games at home the Rams drew the league's lowest attendance, 44,500, and lost approximately $30,000, but the owners are making strong efforts to strengthen the club.

The New York Giants led all clubs in home attendance, playing to 260,000 in seven games at the Polo Grounds. In the west the Chicago Bears were the biggest drawing card, attracting 155,000 persons to Wrigley field in six games.

Easterners Make Money.

Every club in the east with the exception of Philadelphia showed a profit, while in the west only Cleveland and the Chicago Cardinals failed to make money. The Cardinals' losses were estimated at $8,000, the lowest they've been in years.

Attendance records for single games were broken by five clubs. The Giants-Redskins battle drew 58,285, largest crowd ever to see any kind of football game at the Polo Grounds. The Bears-Green Bay game at Wrigley field set a new mark of 44,974. Other records were 34,000 for the Redskins-Green Bay game at Washington, 21,311 for the Detroit-Green Bay game at Detroit, and 17,553 for the Green Bay-Detroit game at Green Bay. All of these were capacity crowds.

Carl Storck, vice president and treasurer of the National league, reported "the league experienced the greatest financial year in history."

A Free Scoring Game.

The professionals are making their own fans, a different type than the collegiate spectator. The professional fan wants action, free scoring, and wide-open play, and the coaches in the National league cater to him by stressing the attack.

In the season's windup the professionals scored twenty-six touchdowns in three important games. The Chicago Bears beat their intracity rivals, 42 to 28, and on the same day the Washington Redskins thumped the New York Giants, 49 to 14. In the playoff game for the title the Redskins outscored the Bears, 28 to 21.

Home attendance, number of games, and the largest single home crowd for each club follows:

EAST.
New York	260,000	7	58,825
Washington	140,000	6	34,000

Cleveland	44,500	5	16,000
Totals	1,176,476

MANDERS LEADS SCORERS

Jack Manders, Chicago Bears, led 104 National Football league players in scoring for the 1937 season with five touchdowns, fifteen points after touchdowns, and eight field goals for sixty-nine points. This was four points less than Earl [Dutch] Clark of Detroit scored last season in first place. Clark finished fourth this year. Manders was second a year ago with sixty-two points, but holds the league record with seventy-nine points, scored in 1934.

The individual total for field goals exceeded by one the totals made by Manders and Armand Niccolai of Pittsburgh last year, when each kicked seven placements. Riley Smith, Washington Redskins, was the leading maker of points after touchdowns, with twenty-two, which surpassed the total of nineteen kicked last year by Clark. The statistics:

Anderson and Young were the main scoring factors in this drive, which enabled Purdue to coast for the remainder of the game. Each scored six baskets during the first half, which ended 35 to 20.

De Paul came back courageously after the intermission, but the Boilermakers never let the situation get out of hand. With Bob Neu and Ed Norris throwing accurately the Blue Demons cut their opponents' advantage to 42 to 33 at one time. Then a Purdue spurt ran it to 48 to 33 and the threat was over.

ILLINOIS WINS, 60-45

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Illinois' basketball team, co-champion of the Big Ten, made a successful eastern debut tonight, turning back the heretofore unbeaten St. John's quintet of New York, 60 to 45, before a crowd of 14,933 in Madison Square Garden.

Slow to get under way and faced by Ralph Dolgoff's sharpshooting, the Illini trailed until the little St. John's guard was waved out on four personal fouls after counting 14 points on seven field goals in 14 minutes. The invaders, with lanky Lewis Dehner setting the pace, then swung into high and pulled away to a 32 to 25 lead at the half.

The Big Ten quintet continued its fast pace in the final period with every member of the team sharing in the scoring. Dehner led the attack with 16 points, six of which came on free throws in the first half, while Bill Hapac had 15.

The score made by Illinois and the combined score of the two fives were the highest in four years of college basketball in the garden. In the first half of the double header City college won its fourth straight game, defeating St. Joseph of Philadelphia, 49 to 38.

CHICAGO BEATS ARMOUR

With reserves doing most of the scoring, Chicago's Maroons defeated Armour Tech, 45 to 32, last night at the Midway fieldhouse. It was the second straight victory for the revived Maroons. The use of 22 men, 11 by each team, made the contest a general tryout, and, in the latter stages, a scramble.

Chicago led all the way. Tech stayed in the battle chiefly because Forward Bill O'Brien scored 15 points.

CALLISON QUITS AS U. OF OREGON FOOTBALL COACH

Eugene, Ore., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—The University of Oregon sought a new football coach today after the resignation of Prince Gary Callison. His resignation was handed to the university athletic board yesterday and he said his action was final. The board accepted it.

Callison's resignation followed a month of student clamor for his discharge. Three weeks ago, while Callison and his squad were in southern California, students here organized the C. C. C. C.—Can Coach Callison club.

The university's football team, however, unanimously urged retention of Callison, who was discharged by the university in 1935, but was reinstated after he demanded a hearing. Callison was center on the team that lost to Harvard, 7 to 6, in the Rose bowl game of 1919.

30 LAP EVENT HEADS MIDGET AUTO CARD

What promises to be the best auto racing card of the season from a competitive standpoint will be offered tonight at the 124th Field Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, where the regular drivers will strive to protect their championship positions against five newcomers. The races will start at 8:30 p. m.

The first thirty fastest cars, as indicated in tonight's racing, will be eligible for the 100 lap race, Lieut. A. J. Strak, general manager of the races, announced.

MAJOR ELEVENS PLAY ONLY 34 TIES IN 676 CONTESTS

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Only thirty-four of the 676 major college football games played this year ended in ties, W. S. Langford, secretary of the intercollegiate football rules committee, revealed today.

"Rainy weather, which shackles offensive power, probably accounted for at least half of those ties," Langford said. "These figures do not support the charge that defense has outstripped offense in football.

"On the contrary," Langford pointed out, "when ties constitute only 5 per cent of the total games played, I see no reason for restricting the defense by limiting it to six men on the line of scrimmage. Clever coaches can make an attack go against a 7-2-2, a 6-2-2-1, or a 5-3-2-1 defense. If not, they can always punt."

Y. Two triumphs today, 127-51 and 120-1, sent Greenleaf's advantage soaring to 876-201.

Only Three Boxing, Mat Shows Carded

A boxing show at Marigold Gardens and a wrestling program at White City tomorrow, and a mat card at Rainbow Fronton Wednesday, are the only events on this week's fight schedule.

Al Nettlow, 1934 Chicago Golden Gloves featherweight, competing professionally as a lightweight under the direction of the Catholic Youth organization, and Larry Greb of Milwaukee are rivals in the ten round headliner at Marigold.

McMillen Meets Von Schacht.

Nettlow will be meeting Greb for the third time, the latter winning each of their previous fights by a technical knockout. Nettlow asked for the return bout. He is confident that these setbacks were a mistake.

In their first bout the C. Y. O. boxer lost in the fourth round March 1 when he was disqualified for going down without being hit. He was defeated in seven rounds in their next battle June 2 because of a cut eye. Both matches were held at Milwaukee.

Greb Knocks Out Sharkey.

Between their two matches Greb knocked out Ray Sharkey March 19 and Frankie Terranova April 16, both bouts being held at Majestic arena on the west side. Larry also knocked out Kid Sila Aug. 17, Al George Oct. 5, and lost to Orville Drouillard Nov. 12. All three combats were fought in Milwaukee.

Nettlow also whipped Terranova April 27 and Roger Bernard April 5 in Greb's home town. Since last June the Chicago boxer has scored five victories—over Augie Kluborg July 27, Harry Booker Aug. 17, Carl Fox Sept. 17, Varias Milling Oct. 6, and again Nov. 16. Supporting matches tomorrow:

Harvey Woods vs. Mike Battalino [5], lightweights.
Willie Joyce vs. Sam Scully [4], featherweights.
Tom Kenneally vs. Lou Campbell [4], heavyweights.
Eddie Helstrom vs. Kurt Kreb, lightweights.

Yule Tree Has Memories for Outdoorsman

BY BOB BECKER.

With the approach of Christmas thousands of American homes will have green decorations in them. Green wreaths appear in the windows of our homes; green mistletoe is brought up from the south; and the deep rich green of the holly also contributes to the scheme of our holiday decoration.

From the north comes our green Christmas trees . . . graceful, fragrant balsams and spruces which stay in our homes for some time. This use at Christmas time of something green from the woods is centuries old. In fact, all of us who put holly, evergreens, trees, and mistletoe in our homes are helping to perpetuate a custom so old that it is lost in religious observances antedating the Christian era.

It Brings Outdoor Memories, Too.

To the outdoorsman who has known the pleasure of a flickering camp fire in the north country, or ventured on faint trails in the northern wilderness, the Christmas tree is more than a beautiful symbol of the holiday season. It is a living messenger bringing memories of delightful days in the outdoors.

When we set up our little balsam tree near the fireplace and decorate it with all the silvery, flashing trinkets that contrast so beautifully against the dark green of the tree, we invariably think how much a similar tree will mean this week to those who live in the snowblown north country far from brightly lighted churches, choirs singing Christmas carols, and cheery greetings from many friends. The long cold night of the north country is inhospitable and cheerless because there is little sun or daylight to brighten the landscape at Christmas. But inside the warm cabins in the north will be standing Christmas trees . . . true symbols of the day and the enduring quality of the spirit and significance behind every Christmas. We think this week about that young Northwest Mountie in a distant corner of a Canadian province who will have only his faithful dog for company on Christmas. We can imagine how a Christmas tree [simple as it may be] will brighten his cabin during the holidays.

Tree Has Other Associations.

Our Christmas tree brings from the land of snow and forests other pictures and associations. The beauty of a cedar swamp after a fresh snow that leaves cottony mantle on each green tree. . . . Mike's dog team mushing on a drifted trail through the hushed forest and across frozen lakes with the last mail from that tiny postoffice near his cabin . . . the valley of the Christmas trees near the Spanish river where the moose have yarded up for the winter . . . that lonely outpost we once visited near the Yukon-Alaska border where the boys are snowed in for the winter and where the Indians will trudge through the snow to the trading post to celebrate Christmas around a tree . . . the fur buyer and his dog team who will be looking this week for a snow banked cabin, a warm fire, and somebody to talk to on Christmas so that the day will seem less lonely.

Walthour-Crossley, German Team in Tie for Bike Lead

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The American team of Jimmy Walthour and Al Crossley stole a lap to go into a first place tie with Gustav Kilian and Heinz Vopel, German teammates, as Buffalo's international six day bicycle race went into its last 24 hours tonight. The Belgian team of Gerard Debaets and Tino Reboli moved up into a second place tie with Jerry Rodman and Jules Audy.

AMERICANS PAY SECOND VISIT TO HAWKS TONIGHT

Johnson, Hooley Smith Added to Their Roster.

Although the average age of the Americans makes them the oldest team in the league, what the veterans lack in physical ability is more than made up in hocky brains.

Since the New York sextet opened the season with the Hawks by humiliating them, 3 to 0, they have added two of hocky's best known players to their roster. Ching Johnson, 200 pound defense player who was Lester Patrick's main stay for ten years as a rear guardsman, is now performing in a like position for the Americans. Hooley Smith, one of the greatest defensive forwards in the game, was obtained by purchase from the Boston Bruins after the season's start.

Acquires Robertson from Detroit.

Happy Day, another old timer, who played for ten seasons with Connie Smythe's Maple Leafs and who joined the Americans this season, is out of the game because of injuries. Happy Emms, who plays either a forward position or at defense with equal facility, is performing in Day's place.

Probably Dutton's most important move this season was acquiring Earl Robertson, hero of the Detroit victory in the Stanley cup series last spring. Robertson, who replaced Normie Smith in the Wings' nets in the April series, has been of inestimable value to the Americans in their early season drive, more than holding his own with the more experienced net minders of the league.

Of Dutton's three forward lines, the one most feared is the Carr-Chapman-Schriner string, which has been the most consistent point making trio in the league for three seasons and is performing well this season.

Nears 300 Point Mark.

Not to be overlooked is the line which has Nels Stewart as its center. Stewart, the most spectacular player on paper, if his record is perused, is nevertheless one of the most unspectacular players on the ice. Big, but deceptively slow, he is tough at close range with his power, catlike speed, and accurate shooting. Stewart, who holds all records for scoring, is within five points of the 300 mark.

LEAFS, 3; AMERICANS, 2

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Buzz Boll led the Toronto Maple Leafs back into first place in the Canadian section of the National Hocky league tonight, scoring two goals as the Leafs whipped the New York Americans, 3 to 2, before 10,478.

The Americans, badly outplayed in the first two periods and trailing 2 to 0, came back in the third period to score twice, Eddie Wiseman and Nels Stewart accounting for the goals. But Boll had sandwiched his second goal in between these two and it was this point which gave the Leafs victory.

Expect Chicago Meeting to Break Record.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Five thousand teams—or 25,000 individuals—is the goal set for the 38th annual tournament of the American Bowling congress in the Coliseum, where the world series of the tenpin sport will be held for 34 days starting March 3. And, judging by the way reservations are piling up in the Milwaukee offices of A. B. C. Secretary Elmer Baumgarten, that total will be reached long before the entry list is closed on Feb. 1.

When the 1938 tournament was awarded Chicago officials boasted they would exceed the record of 4,017 teams, established last year at New York. Al Lea, president of the Chicago Tournament company, said yesterday that 3,000 teams already have deposited their entry fees, and before the first of the year he expects the old record to be broken.

The 1938 tournament, which will be held on 40 new alleys in the Coliseum, will have entries from as far away as Hawaii and also the largest delegation that ever came from the west coast. The meet was inaugurated in Chicago in 1900, with 41 teams competing. Chicago also was host in 1912, 1924, and 1929, and in each of those years sent the entries soaring to new heights.

Chicago bowlers always have been well represented at A. B. C. tournaments even though on occasion they have had to travel halfway across the country to compete. With the tournament right in their own back yard, Chicagoans, whether experts or only fair bowlers, are deluging headquarters with entries. Nearly every one wants to be a champion in bowling, and, of course, the prize money is quite an incentive, too!

Windy City League.

Windy City Major league teams will go into the next phase of their competition tomorrow night with a three way tie for first place. Those in the deadlock at 27 won and 15 lost are the Budweisers, O'Keefe Coals, and the J. M. Kralovecs. Tomorrow's schedule:

Burlington Zephyrs vs. De Young Fuel; Mineralites vs. G. and W. Mill Farm; Vogel Brothers vs. O'Keefe Coals; McKesson's Old Crow vs. Serrano Cigarros; Strachan Coals vs Whitecaps; Blazek Tailors vs. Soper Brothers; Town club of Cicero vs. Budweisers; Boyar-Schultz vs. J. M. Kralovecs.

Randolph League.

Although they won two out of three games from Boyar-Schultz, the Union Printers lost ground in the Randolph league. At the same time the leading Mineralites took three games and so did the Budweisers and Birk Brothers. All these teams except the Mineralites totaled more than 3,100. Wolf of the Printers led the individuals with 705.

On North Side Alleys.

For the third straight week the Joseph L. Gills were high in the Gold Coast Major league. They gathered in 3,167 to go with the 3,166 and 3,167 of two previous weeks for an average of 1,065. George Notz led the Gills with 771, and Jack Stack with 692 paced the Keeleys, who took one of three games from the Gills. Joe Fischer with 697 led Fuller Press to three more victories. . . . Gayety Village and the Alderman Orlikoskis are now tied for first place in the Chicago North Side Traveling league at 24 won and 15 lost. High shooters were Al Krueger, 674; George Eland, 667, and Joe Devore, 650. . . . The twelfth annual Chicago mutual tournament [formerly the Greater Chicago handicap meet] will start Feb. 5 at the Gold Coast. Entries close on Jan. 15. There will be two divisions—scratch and handicap.

On South Side Alleys.

The Dudeck Coals have increased their lead to six games in the South End Traveling league. They're averaging 970. . . . The Auburn Liquors totaled 3,115 and the Morris Buffet shot a game of 1,131 in the Ray Schalk Beverly Major league. Dick Winsberg topped the individuals with 703. . . . Honors in the Bruck Major league went to Bill Marshall, who shot games of 225, 268, and 245 for a 738 series. Milo Weisner knocked off 699. . . . Herman Frey and C. Martin totaled 1,162 to win the Builders Tee club competition at the Stevenson alleys. . . . The leading Haggard and Marcusson team was jolted twice by the San Alto Cigars in the Southwest Industrial league at the Western Recreation. Tom Gaynor, Western Recreation manager, is ill with arthritis.

North End Traveling League.

Frank Kartheiser and the Michelobs hung up a season record in the North End Traveling league when they shot games of 1,137, 1,081 and 1,003 to total 3,221. The previous mark of 3,210 was held by the Schambergers. The Michelobs lost the middle game, however, when the Richter's Sausage team counted 1,107. Lloyd Strouse was high with 716, missing his own record by three pins. Kartheiser was next with 701 and Pete Peterson collected 675.

Classic League.

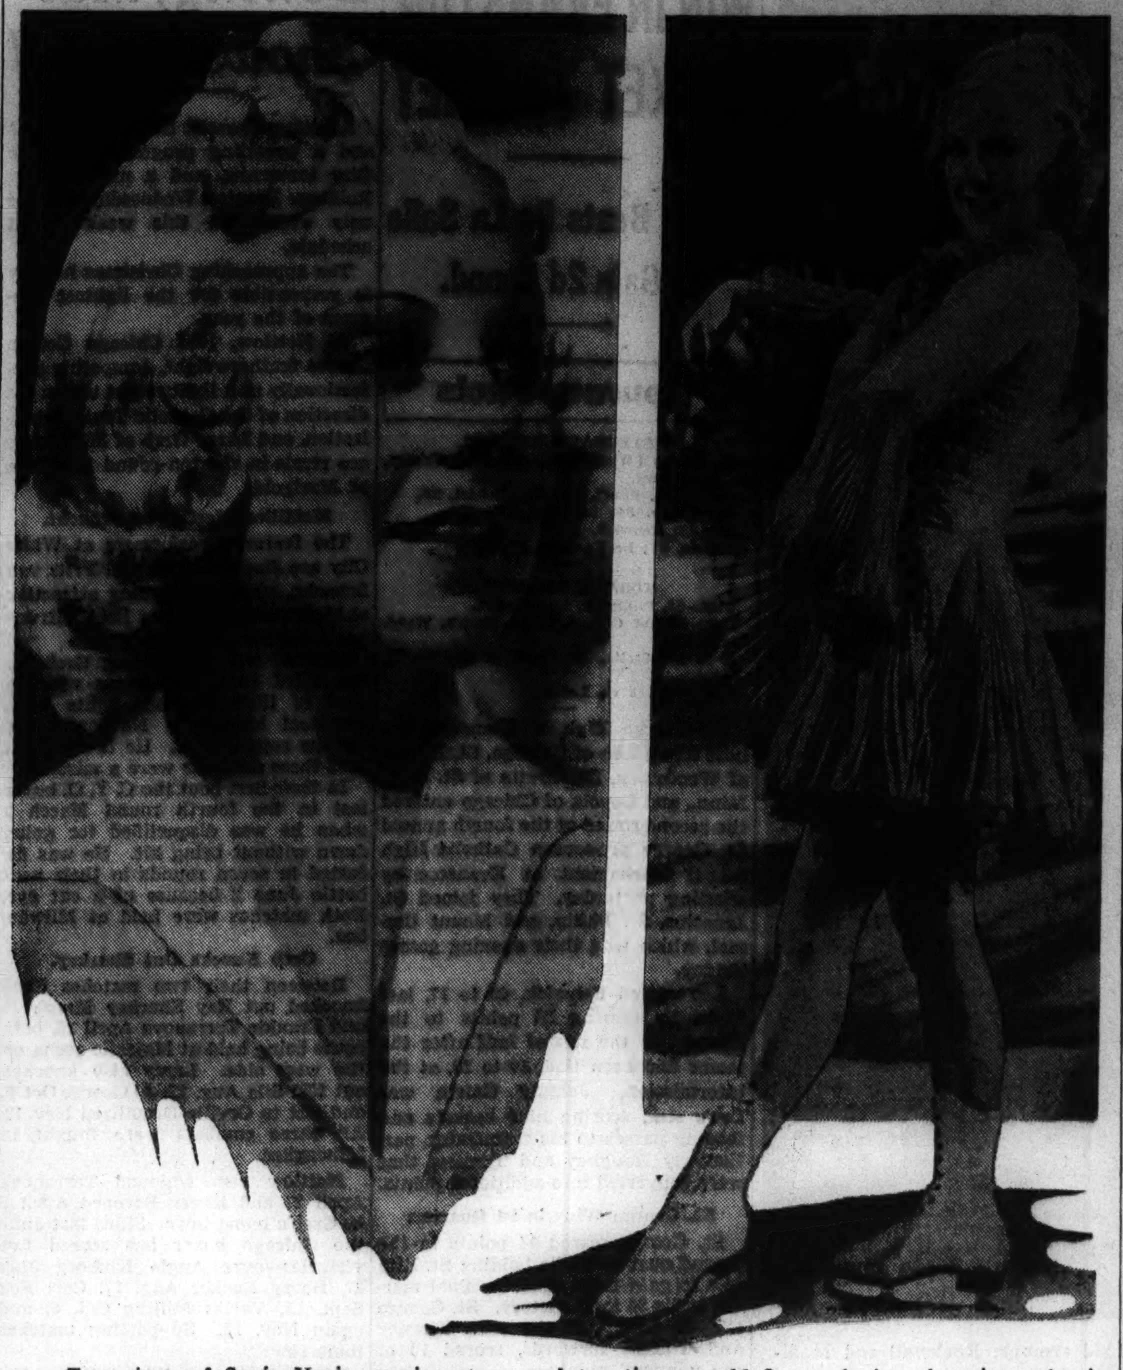
The Baby Ruth Candy-Prager Beer clash will feature the Classic league matches tonight at Jack Samuelson's Arcade, 3947 North Pulaski road. Other matches are:

Oak Leaf Motors vs. Power House Candy, Triangle Shirt vs. Charles H. Weber, Monarch Beer vs. Pabst Blue Ribbon Beer.

About the Women.

More than 100 team entries have been received for the twenty-first annual city women's tournament starting Jan. 8 at the 131 South Wabash alleys. Entries will close on Wednesday. . . . Mrs. Lee Sawyer, with 535, won the Olympia Fields league's sweepstakes at the Stevenson Recreation. Min Fox topped the Bruck Major league with 589. Next were Flo Waterman, 579; Gerda Johnson, 574; [illegible], 563; Kittie Gebler, 555; Pearl Ammon, 551; Laura Reinking, 548, and Eleanor Bergen, 546. . . . Rose Boyle's 553 was high in the [illegible] Ridge Social league.

Sonja and Her Skaters Arrive for Rehersals Tonight



Two views of Sonja Henie, movie actress and ten times world figure skating champion, who is due in Chicago tonight by plane from Hollywood, Cal., with 62 members of her company. Miss Henie and cast will go into rehersal this week for the Hollywood Ice Revue which opens at the Stadium Christmas night. The ice revue is reported to be the most elaborately costumed ever to go on the road.

Sonja Henie to Join Navajos on Air Flight

Pausing momentarily at Albuquerque, N. M., on her plane trip with her ice revue troupe, Sonja Henie will be inducted into the Navajo Indian tribe, according to word received yesterday by T. W. A. officials in Chicago.

Miss Henie and 62 members of the Hollywood Ice Revue, which opens at the Stadium Christmas night, are flying to Chicago in three planes. Miss Henie's party will arrive at the city airport at 11 o'clock tonight.

Sonja will be christened "Ashon Go Sonnie Tin Edelgoie," meaning "graceful young lady who skates on ice" by the Navajo chief and his medicine man. They will be assisted in the ceremonies by 10 members of the Navajo tribe. Miss Henie will be presented with a 100 year old, four colored blanket from the tribe and she will present Has Pai, the chief squaw, with a pair of skates.

Societies Will Greet Her.

Scores of representative Chicagoans, members of Scandinavian-American societies, will greet Miss Henie and members of the revue when they arrive at the city airport tonight.

Capt. Erwin Larsen of the United Norwegian societies and Mrs. Larsen will head a group of Chicagoans of Norwegian birth and descent. Chicago children in native Norwegian costume are expected to join in the welcome to Miss Henie.

As the planes arrive they will draw up in a semicircle on the ramp, a portion of which will be flooded. Miss Henie and members of the troupe in costume will be asked to make a few turns on this improvised rink.

Planes Leave This Morning.

The three planes carrying Miss Henie, her mother; Hugo Quist, her manager; and Arthur Wirtz, vice president of the Chicago Stadium, and the skating stars will leave Hollywood at 11:15 a. m. [C. S. T.]. They are scheduled to cover the 1,800 mile airway to Chicago in approximately 15 hours.

A group of Andy Frain's service ushers in uniform will escort the group as they move into the loop. The ushers will set off fireworks salutes to the skating stars.

Final shooting on Miss Henie's latest motion picture "Happy Landings," held up the departure of the group from Hollywood. Miss Henie decided to travel by air so that her troupe would have ample time this week for rehersals for the ice revue. The revue is reported to be the most elaborately costumed ever to go on the road.

The Windy City Basketball league enters its third week of play with four men's and two women's games on the schedule. This week's games will be played on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at the St. Philip gymnasium, Jackson boulevard and Kedzie avenue.

The Chicago Hebrews, who are tied for the lead with the Chicago Demons and the Cicero Merchants at two victories and no defeats each, meet the latter quintet Thursday night in one of the feature games. The week's schedule follows:

TUESDAY—Bill Bands vs. I. C. Co-Eds [girls]; Hermon Demons vs. Schlosser Bakers; Collegians vs. Millers National.

WHICHCEE TAKES $10,000 STAKE; AMOR BRUJO 5TH

Three Year Old First by 1½ Lengths.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Whichcee, 3 year old gelding owned by Maj. Austin C. Taylor of Vancouver, B. C., won the $10,000 added San Francisco handicap today. Amor Brujo, South American horse, which went to the post a co-favorite with Indian Broom, finished fifth. The time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:44 1-5.

Indian Broom Fourth.

Count Atlas, ridden by Basil James, leading jockey in 1936, ran second. Tick On, 8 year old stakes star, took third. Indian Broom, stablemate of Whichcee and third place horse in the Kentucky Derby last year, finished fourth.

Whichcee, second choice in the betting, paid off at $4.80, $3.20, and $3.00. Count Atlas backers were rewarded with $10.20 and $6.00. Tick On returned $5.40.

Whichcee turned in a performance so impressive that turfmen immediately stamped him as a solid contender for the $100,000 added Santa Anita handicap, for which he is a nominee. The Taylor entry set all the pace. At the stretch turn, Indian Broom drew alongside and they raced head and head until they straightened out for the run to the wire.

Responds in Stretch.

Adams called on his mount at this time and Whichcee responded with a drive that brought an ovation from a closing day crowd of nearly 20,000. As he drew away, Count Atlas moved up, followed by Tick On, to leave Indian Broom behind. Amor Brujo, meanwhile, had raced wide on the far turn and again in the stretch to run himself out of the competition.

Sargazo, Argentine bred thoroughbred, finished well back, as did Rommy, Marynell, and King Saxon.

160 Quintets Play Today in C.Y.O. League

Nineteen sections represented by 160 men's lightweight and heavyweight teams will continue play in the pre-Christmas schedule of the C. Y. O. Basketball league today. Suburban divisions have minor details to straighten out before they begin play in the 1937-'38 season.

Fans will have an opportunity to see champions of the men's divisions in two games at the Mount Carmel High gymnasium, 6428 Dante avenue. St. Elizabeth, last year's heavyweight champion, will be opposed by St. Bride, and St. Laurence, lightweight titleholder, will meet St. Cyril.

North side quintets which will seek their second consecutive victory include Queen of Angels, St. Andrew and St. Timothy. St. Anthony's heavyweights in the west section, runnerup to the south side quintet last season, play Holy Mount at the Cicero stadium.

Play will begin at 1:30 o'clock in most of the gymnasiums with the exception of the contests at St. Philip High school which will start at 6:45 p. m.

Medwick, St. Louis, 156 games; Frank Demaree, Chicago, 154 games, and Burgess Whitehead, New York, 152 games. Paul Waner, 154 games; Stanley Hack, Chicago, 154, and Anthony Cuccinello, Boston, 152, complete the sextet. When Gus Suhr, Pittsburgh, failed to play on June 5, his string of consecutive games came to an end at 822 games, which remains a National league record. His streak began Sept. 11, 1931.

Paul Waner, by making 219 hits, passed the double-century mark for the eighth time in his career, to become the modern record holder, breaking a tie with Rogers Hornsby.

Medwick, with four two base hits on Aug. 4, became the twelfth National leaguer to accomplish this feat, and by smashing out five home runs in three consecutive games tied another record held by many players.

Hartnett, had the longest batting streak, 26 games, during which he went to bat 90 times, making 39 hits for a mark of .433. He began his streak June 29 against St. Louis and was stopped Aug. 5 by Walters of Philadelphia.

Galan, by scoring 14 runs in 11 consecutive games, had the longest run scoring streak of the season. He began it in the first game of June 27, against Brooklyn, and was stopped July 9 by Pittsburgh.

OWEN BEST THIRD BASEMAN

Marvin Owen, Detroit Tiger third baseman acquired by the White Sox in the biggest deal of the winter flesh marts, led American league third basemen in fielding last season, according to official figures released yesterday. Tony Piet, who went to Detroit in the same deal, nominally headed the second basemen, playing errorless ball in thirteen games.

Manager Jim Dykes of the Sox appeared at the head of the list of third basemen with a perfect record in eleven games, but Owen officially was awarded the championship at the position because he fielded .970 in 106 games, making only ten errors on 337 chances.

Team Ranked Sixth.

The White Sox as a team weren't so hot in the fielding department, outranking only the Red Sox and the Athletics. However, they were only five percentage points under the league leading Tigers, and one point behind the world champion Yankees, who finished fifth in the league fielding tables.

Zeke Bonura, who led the first basemen a year ago, finished twelfth in a list of fifteen and last among the regulars who played in more than 100 games. Jimmy Foxx topped the regulars.

Mike Kreevich, lauded all year as the most improved player in the American league, justified the praise by leading all regular outfielders with a mark of .988. Mike played in 138 games, made 401 putouts and thirteen assists and made only five errors.

Three Years Without Error.

Ted Lyons, White Sox veteran, completed his third straight year without an error. Ted's last error was made on Aug. 5, 1934. Since then he has played in 81 games without a bobble, accepting 150 chances during the span.

Luke Appling of the Sox led all shortstops in double play participation, figuring in 111. In 1936 Luke set a new record with 119.

LARGE MIDWEST FIRMS RULED MAINLY IN EAST

Most of Directors in New York.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

As is true of most large railroads, financial control and a majority of the directors of some of the largest manufacturing companies in the middle west are in eastern cities, mostly in New York.

The geographical separation of control by the directors from the actual manufacturing operations frequently tends to make more difficult the maintenance of friendly relations between management and employés, and it may delay decisions by directors with respect to necessary speedy changes in operating methods due to changing conditions.

U. S. Steel Changes System.

The United States Steel corporation—the world's largest steel company—recognizing the handicap of absentee New York management, recently set up a management company which will have full charge of the operations of the corporation's various subsidiaries. The directors of the management company are largely composed of directors of the subsidiary companies and the headquarters are located in Pittsburgh—far from the influence of cold New York finance.

Most of the directors of the General Motors corporation and the Chrysler corporation live in the east. Of the thirty-five General Motors directors, fifteen are residents of the New York area, five of Wilmington, Del.; ten of the Detroit area, and the others are scattered among other cities in this and foreign nations. The executive offices are in New York, although big general offices are maintained in Detroit.

Chrysler Ruled in New York.

Of the Chrysler corporation's 18 directors, 12 live in the New York district and 6 in Detroit. Although a greater degree of control of the Chrysler corporation probably exists in Detroit than in the case of General Motors, Walter P. Chrysler, the most important figure in the company, lives in New York.

The Corn Products Refining company has three of its most important plants in the nation's corn belt, Argo [Chicago], Pekin, Ill., and Kansas City, Mo. Of its 14 directors, 12 live in New York, 1 in Boston, and 1 in Chicago.

The Western Electric company is the largest manufacturer of telephone equipment in the world and its largest manufacturing plant is in Chicago. At one time, before the 1929 depression, this company was Chicago's largest employer. However, not one of the company's fourteen directors lives in Chicago. All give their address as New York City. The Western Electric is a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph company and control is further removed from the west because of the 19 directors of the parent organization 17 live in New York or other eastern cities, 1 lives in Chicago, and 1 in Minnesota.

Others Controled in East.

The American Car and Foundry company is a large company in the railroad equipment business, with 12 plants of which 7 are in the middle west and these have the largest manufacturing capacity of the company's plants. Chicago is the railroad center of the country, but of the 9 directors 8 live in New York City and 1 in Chicago. Presumably, the directors are available to cultivate the friendship of the directors of the railroads, most of whom live in New York.

The Allis Chalmers Manufacturing company is a big middle western company with headquarters in Milwaukee. But of its 12 directors, 6 live in New York or other nearby cities, 4 in Milwaukee, 1 in Chicago, and 1 in North Carolina.

The American Can company has a majority of its big plants in the middle west, with a considerable number in the far west and in the south. Of its 15 directors, 13 live in New York, 1 in Chicago, and 1 in San Francisco.

9 of 11 Live in New York.

The Continental Can company is another concern in the same line which has large manufacturing operations in the middle west, particularly in Chicago. But of its eleven directors, nine live in New York, one in Chicago, and one in San Francisco.

The Detroit Edison company supplies power to the automobile capital. Of its nine directors, five live in Detroit, but four live in New York City.

The B. F. Goodrich company has a big plant in Akron, also its general business office, but the principal office is in New York and of eighteen directors, seven live in New York, four in Akron, two in Chicago, and five in other cities.

The Jewel Tea company carries on most of its operations in the middle west, but of its eight directors four live in New York and four in the Chicago district, and the directors' meetings are held in New York.

SEC Wants Full Rule of Stock Trade

BY HOWARD WOOD.

That Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange commission is not satisfied with the power to regulate securities trading, but hopes to seize actual operating control of such trading, was disclosed yesterday when the gist of an "off the record" talk by him before members of the National Press club in Washington came to light.

W. O. Douglas.

Douglas' talk was made Dec. 2 before a group of members of the press club and their invited guests. Because club rules prevent the use by members of "off the record" speeches the address only yesterday became known in Chicago when an individual who had been in Douglas' audience related the SEC chairman's remarks.

Would Dominate Management.

Douglas' chief point was the contention that the SEC should be empowered to select one-half the members of the governing committee of the New York Stock exchange. Such representation, he pointed out, would make it possible for the SEC to expedite its schemes for administering powers already granted by law.

The SEC head is reported to have explained that, for example, it had taken the commission two years to force the expulsion of Michael J. Meehan, New York broker and trader, from the membership list of the New York Stock exchange. The delay, he said, was due to the fact that the SEC operates under laws which require observance of the "due process" provisions of common law and the constitution of the United States.

Governors' Powers Strong.

Douglas went on to show that the governing board of the New York Stock exchange is not subject to such legal delays in dealing with members of the exchange. For example, it may expel a member after a short hearing and the expelled member, having waived such rights when he was admitted to membership, has no recourse to the courts. In that respect the New York Stock exchange enjoys the prerogatives of a private association or club.

Douglas' hearers drew the inference that 50 per cent representation on the stock exchange governing board would, in effect, give the SEC practically majority control. Only one member of the other half of the board would have to be persuaded or clubbed into camp to make a majority out of the SEC's 50 per cent representation.

Talk Regarded Significant.

Should Douglas be successful in putting over his scheme the SEC would be several jumps ahead of other Washington regulatory agencies, such as the interstate commerce commission, the commodity exchange administration, and the federal trade commission, which regulate various kinds of business but do not actually sit in as members of boards of directors.

Douglas' talk was regarded as significant particularly in view of his recent statement attacking the professional element among members of the New York Stock exchange and threatening to force a "housecleaning" on the exchange. After this attack it was learned that the management of the SEC is coöperating actively with a group of exchange members representing commission house interests. This group was reported to have sought Douglas' aid in forcing election of a new régime at the exchange's next annual election.

O'CONNOR ORDERS BANK RECEIVERS SPEED PAYMENTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—Controler of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor ordered his staf today to speed liquidation of closed national banks so that some 87,000 depositors may get $3,000,000 in cash dividends by Christmas. Depositors in 21 states and the District of Columbia will be affected by OConnor's orders.

The controler authorized those bank receivers who will be unable to carry through the necessary liquidation in time to borrow funds from the Reconstruction Finance corporation or from other banks at low interest rate in order to provide depositors with cash for Christmas.

Between Nov. 25 and Dec. 15 a total of 60 dividends involving $5,887,000 were paid to 144,045 depositors. In addition, 46 dividends involving distribution of $3,012,647 have been authorized but actual payment has not yet been made. It is these disbursements that O'Connor wants made in time for the holiday.

RAILS GRANTED NEW BOOST IN FREIGHT RATES

Estimated to Yield 15 to 20 Million.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The nation's railroads today received authority to increase their freight rates Monday on hundreds of commodities. Trafic experts estimated unofficially the increases would mean $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 of added revenue annually.

With five exceptions, the interstate commerce commission ordered into effect a long list of tarifs filed by the railroads. These are in addition to increases authorized by the commission Oct. 19 on commodities falling into the so-called heavy loading classification.

Earlier Boost Is 47½ Millions.

The heavy loading increases, which included commodities such as coal, were estimated to yield the railroads $47,500,000 annually.

Commodities on which higher rates will become effective Monday include fresh meat and packing products. This increase will be four cents a hundred pounds. Among the other increases allowed were three cents on long hauls of sugar, and one to two cents on brick and clay products, peanuts, fertilizers, vegetable oils, feldspar and talc, malt liquors and liquor containers, soda, salt, oil well supplies, and glass containers.

Some Increases Suspended.

The commission suspended, pending hearings on their justification, proposed increases on industrial sand in carloads; seeds in carloads between points in the intermountain and Pacific coast territories; carload shipments of sulphur via water lines between north Atlantic and south Atlantic ports, and carload shipments of animal and poultry feed in Illinois and southern classification territories.

The railroads have pending an application for a general increase of 15 per cent in freights and a one-half cent increase in eastern passenger fares, estimated to yield more than $500,000,000 annually. Railroad experts expect a decision in this case by March 1.

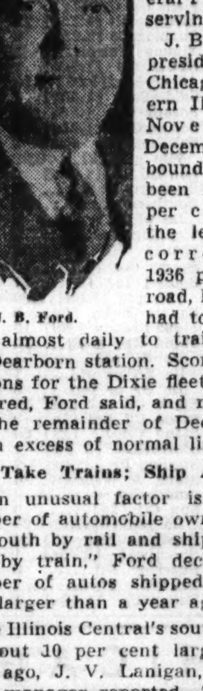
Roads Report Heavy Travel to Southland

Unusually heavy early season railway passenger trafic to the southern resort areas, necessitating extra sections and cars, was reported yesterday by several railroads serving the south.



J. B. Ford.

J. B. Ford, vice president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois, said November and December southbound travel has been running 25 per cent above the level of the corresponding 1936 period. The road, he said, has had to add extra cars almost daily to trains leaving the Dearborn station. Scores of extra sections for the Dixie fleet have been required, Ford said, and reservations for the remainder of December are far in excess of normal listings.

Take Trains; Ship Autos.

"An unusual factor is the large number of automobile owners traveling south by rail and shipping their cars by train," Ford declared. The number of autos shipped is 50 per cent larger than a year ago, he said.

The Illinois Central's southern trafic is about 10 per cent larger than a year ago, J. V. Lanigan, passenger trafic manager, reported. The road is running extra cars on virtually all trains, he said, and the Seminole to Florida now includes two sections.

The New York Central, through the office of Frederick Baird, passenger trafic manager here, reported that passenger trafic on its two all-year Florida specials is considerably heavier than at this time last year. The road's fast Florida Sunbeam will go into operation Jan. 2.

Extra Cars Necessary.

For the Pennsylvania system's southern trains, the Flamingo and the Southland, C. E. McCullough, general passenger agent, reported increased business had necessitated the use of extra cars beginning Dec. 9. The line's Florida Arrow will go into service Jan. 2. Trafic officials of the road predicted an unusually heavy season of travel, estimating the volume would run 25 per cent above a year ago.

R. Thomson, passenger trafic manager of the Chicago and North Western, said the road's passenger movement to the south has been "very favorable."

The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe's southbound passenger trafic is about 10 per cent greater than a year ago, said T. B. Gallaher, passenger trafic manager in Chicago.

Other Roads Report Gains.

L. M. Jones, assistant passenger trafic manager for the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific, said there had been a notable upturn in southbound trafic originating in the Twin Cities and at points west of Chicago.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific's passenger trafic to the southwest began increasing last month, said W. J. Leahy, passenger trafic manager. Extra sections were required to meet the demand, he said.

CONTINENTAL BANK IS SUED FOR ASSETS TAKEN FOR BANK LOAN

A petition asking that the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company be ordered to account for assets which it took over in 1932 from the voluntarily liquidated Peoples' Trust and Savings bank was filed yesterday in federal court. Attorney Edmond Sullivan filed the plea in behalf of Lee J. Frank, Chicagoan and former stockholder in the liquidated bank.

The action was a counter move against a suit pending in federal court in which Continental is attempting to recover from stockholders of the closed bank a part of the $16,421,642 loan which Continental made to enable Peoples, Trust and Savings to pay depositors.

Sullivan told the court that the assets were worth $25,000,000, that they were more than sufficient to pay the loan, and that Continental still holds part of them. The petition asks a receiver for this remaining part, payment of the debt, and distribution of the remainder among the former Peoples' Trust and Savings stockholders.

Mexico Gives Big Pay Boost to Oil Labor

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 18.—[U. P.]—The government board of arbitration and conciliation, ignoring a threat of American and other foreign oil companies to withdraw from Mexico, today ordered petroleum operators to increase wages and grant other benefits to employés amounting to $7,300,000 annually.

The award, upholding recommendations of a committee of investigators, which several months ago studied the companies' capacity to pay higher wages, established a minimum daily wage of 4.90 pesos [$1.14]. Overtime pay to the workers also was granted.

Executives Warned Government.

Executives of the petroleum concerns warned the government they would not accept an "unfavorable" decision and a meeting of company officials in New York last August said that in case the investigators' recommendations were upheld the operators would be compelled to curtail drilling and refining and even possibly to quit the country.

The award drafted a uniform wage contract for the entire industry. It declared the companies made a profit of $46,921,821 in the last three years, which was used as a basis for determining their ability to increase wages.

Declares Strike Justified.

The board said that despite economic improvement of the oil companies, the workers so far had failed to obtain a corresponding advantage. The cost of living rose so quickly, the ruling said, that the workers were fully justified in striking and seeking an arbitration award.

The companies are expected to meet soon to form a united front against the award.

CHICAGO STEEL OUTPUT HOLDS ABOUT STEADY

Steel production in the Chicago district this week will remain about steady at 21 to 22 per cent of theoretical ingot capacity despite the Christmas holiday, reports indicated yesterday.

One important producer reported a moderate rise in production schedules for this week because of an accumulation of miscellaneous orders, but schedules of other companies were unchanged or a bit lower.

Pittsburgh operations are expected to decline to 17 per cent of capacity from 24 per cent last week, due to holiday influences, and the Youngstown district will fall 12 points from 30 to 18 per cent.

The Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation announced that its tin plate mill at Elwood, Ind., will be closed indefinitly around Jan. 1. The plant employs approximately 1,000 men.

Business Much Confused by Capital Moves

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—American business is puzzled by the contradictory moves being made in Washington at a time when the country is crying for enactment of measures to end the current business recession.

From every part of the country business and industrial groups are petitioning members of congress and the White House to drop renewed insistance on more reform legislation. Such legislation, protestants assert, is inconsistent when efforts are being made to promote recovery through coöperative action.

Failure to Act Criticized.

The United States Chamber of Commerce today criticized congress for failure to enact tax revision at the present special session of congress. Business rejoiced when the President in his message to the special congress declared himself for tax reform and has been unable to reconcile the declaration with his apparent unwillingness to confess he made a mistake in the enactment of the capital gains and undisturbed surplus taxes. The chamber guardedly places the blame on the White House as the leader of the administration for the failure to act.

"Tax revision, particularly in relaxing the strangulatory effects of the undistributed profits levy and the capital losses and gains provisions, seem definitly out until shortly after the New Year," the chamber said. "The leadership apparently successfully withstood the strong drive both in and out of congress for immediate consideration of this issue, conceded to be a necessary step toward checking the receding business tide.

Revision Is Promised.

"However, definite commitments have been made on the part of the house subcommittee to be ready with its recommendations early in January. Moreover, the committees and others in both house and senate affirm positively that the two tax levies, looked upon as major factors in shackling recovery, will be materially liberalized after the assembling of the regular session in January."

Business is awaiting the message which Roosevelt will submit to the regular session of congress. It is hoped that his report on the state of the union will contain plans to improve relations between government and business and to spur recovery.

Business was encouraged by the defeat of the wage and hour bill. Concern is still felt, however, over the regional planning program, which would create "seven little TVA's" to compete with private national resource industries, and the government reorganization program, which would increase the President's powers.

Present Policy Not Helpful.

"It had been hoped that the more amiable intentions in Washington might mean a postponement, if not an abandonment, of further regulatory legislation, so that government and business could concentrate on a recovery drive," the Chamber of Commerce said. "Moreover, the present strategy of highly-placed officials to place the responsibility for the recession of business is not likely to help any. Such strategy will not create a single new job.

"In spite of these disconcerting moves, business men everywhere have indicated their intention to continue doing everything possible to combat the slump and to prevent the spread of unemployment."

POSTAL GRANTS $580,000 YEARLY BOOST IN WAGES

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Trustees of the Postal Telegraph and Cable corporation today agreed to grant wage increases totaling $580,000 a year to employés who receive less than $125 a month beginning March 31.

The agreement announced after a hearing before Federal Judge Albert Coxe, would be inoperative if liquidation proceedings were started against the company, which is in process of reorganization, before March 31. Union officials said 10,000 employés would benefit.

TRIBUNE'S HOME LOAN UNIT IS REAL SUCCESS

Owned by Employes; Runs at Profit.

How housing may be provided for salaried individuals on a sound financial basis is shown by the record of the Medill Building and Loan association, an organization wholly owned by the employés of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Organized 15 years ago with the financial assistance of the Tribune company, the association has ridden successfully through years marked by an unparalleled boom and an unprecedented depression. It has emerged with a record of financial success that is notable in the field of real estate financing in which the failures have been many.

Accomplished at Profit.

The primary purpose of the organization—to provide the financial facilities for employés to own homes—has been accomplished and at a profit to the stockholders. The association has served an important incidental purpose in providing a thrift medium for employés that has enabled them to accumulate savings totaling $2,792,100 since organization in 1922.

The $60,000 of original capital provided by the Tribune company through a temporary stock purchase was paid off in the first few years of operation and the association is now functioning on capital subscribed wholly by its shareholders.

The association has helped finance the purchase of 485 homes for Tribune employés. Sixty-eight of the loans have been made for the construction of new homes, and 417 for the purchase or refinancing of homes acquired by employés.

Appraisal Policy Conservative.

The association has followed a conservative appraisal policy that has saved its borrowers from financial difficulties. The figures tell the story. Since its beginning the association has advanced loans totaling $2,500,800 on residential property having an appraised value [conservatively estimated] of $4,640,000. The employé was required to put up an amount nearly equal to the loan furnished by the association. The justification for this policy is found in the financial record of the association and in the records of those home financing organizations that tempted individuals into buying homes on a shoestring only to lose their property when they could least afford it.

The $760,350 that has been loaned by the association to help finance the construction of new homes represents 30 per cent of the total loans made, the remainder representing loans on residential property purchased by employés.

Only Six Residences Given Up.

Six residences have been deeded over to the association by individuals who were unable to carry out their obligations. These transfers were made voluntarily by the borrowers. In no case was foreclosure through formal legal proceedings necessary. Three of these properties were subsequently sold, the association still retaining title to three residences. The unpaid mortgages on the repossessed properties amounted to $76,830, or about 3 per cent of the total loans that the association made.

Of the 485 mortgages made by the

STOCKS FIRMER; STEEL SHARES BOLSTER LIST

Closing Prices Near Best Levels of Day.

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Firmer tendencies prevailed in the stock market today following yesterday's recession as the general list advanced fractions to more than 2 points in a typical Saturday session. Closing prices were near the best levels of the day.

Steel stocks showed the best gains despite discouraging reports from the Pittsburgh district, where next week's activity rate is estimated at 17 per cent compared to 24 per cent this week. The recession, however, was charged to the holiday season and was discounted by traders. Total sales were 500,550 shares.

Major Groups Are Higher.

The three major groups of stocks finished the day higher than yesterday's final prices. An advance of 1.65 points was recorded in the thirty industrial stocks used to compute the Dow-Jones averages, twenty rails rose 0.48 and an increase of 0.14 took place in the utilities. Of a total of 685 shares changing hands 309 made gains, 165 declined and 211 finished unchanged.

Irregularity prevailed at the opening, the initial turnover being of moderate proportions. United States Steel was up ⅜ of a point at the start. It pushed ahead until it was more than a point higher, but then met resistance. It forged ahead again, however, to finish with a gain of 1¼ points. Bethlehem was bid up more than two points.

Aviation Issues Strong.

Aviation shares spurted in the last hour to finish at generally higher levels. Boeing, Douglas, and United Aircraft finished fractionally higher. Philip Morris moved up a point in the tobacco group.

Motor shares netted fractional advances in quiet trading. Metal shares generally were marked up fractions.

Dome Mines opened on a block of 1,500 shares at 54½, an overnight gain of a point, went up to 55½, a new high for the year, but subsequently eased to its opening level.

Copper Group Improves.

Coppers improved fractionally. Several of the higher priced stocks scored substantial gains. Westinghouse posted a gain of 2 points, as did Eastman Kodak, and du Pont added 2 to 6 points.

Rails were mixed at the opening but price changes were considered of little consequence. Utilities just about held their own.

The short interest as of Nov. 30 amounted to 1,184,215 shares, a decrease of 29,867 shares from 1,214,082 reported as of Oct. 29, it was announced today.

CHICAGO STOCKS CLOSE LOWER IN DAY AND WEEK

Stocks moved within narrow ranges in quiet trading on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday. Twenty-four issues declined during the two hour session, fourteen advanced, and thirty finished unchanged. Sales totaled 20,000 shares, against 15,000 shares a week before.

Chicago Corporation common, most active issue, closed unchanged at 2⅛, and Middle West capital stock, also actively traded, declined ¼ point to 5¾. Commonwealth Edison held unchanged at 26¼. Zenith Radio advanced ½ to 15½ and Marshall Field moved up ¼ to 8¾.

Of the 187 issues traded during the week, only 41 advanced, 119 declined, and 27 remained unchanged. Volume of trading for the week was 181,000 shares, compared with 129,000 shares the preceding week and 419,000 shares in the corresponding week a year ago.

FARMERS SELL HOGS TO OBTAIN CHRISTMAS CASH

Week's Shipments Valued at $16,000,000.

Farmers were paid approximately $16,000,000 for the large number of hogs they marketed at all points in the country during last week. The heavy selling resulted from belief that hog prices might go lower, and also from the need for cash over the Christmas holidays. The hog, as easily converted into cash as anything on the farm, is usually relied on to furnish the farm family with money at this time of the year when the spring pig crop is about ready for slaughter.

Last week's receipts on the Chicago market at 152,300 were largest since the week preceding the Christmas holidays last year. However, this conversion of swine into cash on such a big scale drove prices into the lowest brackets per hundredweight in three years, and resulted in a semi-demoralized wholesale trade for pork.

The week's average price of hogs dropped to $7.80, the first time weekly costs have been below $8.00 since December, 1934. This price compared with $9.90 a year ago. Two years ago the price at $11.70 included a processing tax of $2.25 collected by the federal government.

Consumers were materially benefitted by the heavy movement of stock from farms. Butcher shops bought top fresh pork loins at $15.50 per hundred pounds, off $2.00 from a week ago and $7.00 lower than early last month.

Most other live stock and meats also were hit by a severe break in prices, the big run of hogs and the downturn in prices for this class having its effect on the general price level of live stock. The average price of steers for the week at $8.75 was lowest since August last year.

Steers Also Sell Lower.

At the close of the week the various classes of steers and yearlings were selling 50 to 75 cents lower than a week earlier. Hefers slumped unevenly 25 to 75 cents. Cows, however, were steady to 25 cents higher. Calves advanced 50 cents. Stockers and feeders were in narrow demand at 25 cents lower rates.

Packers granted concessions of $1.00 to $2.00 per hundred pounds in the various cuts of beef, best grades being marked down most.

Prices for live lambs finished 35 to 50 cents lower, with the week's average at $9.05, only 5 cents below the 1937 low. Lamb meat was steady to $1.00 lower.

Hogs in the week-end session yesterday sold steady to 10 cents lower, with the final top at $7.85, a new low.

FUTURE PRICES OF EGGS RISE; STORAGE LOWER

Egg futures prices advanced moderately yesterday at the Chicago Mercantile exchange on buying attributed to heavy local storage withdrawals. Withdrawal of 25,525 cases from storage in major markets on Friday brought the movement for the week to 162,821 cases, or 46,413 more than during the corresponding 1936 week.

The December contract closed at 19¾ cents a dozen, or ¼ cent higher, and the January delivery closed at 18⅞ cents, or ⅜ cent higher. Net gains for the week were ⅜ to ⅞ cent a dozen. Cash fresh eggs were unchanged to 1 cent lower, and refrigerators were ¼ cent higher.

Butter futures eased in a light trade and closed ⅛ to ⅜ cent lower. The December contract incurred the largest loss, closing at a new low for the season at 32⅛ cents a pound. Fancy grades of butter remained unchanged in the cash market, but the lower grades dipped ½ to 1 cent a pound on reports of the larger arrivals since Oct. 8.

SENATE GROUP BEGINS PROBE OF D. & H. RAILROAD

Official Admits Stock Deal Was Not Reported.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The senate committee on railroad finance today began its investigation of the affairs of the Delaware and Hudson railroad. In the main the efforts of the road to buy up a substantial, if not a controling, interest in the Lehigh Valley railroad held the attention of the committee.

F. W. Leamy, vice president, and W. H. Cox, controler of the Delaware and Hudson, testified that the purchase of more than 570,000 shares of Lehigh Valley from 1924 to 1927 had not been, as required by law, reported to the interstate commerce commission. Subsidiaries of the D. & H., in particular the Hudson Coal company, had a leading part in the acquisition of Lehigh stock, the value of which at the time was in excess of $40,000,000. Subsequently the D. & H. sold its Lehigh holdings to the Pennsylvania and realized a profit of more than $20,000,000.

Fails to Make Report.

The committee asserted that when the Hudson Coal company, in November, 1927, filed with the committee on stock list of the New York Stock exchange an application to list $35,000,000 of first mortgage sinking fund bonds, due June 1, 1962, no reference was made to the Lehigh Valley transactions. This was not denied by Leamy, who explained that at that time the transfer of the stock was pending and the reference was believed unnecessary.

The Lehigh Valley acquisitions were made through Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and were handled for the D. & H. and the Hudson Coal company by the late W. H. Williams, at the time vice president of the Delaware. None of these Lehigh Valley transactions, said Senator Wheeler, chairman of the committee, was reported to the interstate commerce commission and he charged that they were withheld for the purpose of deceiving the commission.

Fund Juggling Charged.

Leamy said that as far as he knew Williams had concluded the Lehigh Valley purchases without first referring the matter to the board of directors.

"The fact is," said Senator Wheeler, "Mr. Williams juggled the money of Ward H. subsidiaries without bringing the transactions to the attention of the board of directors?"

"I am ready to concede he did so without specific authority from the board; I do not admit that the funds involved were juggled," Leamy replied.

"Have you the authority," Senator Wheeler asked, "to loan the money of the Delaware and Hudson to the Hudson Coal company?"

"Yes, I have," Leamy answered.

"Then I would say that it's a situation that needs correcting," replied Senator Wheeler.

RFC REPORTS NEW LOANS IN OCTOBER ONLY $6,601,471

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Under the policy of retrenchment, new authorizations by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, other than commitments to purchase securites from the Public Works administration for resale, fell to $6,601,471 in October, the government corporation reported today to congress.

Illustrative of sharp restriction on new authorizations in October, those for loans to banks aggregated but $346,694.20, of which $312,669.20 was to aid in the reorganization or liquidation of closed banks.

Other authorizations were: Loans to industry, $702,833.32; on assets of closed banks, $167,300; for orderly marketing of agricultural products, $3,600,000; to drainage districts, $364,143.98; for rehabilitation work, $12,000.

Repayments on loans also fell off, amounting to $8,256,929. These included among others $3,014,469 from banks, $2,831,589 from mortgage loan companies, and $1,000489 from businesses.

The RFC announced that its loan agencies at Denver and El Paso had been closed and their activities trans-City, Mo., and Dallas, respectively.

Texas Oil Production Shutdown Plan Delayed

Austin, Tex., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The plan to shut down all producing oil wells in Texas for four consecutive Sundays has been delayed for further study, it was announced today. This postponement will give the state railroad commission time in which to take the subject up with other oil producing states.

Price Control Results.

Despite indifferent results, the countries that began price control have found it difficult, for political and economic reasons, to abandon their programs. One method of control followed another in an effort to find a workable plan, but unforeseen developments have added difficulties in every case.

Brazil burned millions of bushels of coffee in an effort to hold up the world price level. The United States sank millions of dollars in an attempt to stabilize wheat prices at a high level. Brazil has had to revise its program several times and recently announced new changes in its plan of operation. The United States progressed from the farm board experiment to the AAA restriction program and is now considering adoption of a new program of production curtailment.

The United States attempt to help the cotton producer has gone through several stages, including acreage reduction, price pegging, subsidies and loans, and is still going forward.

IOWA COAL BUSINESS PLACED UNDER RULES OF NEW CONTROL ACT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The bituminous coal commission today placed intrastate transactions in bituminous coal in Iowa under the regulatory provisions of the bituminous coal act. The commission based its order on a conclusion that Iowa transactions "directly affected" interstate commerce in bituminous coal and should be subject to code provisions.

Examiner Carman A. Newcomb reported that Iowa, "one of the major bituminous coal consuming markets for the United States," consumes considerably more coal than it produces. He said if coal produced and consumed in Iowa were not subject to regulation under the coal act, "then all coal of every kind, character, and description, and for any use or purpose coming into Iowa, would be directly affected to an extent sufficient to exclude any equivalent amount of coal heretofore coming into the state from competing sources."

Newcomb made his report on the basis of hearings held at Des Moines beginning last Aug. 9.

TRIBUNE'S HOME LOAN UNIT IS REAL SUCCESS

organization 339 have been paid off in full, employés now owning the homes free of incumbrances. The association has loans at present on 146 homes in the amount of $586,950. The average value of homes financed by the association has been about $9,500.

Has 746 Shareholders.

At present 746 Tribune employés are shareholders in the association, owning shares which will have a cash value at maturity of $1,867,000. Since organization 1,124 individuals have been paid $2,792,100 on matured shares. Of this amount $494,979 represented profit earned by the association that was turned over to the shareholders. This was equal to an average return of 6 per cent [simple interest basis].

A large part of the savings and the profits earned has gone to pay off home loans obtained by shareholders. The borrowers shared in the profits of the organization, permitting them to pay off their mortgages more rapidly than would have been otherwise possible.

Aside from the aid rendered to employés in purchasing homes and paying off mortgages the association has been the means by which other employés accumulated capital through small weekly payments on stock on which they received a return not available elsewhere. This secondary benefit has been shared by a larger number of workers.

Employés Are Directors.

The board of directors of the association is composed of nine employés of The Tribune who serve without compensation. Expenses of operation are held to a minimum. J. F. Gart, an experienced accountant, is the secretary of the association. He and his assistant, H. G. Arnette, are the only paid employés of the association.

Appraisal service is provided free of charge by a committee of Tribune executives, the members of which are qualified by experience and training to do such work. Office space, light, and telephone are furnished without charge by the Tribune company.

READING'S NEW TRAIN TO MATCH WESTERN SPEED

Chicago-Milwaukee Run Is Comparable.

The speed of the new steam powered streamlined five car passenger train just placed in operation by the Reading railroad between Philadelphia and New York compares favorably with the running time of trains between Chicago and Milwaukee—a comparable distance—but will not estalish any new records for fast train operation, a comparison of schedules yesterday disclosed.

The new Reading train makes two round trips daily between the two eastern cities, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. The morning train stops less frequently and is about five minutes faster than the afternoon train. The morning train leaves Philadelphia at 7:40 a. m. and arrives at Jersey City at 9:13 a. m., and passengers reach Liberty street at 9:25 a. m.

Average Speed 58 Miles.

On its first trip the train runs the 90 miles from Philadelphia to Jersey City in 93 minutes, or at an average speed of 58 miles an hour. New York passengers will take a ferry from Jersey City which takes 12 minutes to the Liberty street station.

Taking into account the additional 12 minutes, the time between Philadelphia and New York is 105 minutes. The distance is about one mile longer via the ferry. For the 91 miles the average speed is 52 miles per hour. Most of the other Reading trains now take a little more than 2 hours to carry a passenger from the downtown Philadelphia station to the Liberty street station in New York. The highest speed touched by the new train is 84 miles an hour.

Pennsylvania Road's Schedule.

However, many Pennsylvania trains run the 86 miles from the North Philadelphia station to the New York station at much faster average speeds. The Congressional Limited, which makes one stop, covers the 86 miles eastbound in 79 minutes, at an average speed of 64 miles an hour. Westbound it makes the trip in 75 minutes, an average speed of 67½ miles an hour. The Pennsylvania's trains, which are pulled by electric locomotives, frequently touch speeds of more than 100 miles an hour, it is said.

Chicago-Milwaukee Schedule.

Between Chicago and Milwaukee, the "400" of the North Western and the Hiawatha of the Milwaukee run the 85 miles in 75 minutes, or at an average speed of 68 miles per hour. These are nonstop trains. Both roads have several 90 minute trains for which the average speed is 56½ miles an hour. Although the Hiawatha is scheduled to make the run in 75 minutes it is said to do it more frequently in 72 minutes, which makes the average speed 70 5-6 miles an hour. Both the Hiawatha and the "400" attain speeds up to 105 miles an hour during the run.

The North Shore Line's fastest electric trains require 105 minutes for the 86 mile trip, which gives an average speed of 49 1-7 miles an hour. The highest speed touched is about 84 miles an hour.

Kansas City Southern's Operating Income Rises

November net operating income of the Kansas City Southern railway system increased to $265,053 from $247,482 in the same month a year ago, the company reported yesterday. Net operating income for eleven months ended Nov. 30 was $3,152,109, against net operating income of $2,880,231 in the corresponding period last year.

NARROW MOVES MARK TRADING IN COMMODITIES

Future Prices Variable; Cash Staples Lower.

Commodity prices moved within narrow ranges yesterday in typically dull week-end dealings. Losses and gains were about evenly divided for the week in futures trading, but a number of important cash staples moved lower during the period.

Cash commodities showing declines for the week included butter, clear bellies, eggs, hogs, lard, wheat, Rio coffee, export and domestic copper, rubber, tin, wool tops, and lead. Prices were higher for corn, hides, oats, steel, scrap, Santos coffee, cotton, and silk. Better prices for steel scrap were reported in some districts.

Future Prices Irregular.

In futures dealings, staples which declined included wheat, lard, butter, cocoa, Rio coffee, rubber, hides, copper, lead, tin, and wool tops. Corn, oats, rye, soy beans, cotton, eggs, cottonseed oil, and silk were higher. Sugar, tin, and zinc were about unchanged.

An important smelter reduced the domestic copper quotation from 10¼ to 10⅛ cents a pound, but this failed to attract much buying. The cut of ¼ cent in the price of lead brought a little new business, it was said, but demand was still far below levels of earlier in the year. Tin, which slumped about 2 cents a pound during the week, was only moderately active.

Other Commodities Variable.

Several grades of hides for immediate delivery were marked up ½ cent a pound during the week, but hide futures closed lower for the period despite an advance of 0.05 to 0.10 cent a pound yesterday. Rubber declined ¼ to ½ cent a pound during the week in both cash and futures markets. Rubber futures eased 0.03 to 0.05 cent a pound yesterday.

Cocoa futures were down 0.01 to 0.07 cent a pound yesterday and about ¼ cent a pound lower for the week. Santos coffee closed 0.03 cent a pound lower yesterday, and sugar finished unchanged. The current Santos contract finished at 6.98 cents a pound, compared with 6.39 cents a week before, but gains by other contracts were small.

COTTON

Cotton futures held within a range of about .05 cent a pound yesterday. Trade and foreign buying early, based on firmness in Liverpool, was largely offset by hedging pressure and profit taking. Closing trades on the Chicago Board of Trade were unchanged to .04 cent higher, while other American markets were .03 cent lower to .05 cent a pound higher.

American spinners were estimated to have taken 138,000 bales of cotton last week, against 203,000 bales during the same period last year. European and oriental mills took 95,000 bales, compared with 106,000 bales in 1936.

Spot cotton closed unchanged, with New Orleans, 8.35 cents; New York, 8.30 cents, and Galveston and Houston at 8.15 cents per pound. Futures prices [in cents per pound] follow:

GRAIN MARKETS END FIRMER IN ERRATIC TRADE

Wheat Exports, Sealing of Corn Aids Prices.

CHICAGO GRAIN FUTURES

Closing prices on the May delivery of principal grains on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Year ago.
Wheat	$ .91¼	$ .91	$1.32⅝
Corn	.59	.58¾	1.04⅛
Oats	.30¼	.30⅛	.50⅛
Rye	.69⅝	.69¼	1.11¼
Soy beans	.94½	.94⅛	1.58

Wheat fluctuated erratically within a range of about 1 cent, and the bulk of the business in corn was within a range of ⅛ cent a bushel on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. Prices, however, averaged somewhat higher.

Export sales of 330,000 bushels of hard winter wheat to the United Kingdom had some effect on sentiment. Corn was firmer as the result of reports indicating Iowa farmers had started to pledge considerable quantities of that grain as collateral for government loans.

Closing trades on wheat futures were unchanged to ⅛ cent higher. Corn was ⅛ to ¼ cent a bushel higher.

Crop Report Lacks Effect.

The final estimate of the department of agriculture on the 1937 grain crops failed to have any effect on the market, as the figures given out late Friday showed little change from the preliminary returns. A considerable percentage of trading in the grain markets yesterday was of a professional character.

A Buenos Aires, Argentina, cable to James E. Bennett & Co. indicated the yield of wheat in that country might fall as low as 170,000,000 bushels, or 22,000,000 bushels less than was indicated by the official returns earlier in the week.

Farmers Sell Corn Freely.

Farmers sold cash corn freely yesterday as the result of the recent advance in prices and more favorable weather conditions. Chicago handlers reported purchases for deferred shipment of 100,000 bushels or more, the largest day's business since Nov. 18.

Only 160,000 bushels of American corn were reported to have been sold for export yesterday, although Liverpool said there had been purchases for January and February shipment. Buenos Aires futures closed ⅛ cent lower to ⅛ cent higher per bushel.

Cash lard sold at $8 per 100 pounds yesterday, a new low since August, 1934.

CHICAGO BANK STOCK PRICES VARY FOR WEEK

Chicago bank stocks were irregular last week. First National closed at 199 bid, 202 asked, off 9 points. Continental Illinois National ranged between 80 and 87, closing at 83 bid, 84½ asked, a net decline of 4 points. Chicago Title and Trust closed 3 points lower at 141 bid, 144 asked, selling ex dividend.

Terminal National gained 1 point, Lake Shore Trust and Savings, 4 points, and Harris Trust and Savings, 2 points. City National and Merchandise National were unchanged. Northern Trust lost 10 points, closing at 500 bid, 510 asked.

U. S. LOANS LEAD BONDS UPWARD IN QUIET TRADING

Sales Volume Smallest in Ten Weeks.

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—United States government issues led a quiet upturn in the bond market today, but total sales dwindled to $3,872,800, lowest Saturday volume since Oct. 9, compared with a total of $3,989,100 a week ago.

The rise in government issues ranged between 1/32d to 9/32ds of a point at the close. Better prices in the federal list was attributed to institutional buying. Banks have been important purchasers in recent weeks to replace declining commercial loans.

Rail Issues Irregular.

The rail group was mixed. Atchison general 4s of 1995 improved ¼ point to 109¼, and New York Central 3¼s of 1952 also were ¼ higher at 85¼. Most Southern Pacific issues improved fractionally, but Baltimore and Ohio issues were irregular, and a number of inferior grade liens lost ground.

Western Union issues, under pressure at times during the week, finished irregular. The 5s of 1951 closed ¾ lower at 65, but the 5s of 1960 were ⅛ higher at 63½.

Industrials Are Stronger.

Small gains predominated in the industrial group, Anaconda 4½s of 1950 closed ¼ higher at 103½ and Goodrich 4¼s of 1956 climbed ½ point to 93½. Inland Steel 3¼s of 1961 advanced ¼ to 104¼.

Utilities were irregular. Columbia Gas 5s of 1952 advanced ½ point to 95 and Detroit Edison 3½s of 1966 moved up ⅛ to 105⅝, but Ohio Edison 4s of 1967 eased ⅝ to 100⅞ and Cincinnati Gas and Electric 3¼s slipped ¼ to 102⅝.

The foreign list was generally higher except for a small number of South American loans which lost ground and Japanese issues which were mixed.

Policyholders' Loans.

One of the more profitable types of investment for insurance companies during the last few years has been the lending of money to their own policyholders. This also has been an important source of revenue, because large numbers of policyholders, hard pressed for money, turned to borrowing on their insurance policies.

The extent of this borrowing is shown by the fact that a number of the largest life insurance companies in the business still have as much as 25 per cent of their invested assets in loans to policyholders—in spite of substantial repayments.

The profitable nature of the lending is apparent when one realizes that most companies charge interest of 6 per cent a year [a few charge 5 per cent] on loans to policyholders, while guaranteeing to their policyholders interest of 3 to 3½ per cent on the money they pay in premiums and on the amounts of interest which have been accumulated in previous years. The company can't lose.

Criticism has been directed at insurance companies for the profits they make at the policyholders' expense and with his own money. Numerous suggestions have been made, and some adjustments seem likely. One of the large companies, for example, has a plan to cut the interest rate. The rate guaranteed on money paid in by policyholders also would be trimmed and the changes would apply only on new policies.

In fairness to the companies, however, it should be mentioned that they ought not be asked to place themselves in the position of encouraging policyholders to borrow against their insurance.

This might lead to serious impairment of equities. Discouraged, some persons might be inclined to let policies lapse and lose insurance protection. Or if they continued policies in force they might allow their debt to stand unpaid. This would mean a sizable deduction from face amount when policies are paid—and, in the meantime, stiff interest.

Those who have not borrowed on their policies have benefited from the good yield on the policy loans. Bonds, ordinarily the best source of insurance company revenue, have been refunded at low rates of interest, cutting the return on investments sharply in many cases. In addition, loans to policyholders provided a safe and lucrative use for funds when the task of finding satisfactory investment mediums was a difficult problem.

LETTERS

Baby Bonds.

Letters of 200 words or less addressed to the Financial Editor will be printed in this column from time to time.

Chicago, Dec. 18.—The article in your columns by Thomas Furlong on Baby Bonds was good. I had awaited some reaction on that subject after receiving the letter mentioned, signed by Mr. Morgenthau.

The same argument applies to many financial situations into which the spendings of the Roosevelt administration are leading us. War, for instance, if we were up against it, would require money which could only be obtained by confiscation.

The government is in a most serious situation. Taxes which it receives are really based on its 59 cent dollar, and what that will eventually be worth will have its effect on its actual income, as it will on all others.

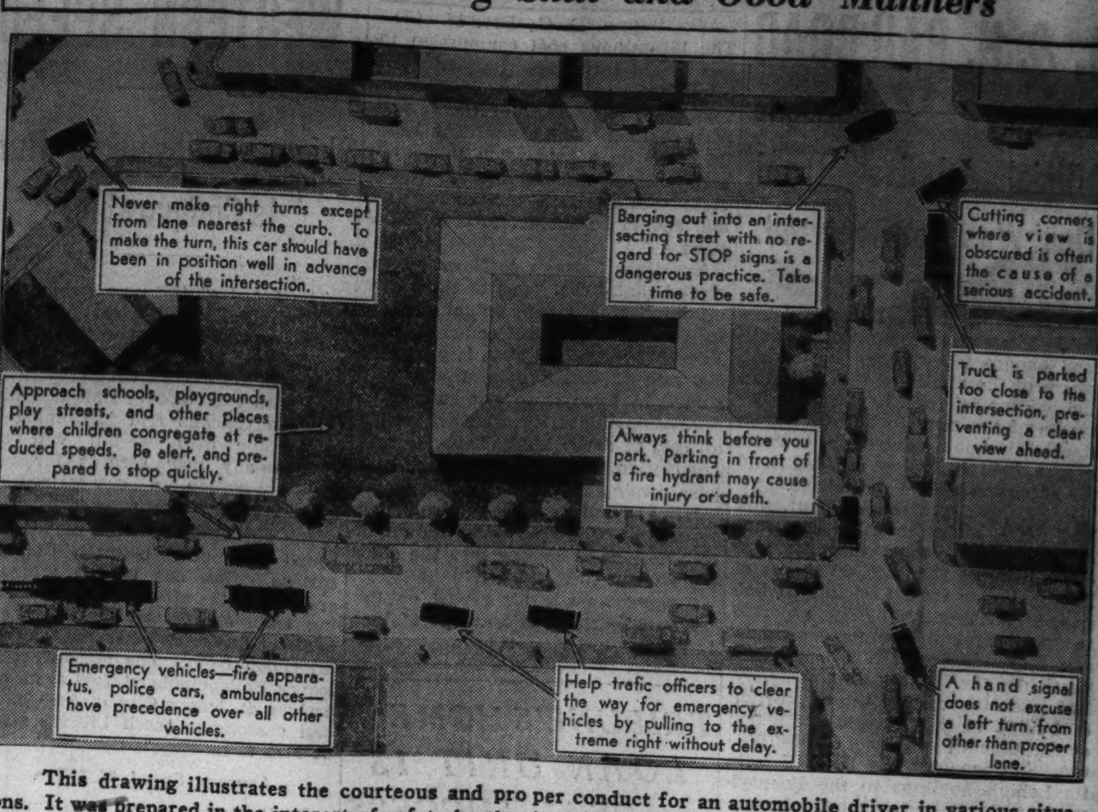
Lessons in Driving Skill and Good Manners



This drawing illustrates the courteous and proper conduct for an automobile driver in various situations. It was prepared in the interest of safety by the Aetna Casualty and Surety company, Hartford, Conn.

IT TAKES SKILL TO MANIPULATE TRAILER GADGETS

BY HAL FOUST.

Tourist Camp, Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 15.—[By Mail.]—Household chores, rather exacting in a residence 19 by 7 feet, don't seem urgent at the moment. A warm sun is pouring through the three west windows of this trailer hitched to THE TRIBUNE roadster.

A mocking bird is singing from a magnolia tree across the street. A colored boy, supposedly leveling the gravel in the camp driveway, is leaning heavily on his rake like a WPA worker and humming to himself.

After leaving Chicago in near zero weather a few days ago and then driving over sleeted pavements in Kentucky, this warm spell here seems like a touch of spring. There's possibility of snow flurries here tomorrow, but with weather like this there is no thought of tomorrow.

Lots of Things to Do.

There are a lot of little things waiting to be done around the trailer at this moment. Kerosene has been splashing from the air vent on the heater tank, and it will have to be plugged before continuing the travels southward. One of the braces on one of the roof ventilators ought to be fixed. But why work? It's more pleasant to loll on the lounge here and just think easy thoughts.

Trailer life, although it involves a lot of fussing with details, isn't so bad. You don't have to wear a necktie. Bellboys are not around to raise their noses at travel stained clothes. And it's pretty nice to have a wife cooking the meals even if you do have to help with the dishes.

There are a lot of folks who might also enjoy fussing with the multitude of mechanical contrivances around a trailer. The designers seemed to have gloried in gadgets.

Many Ingenious Devices.

There are ingenious devices of necessity, like the coupling, that are really wonderful. This third wheel, the one on the front of the trailer, is mounted on a screw jack that can raise or lower a cup that locks over a ball to form a universal joint between the car and its tow. When traveling the wheel and jack are removed and carried in the car or trailer.

But it's in the interior of the trailer itself that the inventors have really let themselves go. There are two sets of electric lights, one attached to the car battery and the other to wiring that is plugged into the system of a modern camp. Away from any camp, there's a gasoline lamp that will save using battery juice.

This gasoline lamp, many city dwellers don't know, is started by burning the filament with a match, then turning a faucet and pumping, then turning the faucet in another direction and lighting. Sounds complicated? It is. A gasoline range of three burners works the same way.

Fire Extinguisher Beside Him.

In lighting the kerosene heater you first elevate the chimney four inches above the roof by pushing a lever. Then you open a gauge full, wet the end of a long iron stick at the bottom of the stove, light the end of the stick, light the wick in the bottom of the stove with the flaming end of the stick, blow out the stick flame, put the top lid back on the stove, and turn the gauge back several notches. In Cairo I wrote a story with a fire extinguisher beside me because I had flooded the heater by delaying to turn back the gauge.

My wife, who admits she's afraid of the gasoline and kerosene burners, has added an electric heater, an electric grille and an electric toaster to the standard equipment. Because of these watt consumers, we had to pay double the usual rent in a camp near Somerville, Tenn., last night. It was 50 cents rather than the usual 25 cents.

Even the Windows Are Ingenious.

Even the windows of this trailer are a bit ingenious. Outside the copper screening the glass is swung upward, from hinges at the top, by means of a lever on each side. When half open these levers collapse so their lengths will not project into the interior, as do the arms of sun porch windows at home.

The screen door also folds double so as to occupy a minimum of space when it is not in use. The two opposing seats and the davenport, which become two double beds at night, have storage space underneath protected from floor dirt by an inch moulding, which also prevents things from rolling out from under.

A compartment for bedding, concealed behind a sink, has a trick sliding panel that requires less space than a door. The drawers of the kitchen cabinet and clothes lockers are tricky. They must be lifted before they are pulled out.

The roof ventilators have a brace on each side that raise the hatch when pushed in one direction and lock it when pushed in the other. There's a hand pump to draw water from a 50 gallon tank into a sink that drains to the ground. There isn't any lavatory.

The mocking bird is still singing across the street. I can't hear it very well with this typewriter clicking inconsequentials. So long.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Buick deliveries during November totaled 19,237 units, against 17,960 in October and 19,385 in November, 1936, W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager, said yesterday. This was a gain of 1,266 cars, or 7.1 per cent over October and a decline of 148, or 0.7 per cent, under November, 1936. Buick dealers retailed 26,781 used cars in November against 25,960 in October, Hufstader added.

W. E. Butler, president of Butler Motors, Inc., Chicago distributor for Hudson, reported yesterday the appointment of several new dealers to handle the Hudson Terraplane line in the Chicago district. They are: Atlas Motor company, 812 Diversey Parkway; Heinemann Motors, 1928-30 Irving Park boulevard; North-West Motors, 6135 North Western avenue, and Foto-Wallman Motors, 6940 Fullerton avenue. Box McKenzie, automobile stunt driver, recently drove from Los Angeles to New York in a Hudson Terraplane in 2 days and 4 hours, setting a new trans-continental record.

Ford V-8 cars for 1938 are equipped with a button on the floorboard to control light beams, a contribution to safer country road driving. Operation of the switch directs the beams of the headlights so they will not glare in the eyes of oncoming drivers. An indicator light in the instrument panel glows red when the headlights are in normal high position.

Many persons are buying automobile accessories as Christmas gifts, according to W. A. Houser, general parts and service manager for Cadillac-La Salle. Radios and heaters lead such purchases, he said.

WAGON DRIVERS IN SOUTH LAX IN SIGNALING CARS

Fail to Let Motorist Know if Way Is Clear.

BY HAL FOUST.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—For an automobile editor who ardently has urged others to use signals of intention to turn this towing a trailer on a current tour of the south is a bit embarrassing. There isn't any mechanical device for such signaling and an arm stuck from the driver's window couldn't be seen from the rear.

So for today's essay we'll treat of another type of signaling and regrettable lack of signaling.

Horse and wagon drivers, in dangerous and annoying numbers that increase as you drive south, seem to be ignorant of the assistance they could give to motorists who overtake them approaching the crest of a hill.

Standing in the wagon, the farmer can see whether the pavement over the top of the hill is clear for the automobile to pass. But he won't, or at least doesn't, impart this information to the motorist behind him. Sometimes it seems that perhaps the horse owner is resentful of the automobile trafic that is paying for the slabs.

The conduct of the regular truck line drivers, generally disliked by rural and urban passenger car operators, is the antithesis of this stupidity by the horse owners. Overtaken on a hill, the truck driver will signal a flash of his clearance when he is able to see that it is safe for him to be passed.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

CYCLISTS' VIEW OF TRAFIC.

Chicago, Dec. —Whenever a bicycle rider is injured in a trafic accident newspapers play it up that a bicycle was involved. I wonder if the facts justify that. We have ridden over 5,000 miles on bicycles in the last seventeen months without an accident, chiefly because we were alert.

In several cases the motorists were not at all helpful. Take two examples:

We were riding west on Marquette road about 7 a. m. A car came in from the north and turned onto Marquette directly in front of us without making the stop required. Our brakes held. A few blocks farther another car drove through the stop sign and across the boulevard from the south. Again our brakes held. The driver stopped, too—in the middle of the boulevard—and when we spoke to him about the stop sign he angrily pulled around us and sped north.

Now cyclists do not need special favors and we quite agree that cyclists should obey the trafic laws, but we ask that motorists do the same. And we suggest that newspapers play fair in reporting an accident and give the facts in the headlines instead of tucked away in an obscure phrase hidden in the article.

TWO CITIZENS.

PERSHING ROAD AND OAKLAND.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Am writing this to you in the interest of reducing trafic accidents, as the police department pays little attention to individual letters.

Since they opened the new West Pershing road extension the trafic where it crosses Ashland avenue has become so terrific it's worth your life to get across. No matter which way the lights are turned you can't get over without great risk, and the number of pedestrians at 5 o'clock is exceptionally heavy. They'd better put a trafic policeman there before some one is killed.

O. M. GUCK.

ROAD HOGS.

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 23.—In line with your policy to publicize trafic behavior of motorists I call your attention to two cars that were pulled up to the left of the center of 22d street bridge when bridge was open at about 9 o'clock this morning. One car was less than two feet away from the left curb. It made no difference how many other cars were ahead of them, they were determined to cross the bridge first when the gates were raised.

CHURCHES AWAIT CHRISTMAS THRONGS

GOOD FELLOWS' FINAL HOLIDAY DRIVE LAUNCHED

Seeking Last Minute Recruits to Ranks.

Saturday should be Christmas on the southwest side. But in some barren corners where there is neither fuel for a fire nor food for a feast, it will not be unless a Good Fellow comes to the door.

Miss Helen Howe.

All week the Good Fellows, who in private life are Rotarians, university alumni, aviators, or just community residents, will make a last drive for recruits in their ranks. They will herald the holiday spirit with song, story, and speeches.

A Good Fellow can be either of two persons, one who donates to the Chicago Tribune Good Fellow fund or who one asks for the name of an unfortunate family and sees to it personally that they will have a Christmas Saturday. THE TRIBUNE will represent those who swell the Good Fellow fund and will deliver hundreds of baskets Friday morning. At 10 o'clock 260 baskets purchased by the Chicago Trafic club will be loaded on trucks from the Chicago Tunnel warehouse, under the supervision of J. J. Barrett, distribution chairman, and A. H. Schwietert, general chairman.

Roundup Begins Today.

The roundup of the twenty-ninth annual Good Fellow campaign will begin this afternoon with an hour's broadcast from 2 to 3 o'clock from the W-G-N radio studio and from 4 to 6 o'clock the Chicago Concert chorus will conduct a Good Fellow benefit concert in the Beaux Arts salon of the Medinah club under the direction of Miss Lucy Atkinson.

Proving that there is still time to get that "green sled" for little Jimmy McL. . . . who lives in Marquette Manor and whose only fun out of winter is sliding on the ice with his thin soles, Good Fellow rallies will continue throughout the week. From 3:30 to 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the third annual Good Fellow choral radio concert around the Christmas tree located between the Tribune Tower and the new W-G-N radio building will be directed by Miss Helen Howe, supervisor of music for the Chicago public schools.

The Rotarians, many of whom have little Jimmys at home where a "green sled" is just another toy, will champion the Good Fellow cause with a luncheon Tuesday noon in the Hotel Sherman. Byron O. Jones will be chairman. In the evening, from 7:30 to 7:35 o'clock, Dr. Paul Wolfe, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Evanston, will make a plea for the movement over W-G-N.

Hold Luncheon Wednesday.

In tribute to the first Good Fellow, the late Edward C. Fitch, the third Fraternity club Good Fellow memorial luncheon will be sponsored Wednesday noon by the Chicago Alumni association of Phi Kappi Psi in the University club. Arthur Fellows, chairman, will introduce the guest speaker, Maj. Gen. Frank Parker. Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf will be the principal speaker at the fifth aviation Good Fellow program at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the Municipal Airport Administration building. General chairman of the day will be Capt. Ora W. Young.

Those not taking part in public Good Fellow programs may do their part by filling in the Good Fellow coupon which appears in this section or by obtaining the name of some needy family at the Good Fellow bureau, 1 South Dearborn street. Phone Superior 0100.

The band of fifty pieces will be directed by S. W. Wallace,

Dorothy Takes a Tip in Time from Santa

Although 't'was a week before Christmas, all through the house not a creature was stirring, not even Dorothy, who sat huddled in a big chair beside the Christmas tree. She was hoping to get to the bottom of this Santa Claus story, when suddenly a booming voice rang out and, with a great "whisk" from the chimney, Santa Claus stood before her.

"Ho, ho," he roared, "so you are little Dorothy-Who-Doesn't-Believe! I should give you a coal in your stocking for that."

It had worked many times with Daddy, so little Dorothy climbed up and knelt on the arm of the chair. "Please, Santa," she pleaded, "I won't do it again." And Santa, being Santa, chuckled and gave her a cowboy doll.

For all such unbelievers to the faith, Santa Claus will make a personal appearance before 3,000 children every day this week at Davis Square, 45th street and Marshfield avenue, and before 250 children from 3:30 to 5 o'clock Thursday evening in Marquette park, Marquette road and Kedzie avenue. Enacting the little Christmas lesson are (left to right) Dorothy Ann McClure, 3137 West 66th street, and Russell Stein, 47th street and Ashland avenue.

VILLAGERS WILL VOTE ON ADDITION TO ARGO SCHOOL

The taxpayers of Argo-Summit will go to the polls Jan. 8 to vote for or against the $270,000 enlargement of the Argo Community High school, according to an announcement last week by Frank A. Brodnicki, secretary of the high school board. Action was taken on the project at a public meeting held in the high school auditorium under the auspices of the Argo-Summit Parent-Teacher council.

The proposed addition, designed by Burnham and Hammord, would be of modern American architecture to harmonize with the present building. It would be built of mottled press brick with a limestone trim and would house 16 classrooms and an auditorium accommodating 1,250 persons. The newest in equipment for machine and work shops, commercial rooms, and lecture halls is provided in specifications.

510 in Space for 250.

The present high school is overcrowded, having been built to take care of 250 students. The enrollment of the school this year is 510. The new addition would accommodate 350 more pupils. The recently organized apprentice classes of the Corn Products Refining company which are conducted in the evenings at the high school have a growing membership of more than 150 pupils. Due to the limited space in the present building temporary rooms have been erected at the end of the corridors, cutting off the emergency exits.

The amount of the bond issue is $270,000, $250,000 of which is for the building itself and $20,000 for equipment. According to Mr. Brodnicki it would not raise the last school tax rate of 38 cents per $100 assessed valuation, as a previous bond issue of $132,000 for the high school was paid up last Dec. 31. The average home owner's assessment at the market rates today would amount to around $6.03.

Plan 20 Year Spread.

The old bond indebtedness of the school was spread over a period of 15 years and the payment of the proposed addition will be allotted 20 years. Due to the credit standing of the district a premium of $4,511 above par has been offered for the bonds.

Clearing Industrial Chiefs to Hold Christmas Buffet

The holiday season for 250 executives of the Clearing industrial district will be celebrated at a Christmas buffet luncheon Friday. The party will be sponsored by the Clearing Industrial association for its members in the administration building, 6455 South Central avenue.

OUR TOWN

INDUSTRIAL Gary, city of steel, provided the background for "Let Out," short story by Miss Elma Klinedorf, 561 Buchanan street, Gary, which has been included in "American Medley," published collection of stories that have appeared in the magazine, "American Prefaces." The book has been described by critics as a "preview of young writers of today who will be the big names tomorrow." E. J. O'Brien, foremost anthologist of the short story, ranks "American Prefaces" as the third among all American publications in the number of high grade short stories published.

CARRYING out a tradition established by the late John Hayes Sr., forty-five years ago, old settlers and president residents of Woodlawn will gather Christmas afternoon at the Hayes hotel, 64th street and University avenue. John and Frank Hayes, sons of the hotel founder, will welcome visitors and escort them to the Wassail bowl, which will contain a Christmas libation made from an English recipe of 1784. The guests will drink from ancient pewter cups before they sit down to an old-fashioned holiday dinner. Among the old settlers will be Mrs. Leonora J. Burlingame, 93 years old; Mrs. Catherine Daly, 91 years old, and Mrs. Eliza Starin, 90 years old.

Robert Armstrong, 152 West 75th street, young south side dancer, had the rôle of an 18th century coiffeur in yesterday's matinée performance of Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier" by the Chicago City Opera company. In the evening he appeared as a dancer in Ruth Page's "The American Pattern."

FROM the University of Illinois comes news concerning the following south and southwest side residents: Thomas Micali, 5336 South Damen avenue, and Ray Kozul, 9521 Escanaba avenue, second and third year law students, respectively, were initiated into Phi Alpha Delta, honorary law fraternity. Marvin N. Nachman, 7300 South Shore drive, was one of ten students elected to Beta Gamma Sigma, scholastic honorary society in the commerce school. Howard Hale, 7951 Yale avenue, was one of twelve students pledged to Mask and Bauble, honorary dramatics organization.

MARGERY Eckhouse, 4833 Woodlawn avenue, 15 year old senior at University High school, became so proficient at doing the "Big Apple" that all of her friends requested lessons. So, to accommodate them, she sent out announcements in verse form, offering to give lessons free of charge Wednesday and Friday afternoons in her home. A classmate, Fritzi Freund, and his band of musicians are assisting with the background swing.

Silver wedding anniversary congratulations go to Mr. and Mrs. John Riess, 3321 South Hoyne avenue, who recently entertained several relatives and friends on the occasion.

South and southwest side couples who recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversaries are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rosenberg, 7237 Jeffery avenue; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Custer, residents of Englewood for twenty-seven years who recently moved to Fort Madison, Ia.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tuomey, 12810 Greenwood avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mattson of Blue Island.

Recently crowned at the Kampus Kapers show sponsored by the school's Varsity club, Miss Lorraine Murphy, 7716 Lowe avenue, was elected "Miss Fox College" for 1938 by students of the school, located at 757 West 79th street. Lorraine was graduated last June from Mercy High school and won the title over a field of ten contestants.

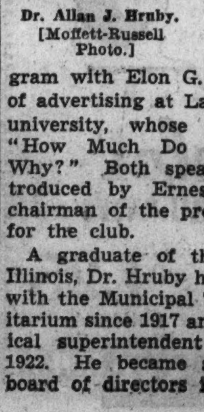
Gifts and candy will be distributed and a show will be presented. Residents of the community are invited to attend. Rudolph Gersch is secretary of the organization.

CENTRAL LIONS CLUB TO HEAR DR. HRUBY ON TUBERCULOSIS WAR

Anti-tuberculosis work accomplished in Chicago through the annual sale of Christmas seals, sponsored locally by the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, will be discussed by Dr. Allan J. Hruby, secretary of the board of directors of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium, Tuesday noon at the luncheon meeting of the Central Lions club, meeting in the Hotel La Salle.



Dr. Allan J. Hruby. [Moffett-Russell Photo.]

Dr. Hruby will share the program with Elon G. Borton, director of advertising at La Salle Extension university, whose subject will be "How Much Do You Make and Why?" Both speakers will be introduced by Ernest S. Beaumont, chairman of the program committee for the club.

A graduate of the University of Illinois, Dr. Hruby has been affiliated with the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium since 1917 and served as medical superintendent from 1918 to 1922. He became secretary of the board of directors in 1931.

Cardinal Isabella Council to Give Party for Children

The annual Christmas cheer party of Cardinal council, Ladies of Isabella, will be held this afternoon at St. Joseph's orphanage in Lisle. Each child will receive a stocking filled with nuts, a box of candy, and a gift from Santa Claus.

IT'S MOVING DAY TOMORROW FOR HIGHWAY POLICE

Cook county highway police will take over the newly erected $35,000 West station at Archer avenue and 67th street in Bedford Park tomorrow.

Dedication will not be held until early in the new year. Special guests at the ceremony will be Sherif John Toman, County Commissioner Carl J. Carlson, and William Erickson and officials of the Corn Products Refining company, which donated the site for the building.

The force, headed by Lieut. Fred Mulhausen, has been housed in a former bowling alley at Archer and Keane avenues. The building was a frame structure heated only by a coal stove. Ground for the new station was broken last August by Sherif Toman.

Gray Brick and Limestone.

The Bedford Park headquarters, designed by Eric Hall, county architect, is one story in height. Of gray brick with limestone trim, the building provides a squadroom equipped with lockers and recreation space, a courtroom, two jail cells, offices for the lieutenant and sergeant, restrooms for the public, and a garage accommodating seven cars. The furniture throughout is of dark mission oak.

In addition the police will have an ambulance equipped with stretchers, first aid instruments, and a short wave radio. The building itself has a frontage of 200 feet on Archer avenue, and in the spring the ground will be landscaped.

Serves 220 Square Miles.

The squad is composed of twenty-eight members and serves an area of 220 square miles, extending from Lake street on the north to 131st street on the south, and from the city limits on the east to the county line on the west. Small villages which have no protection of their own rely on West station. The south branch of the squad is quartered at Homewood, where the county board erected a station last March.

CRESCENDO CLUB TO HAVE MUSICAL THIS AFTERNOON

The Crescendo Musical club will hold a candlelight musical at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the studio residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Toy, 10144 South Wood street.

Mrs. Leonard B. Cox, 2127 West 110th street, program chairman, will introduce the guest artists.

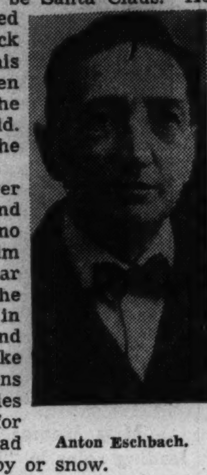
Story of Man Who Would Be Santa Claus

Once upon a time there was a man who wanted to be Santa Claus. He wore a striped shirt and a black bow tie and his hair wasn't even gray although he was 77 years old. But he had the chuckle.



Anton Eschbach.

He had never built a toy and there were no elves to help him out, for the year was 1936, but he had whimsy in his heart and yerned to make carts and wagons and tiny tables and chairs for children who had never seen a toy or snow.

The dream was founded on his own childhood. Back in 1859 when the great city of Chicago was yet a small town, he was born in a little cottage at 5th avenue and Monroe street.

There ARE Toys.

For 12 childhood years Christmases meant candle emblazoned evergreen trees and stockings hung on the bed post filled with candy, oranges, and nuts. There weren't many toys, only ten pins and marbles because his mother and father were poor. But Santa Claus visited him every year and he sat up many a Christmas eve to catch a wink of the jolly gentleman who had the magic knowledge of a boy's heart.

Then suddenly one winter his father died and he was the head of the house and its sole supporter, a man of 12, and Santa Claus was for children. He found odd jobs, messenger boy, clerk, and butcher boy. Gradually he had his own little candy and cigar business and then a butcher shop. As in all happy ever after stories he found the maid of his choice and married.

Santa Claus again visited his house and heaped his three children with toys and Christmas fare. But that lasted only a few years and then the Christmas lore again became a memory. The butcher who would be Santa Claus was growing old. He retired and went home to putter in his garden and make gadgets for the house.

The Big Idea.

The year became 1936. One day his wife held a meeting of the auxiliary of the Society of Missionary Catechists in the parlor. He overheard them tell of children in Mexico who walked miles to look at the wonder of a picture book, so he took an empty cigar box and went into the basement. A little while later he came up with a tiny wagon, "Do you think they would like this?" and he held the toy up for inspection. "I could make it gay with red paint."

Christmas was so near at hand that he only had time to fashion a dozen or so and send them to the snowless plains where Santa is a legend, not a reality. But this year he began in September. From a collection of several hundred cigar and cheese boxes he formed his pack. Beneath his lathe and hammer and jigsaw a box turned into a tiny blue cupboard and a cheese holder became a sturdy red and yellow wagon.

A week ago Friday he sat in his workshop and viewed a myriad of small brown carts, tiny peach tables and chairs set with thumbnail size dishes, diminutive blue beds with a completely dressed doll in each, red cradles, yellow rockers, and dainty cupboards. He could not whistle for a reindeer sled or don a white furred red suit, so he packed the toys in the modern manner in an express box and mailed them off to Holman, N. M., where 7,000 little children will know they came from Santa's workshop.

Has Fondness for Legends.

And he will make sure that they know the cupboards and wagons and carts are Santa's handiwork, for he holds no brief with modern teachers who tell their pupils that there is no Santa Claus. He says: "The illusion belongs rightfully to the child. It is a cold proposition when Sammy says 'I got these skates from dad and the sled from mother.'"

Anton Eschbach, 7818 South Throop street, is the butcher who would be Santa Claus and saw his dream come true.

DEVOUT TO PAY YULE HOMAGE TO BABE OF MANGER

All Faiths Prepare Special Services.

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

Nineteen hundred thirty-seven years ago a king was born in a stable. His parents had been refused lodging in the inns of the star-lit town of Bethlehem. But humble shepherds who tended their flocks high near the heavens on the hills of the countryside felt the night to be cosmic and came to worship at the manger.

Thousands of southwest side residents will emulate the faithful shepherds Friday and Saturday in the churches of the community. They will honor the Christmas Child in prayer, pageant, and song.

A solemn high mass at dawn and high noon will be celebrated Christmas day by St. Barnabas church, 101st place and Longwood drive, of which the Rev. T. J. Hurley is pastor. Two choirs, the regular church group and boy choristers, will sing. Other low masses will be at 7, 8, 9, and 10 o'clock in the morning.

The Christmas service of the Pullman Methodist Episcopal church, 112th street and St. Lawrence avenue, will take place at 11 o'clock this morning. The Rev. Albert A. Myers, pastor, will preach the sermon and the choir will sing a Christmas program. A festival under the auspices of the Sunday school will be presented at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at which time a Nativity play will be produced.

Hugh M. MacWhorter, rector.

Egan, pastor of St. Sabina's church, 78th place and Thropp street, has announced a schedule of masses for Christmas day, beginning with solemn high at 5 o'clock, followed by masses at 6:30, 7, 8, 9, 10, 10:30, and 12 o'clock. The St. Sabina choir, under the direction of Miss Jule Mulligan and A. J. Davis, organist, will furnish the music.

Hundreds of poinsettias and palms will decorate the high altar of St. Bernard's church, 66th street and Stewart avenue, for Christmas morning masses. The Rt. Rev. J. F. Ryan, pastor, will celebrate solemn high mass at 5 o'clock in the morning and low masses will be conducted at 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11 o'clock. Another solemn high mass will be sung at noon. He will be asked to distribute baskets of food to needy families, jelly and money to ex-service men, toys and candy to children, baby clothing and medicine to young mothers and grab bag gifts to members.

Blue Island Woman's Club.

The annual Christmas program of the club will be held Tuesday afternoon in the Elks' clubrooms, Blue Island. Mrs. Norman Beasley, program chairman, will be in charge of the afternoon which has been arranged by the music department. The history of the Christmas carol will be told by Mrs. W. J. Ferne and Miss Muriel Engelland will sing some of the well known carols. The social hour will be conducted by Miss Ethel Klein, refreshment chairman.

HEAD OF SCHOOLS OUTLINES HIS NEW TWO TRACK PLAN

Will Enable Exceptional Child to Advance.

Major points of the two track plan, whereby Chicago's public elementary school children can progress according to their natural ability, were explained last week by Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools.

As the name suggests, the plan enables the exceptional child to pass his slow or ordinary fellows on the path of knowledge, preparing himself for usefulness in the world sooner than under the old "lockstep" plan, in which all move at the same pace.

As the plan operates, a mental sounding of each child is taken in grade 1 B. This includes a mentality rating, achievement tests, and data on health, emotional stability, and social development. The information is gained both by contact and through interviews with parents.

Separate Types of Pupils.

Pupils of high ability are placed in separate classes at the end of the first school semester. These children then complete the first three and one-half years' school work in three years.

When the first three and one-half years' work is finished the teacher of the "express track" child determines whether or not he shall continue at the same pace, completing the next three and one-half years' studies in three years.

Thus the exceptional children do seven years of work in six. There is no quickened pace for the eighth grade, because the work of this grade —in citizenship, leadership, morale, and the like—demands more leisurely treatment.

The plan is flexible, Supt. Johnson assures parents. In some cases, for example, a child may be advanced even before the end of his first school semester. Transfers can be made from the "express" track to the "local" track, and vice versa, if necessary.

Skipping May Be Desirable.

"In the case of unusually bright children," Dr. Johnson said, "double promotions or 'skipping' may still be considered desirable.

"It is hoped, however, that with the two track plan children of reasonably similar social and mental development may be kept together. There always is a certain amount of risk involved when children are pushed ahead beyond their own maturity from a social point of view."

Advantages of the "two track" plan are several, Dr. Johnson believes.

It will lessen the big fault of "skipping"—the fact that a doubly promoted child loses an important section of school work. "Express tracking" will take him over the course in less time, yet cover it completely.

Teachers Can Concentrate.

The "express" pupils can start preparing early for their life work, and their teachers can concentrate on their swifter development.

Another virtue cited by the superintendent for the new plan is that it stimulates the exceptional child to greater mental activity. Under a single track plan, Dr. Johnson said, the quick child is likely to fall into lazy habits, become discontented, and fall into mischief.

SPONSORS SHOW A PREDILECTION FOR AIR QUIZZES

Question and Answer Rage Sweeps Studios.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

One predilection among broadcasters—almost as strong as the passion for Hollywood stars or the tune "Mamma, I Want to Make Rhythm"—is the radio quiz craze. Practically any evening—and practically any hour—you may turn on the family receiver and find a sponsor offering to send you some perfectly useless item if you will only tear off the top of the doghouse you are in, or a reasonable facsimile thereof, along with 50 cents to cover cost of mailing—and the correct answers to five easy, too easy, questions.

There isn't any doubt that this brand of program is popular. Take, for instance, Kay Kyser's Kollege of Musical Knowledge broadcast over W-G-N from the Blackhawk restaurant from midnight Monday to 1 a. m.—when one would suppose that 90 per cent of the listening audience must be sound asleep. And yet with no more bait than an autographed scroll [diploma] for correct answers to five questions Kyser last week drew more than 2,000 letters.

Participation for Listeners.

One reason for the popularity of such a program is the fact that it permits the listening audience to participate and to share in the broadcast. Another is the satisfaction in displaying one's fount of information—we shall not say erudition—on a variety of subjects. Thus, these programs combine the allure of the old Ask Me Another business, charades and similar parlor games with the so-called intelligence tests which the psychologists have so much fun with.

These quiz programs take many forms. In the Prof. Quiz program and Uncle Jim's Question Bee the questions are drawn out of a hat or something—contributed by listeners—and put to individuals in the studio audience. It is often the fortune of gentlemen to draw questions submitted by ladies. And thus the listening audience is treated to such diverting sequences as a man endeavoring to define dropstitching, or a housewife explaining the use of a carburetor.

Quizzing the Quizzer.

In the Question-Air conducted by Bob Brown studio participants are permitted to reciprocate and to ask questions that sometimes confound their interrogator. There are sponsors, however, that shy away from this sort of thing, probably on the grounds that no one associated with their end of the program should be permitted to seem fallible in any shape or form.

These quiz programs also take the form of spelling bees—or spelldowns. Sponsors figure out all kinds of unusual combinations in competitors, chorus girls versus tired business men, old men versus old ladies, co-eds versus truck drivers. A new height of something or other was reached recently on a local spelldown, sponsored by a beer maker, who presented a bunch of Northwestern co-eds from the studio—though beer may not be sold within a certain proscribed area about the Evanston campus.

The Zenith Foundation telepathy tests have this quiz aspect, too. It's on a higher plane than some of the others, the avowed purpose of the program being the assembling of evidences of extra sensory perception. Thus when a roulette wheel spins listeners from coast to coast may guess where it stopped and next week find out how badly they erred.

Reassurances for Sponsor.

In addition to measuring the telepathic pulse of the nation, the sponsor can also get a pretty good reaction as response to his program. That may be one reason why so many sponsors are going for quiz programs. Musical or variety programs elicit little written response among listeners by comparison with the question and answer broadcasts—unless there is an outside contest offer. And it is natural enough for a sponsor to like written reassurances that some one is listening.

Chief criticism we have against quiz programs is that—except in rare instances—they serve only as entertainment and that of the simplest and sometimes silliest sort. No questions on controversial subjects are ever asked; no efforts to poll the public on matters of vital concern to them are ever made.

Unless sponsors begin injecting a little more rhyme or reason into the quiz type of broadcast this fad seems destined—and rightly so—for that same ash can in which now are resting knock-knock, mah-jongg, and the "Music Goes Round and Round."

CHRISTMAS NOTE TO DOMINATE W-G-N PROGRAMS

Two special presentations dedicated to Christmas top the list of programs to be aired from W-G-N's audience studio this week.

Twenty-nine years ago the late Edward C. Fitch, a Chicago attorney, suggested that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE foster the Good Fellow campaign. Details of this great campaign, a feature of every Christmas time since 1908, will be explained in the "On a Sunday Afternoon" program over W-G-N from 2 to 3 o'clock today.

Harold Stokes will conduct the W-G-N Dance orchestra on the program, which also will include dramatic actors and actresses, vocal and instrumental soloists, and the Tribune's Good Fellow editor, Philip Maxwell. The entire cast includes nearly 100 persons. Good Fellow workers will be special guests of W-G-N at the broadcast.

Included in the soloists to appear will be Edna O'Dell and Arthur Wright, while the W-G-N Glee club and the "Three Men and a Maid" quartet also will be heard. A special drama will star Francis X. Bushman of stage and movie fame, while a specialty number will be furnished by the Dunbars, a quartet of Swiss bell ringers. Mr. Maxwell will explain the aims and accomplishments of the Good Fellows.

On Friday at 9:30 p. m. a special Christmas eve production of "Curtain Time" will feature Charles Dickens' immortal "A Christmas Carol" with an all-star cast directed by Blair Walliser and special music by the W-G-N Concert orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber. Hugh Studebaker will play Scrooge. The part of Bob Cratchet will be played by Billy Lee, Cratchet by Olan Soule, Tiny Tim by Cornelius Peeples, Bella by Alice Hill, while Ken Griffin, Dave Gothard, and Howard Hoffman also are included in the cast.

WHAT SANTA SELECTED FOR A MUSICAL MARIE—Dr. Dafoe takes the rôle of Santa Claus in a pre-Christmas appearance by Marie Dionne of the Callander, Ont., quintuplets. Marie probably has an idea that her doll soon will start her musical education. The five famous little girls have been getting some of their presents ahead of time.

ASTONISHMENT OR JUST A POLITE YAWN?—The photographer visiting the open air Christmas sales in Caledonian market, London, was not certain whether this child was expressing surprise at the size of the toy rabbit or yawning after a long day of looking. There has been a big rush of shoppers this season at this famous market.

ORDER TOMORROW A SWIFT'S PREMIUM TURKEY for CHRISTMAS

HERE'S HOW YOU TELL a genuine Swift's Premium Turkey. These finer birds are identified by a tag with the words Swift's Premium Turkey and the tag is attached to the wing of the bird.

BIG, MOIST SLICES of tender white meat . . . generous servings of juicy dark meat . . . here's the way to get 'em! . . . Reserve a Swift's Premium Turkey at your dealer's. Look for the tag attached to the wing which says Swift's Premium Turkey. This tag means that this particular bird has been specially selected and carefully fed for plump, delicate goodness. We've ordered thousands of these finer turkeys. But—to be sure of getting one for your table, place your order tomorrow.

Chicago High R.O.T.C. School News

210 HIGH SCHOOL CADETS TO WIN TRIBUNE MEDALS

Awards to Be Presented After Holidays.

Orders were placed last week for 159 gold and 51 silver medals, which will be presented to the outstanding high school R. O. T. C. cadets of Chicago and suburbs in assemblies at the schools beginning the first of January.

In support of the R. O. T. C. and its training of boys in citizenship and leadership THE TRIBUNE makes these awards each semester to the superior cadets chosen by military instructors as ranking the highest in their units. One medal is given for each fifty cadets or major fraction thereof, the gold to upper classmen and the silver to freshmen.

Twenty for Lane Cadets.

The Lane Technical High school R. O. T. C., with an enrollment of 1,008 this semester, ranks as the largest unit in Chicagoland and will receive the greatest number of medals, 15 of the gold and 5 of the silver. The St. Mel's High school regiment with 735 cadets rates second and will receive 10 gold and 5 silver.

The other schools and the number of gold and silver medals to be presented to their cadets are the following:

Amundsen, 3 and 1; Austin, 8 and 3; Bowen, 4 and 1; Calumet, 4 and 1; Crane, 5 and 2; Du Sable, 4 and 2; Englewood, 3 and 2; Fenger, 6 gold; Foreman, 2 and 1; Harrison, 3 and 1; Harper, 2 and 1; Hirsch, 4 and 2; Hyde Park, 4 and 1; Kelly, 3 and 1; Lake View, 6 and 1.

Lindblom, 7 gold; Marshall, 2 and 1; Morgan Park, 4 and 2; Roosevelt, 4 and 1; Schurz, 5 and 6; Senn, 5 and 2; Steinmetz, 3 and 1; Sullian, 3 and 1; Tilden, 8 and 1; Von Steuben, 3 and 2; Waller, 2 and 1.

Eanston, 3 and 1; Joliet, 5 and 2; Waukegan, 10 gold, and Horace Mann, Lew Wallace, and Emerson of Gary, 3 gold for each.

Four Have No Freshmen.

Fenger, Lindblom, Waukegan, and the Gary schools do not enroll freshmen in the R. O. T. C., so only gold medals will be presented at those schools.

Indicating the popularity of these medals, Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics of the Chicago public school units, has said:

"THE TRIBUNE awards have contributed much to the advancement of high school R. O. T. C. activity in Chicago by providing an added incentive for the cadets. The awards are most desirable not just because they are awards but because they are something for which the boys really strive and work. And they are extremely proud when they have won them."

—Englewood—

Thirty-five cadets of the Englewood High school R. O. T. C. recently were promoted and received warants as non-commissioned officers.

Harold Popescu and Isaac Knox are the new first sergeants, and Wayne Ball, Frank Gabler, Wilbur Kelso, and Alex Poulos the newly-appointed staf sergeants.

Those who were named cadet sergeants are the following:

Alfred Williams	Jesse Irwin

Warren Smith	Harry Nelson
Maceo Moore	John Hoffenbacher
Edward White	Carlos Stepto
Leon Coleman	Robert Andrew
Walter Greene

—Fenger—

Enrollment in the Fenger High school R. O. T. C. for the new semester will begin immediately after the Christmas holidays, Sergt. William P. Robinson, military instructor, announced last week.

By this method, the load at the start of the semester will be relieved and the unit will be organized sooner, thus permitting extra time for study and preparation for the spring federal inspection.

Three officers of the unit were promoted recently. Cadet First Lieutenant Charles Bult was advanced to cadet captain, and Cadet Second Lieutenants Joseph Adducci and Richard Bergstrom to cadet first lieutenants.

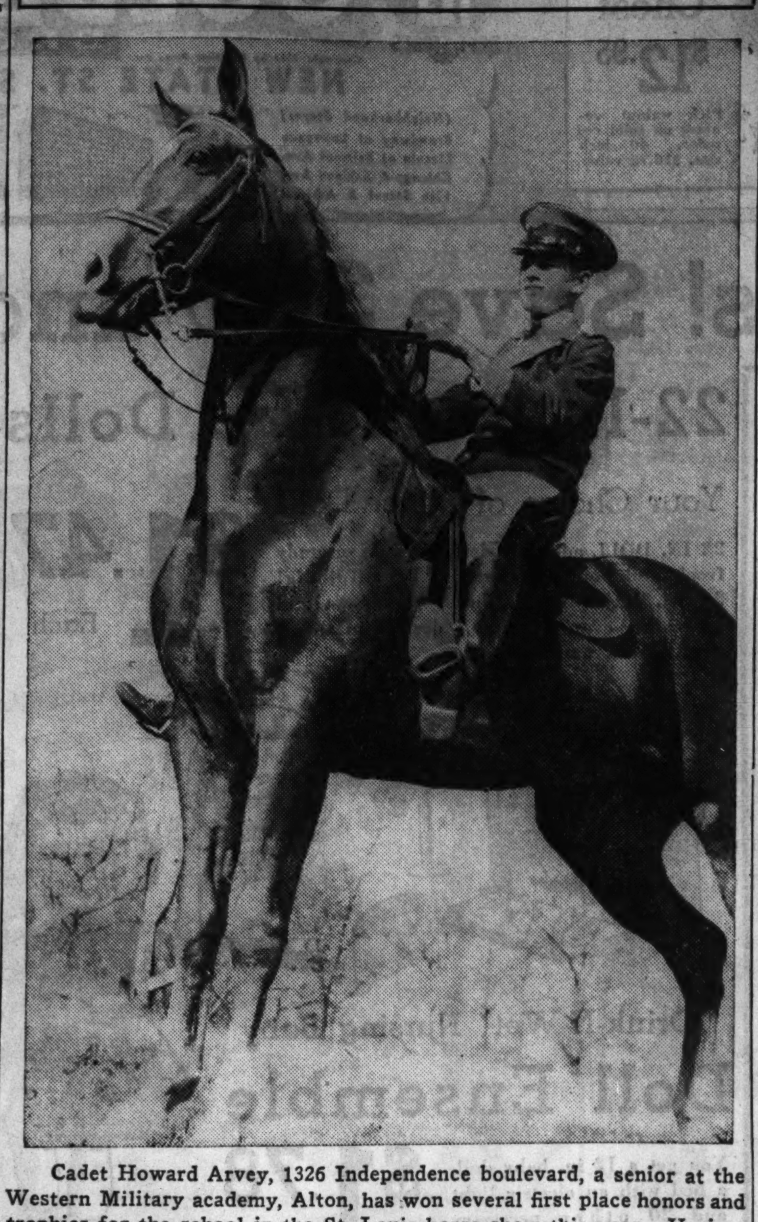
Prize Winning Horse Show Rider



Cadet Howard Arvey, 1326 Independence boulevard, a senior at the Western Military academy, Alton, has won several first place honors and trophies for the school in the St. Louis horse show this year. He is a member of the riding club and recently was selected as business manager of the year book, the Recall. He is astride Highland King, one of the thoroughbred prize winners of the Western stables.

TILDEN CADETS TAKE TESTS FOR MEDAL AWARDS

62 Boys of Regiment Act as Ushers.

Cadet Maj. Arthur Dusenbury, regimental commander of the Tilden Technical High school R. O. T. C., recently conducted tests which will be an important factor in the selection of cadets to receive the medals awarded this semester. He was assisted by Cadet Majors Walter Bullinger and Frank Walsh, battalion commanders.

Cadets were inspected and graded on their personal appearance, and then took an examination on the subjects they have studied this semester. Attendance and merits and demerits also will be considered in choosing the winners.

Sixty-two cadets compose the school ushers who maintain order during school assemblies and other meetings in the building.

Golden Blessing

A half century of married life was blessed recently for Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Schuler, 6521 South Marshfield avenue, at St. Theodore church, 1650 West 62d street. Following the ceremony open house was held in their home. They are the parents of four sons and a daughter and have six grandchildren.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB WELCOMES SANTA TONIGHT

200 of His Friends Will Present Pageant.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

All members of the younger set who sometimes complain that Santa Claus [like a birthday] comes but once a year, should hasten down to the early 7 o'clock Sunday Evening club program tonight at Orchestra hall. Santa'll be there — the real Santa who, without sleighbells or beard, reindeers or need for chimneys or stockings, works for the joy of boys and girls, men and women three hundred and sixty-five and one-fourth days every year.

Canon D. E. Gibson.

This year 'round Santa will be dramatized in a pageant written by the Rev. Irving St. John Tucker, of the noted Little Church at the End of the Road, and enacted by a cast of 200 beneficiaries of the constant Christmas maintained by Christian folk of Chicago in shelters, orphanages, homes, neighborhood houses and social settlements. While tonight's drama centers about Episcopal institutions, yet these, the Sunday Evening club announces, will only illustrate what a big all year yule the city's churches keep.

Santa of Many Faces.

Well, that will depend, they say, on what one sees at Orchestra hall. Some intimate that the year 'round Santa will look like Canon David E. Gibson, of Cathedral shelter, Washington and Peoria streets. Others hint that he will take after the Rev. Albert E. Selcer, at St. Luke's center, 741 South Western avenue, or Dr. William Seath, of the Chicago Christian Industrial league, or David Schnable of the Chicago Heights Community center, or Dr. Paul Fox, of Laird Community house, 1838 West Division street.

There are many who say that this real Santa is not necessarily a man, adding that Deaconess Helen M. Fuller, of Chase house, 211 South Ashland avenue, or scores of members of kindly sisterhoods in homes, orphanages and hospitals throughout the city perfectly portray the constant Christmas spirit.

It may well be that each one, as the drama unfolds tonight, will see a different Santa, and well they may. There are, it is said, enough Santas for all.

League for Labor Palestine to Hear National Secretary

Dr. Alexander Kohanski of New York, national secretary of the League for Labor Palestinian, will address a joint open meeting of Chicago chapters this evening at the Chicagoan hotel, 65 West Madison street.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Red Thornapples Appear

Dec. 18, 1937.

ALTHOUGH snow and ice covered the ground last week, bright red thornapples made their appearance in some parts of the woods. The thornapples now visible are all on the ground for the red haw trees are bare of both fruit and leaves. Before the arrival of snow we liked to walk under the haws just to see the splashes of color made by the hundreds of little thornapples on the green grass. Then came the snow and all the berries were covered.

But the other day when we took a hike through the woods we again saw red thornapples in the snow. Judging from the blurred tracks in the thin blanket of snow, both squirrels and rabbits have been feeding on the frozen thornapples.

Storehouse of Fruit.

The first thing under a haw tree to catch one's eye is a small hole in the snow around which are scattered bits of grass and old leaves. Animal tracks in the snow and partially eaten thornapples can be seen, showing that the animals have not forgotten the store of fruit. We counted seven of these places where free meals had been enjoyed beneath two haw trees. Each was marked by the bright red of the thornapples. We tasted several thornapples which had been dug up by the animals. They still had the old typical flavor of the haw even though they had been frozen for several weeks.

The light snow which covered the farm a few days ago was a help in checking on the presence or absence of rats around some of the buildings, and a guide to the distribution of red squill baits. Around one barn we found the tracks of rats showed where the animals were using a pile of stones as a hideout. The snow revealed how the animals were running back and forth from the stonepile to a barn and garage nearby. Other tracks proved that one or two rats were running into the basement of one of the farm cottages. All of these places were baited with red squill, a powder which kills rodents but will not injure farm animals. The squill was placed on bread and lard, cheese, and sliced ham.

Discover Food Supply.

A chicken house near the sheep barn [that has a generous supply of food in storage for the fowls] has been discovered by the rats. And once discovered the animals got busy to gnaw holes so they could reach this food at night and pilfer all they wanted from the fowls. Competing against a delicious mixture of grain [delicious to the rats] is not easy when one is trying to tempt the rats with baits. But indications are that some of the animals have been lured from the night feed of grain to a meal of bread, meat and red squill.

The smokehouse had a smoldering hickory fire in it last week and again became a pretty important little building on the farm. The job was to smoke a number of fat farm turkeys that had been in a pickling brine for several days. After the birds have been immersed in the pickling solution they go into the smokehouse for the finishing touches in the cure.

Yeomen Warders Search Cellars of Houses of Parliament

Yeomen warders of the Tower of London lined up before houses of parliament to search cellars before state opening by King George VI. The custom dates from the days of James I., when Guy Fawkes and his co-conspirators were arrested and executed for the gunpowder plot. Barrels of gunpowder had been secreted in the vaults and it was proposed to fire them when the king and his ministers assembled.

NEW HIGH WATER MARK IN NOVEMBER CITY AND SUBURBAN DAILY CIRCULATION

854,481

Again in November readers in increasing numbers turned to the Tribune for its superior coverage of the news, its forthright editorial stand and its unequaled features.

With the result that during November net paid daily circulation averaged 692,442 in Chicago and suburbs alone—a new high water mark for the month.

This was a gain of 23,667 over the same month a year ago.

In Chicago and suburbs alone the Tribune reaches upwards of 300,000 more families than any other Chicago daily newspaper.

Today the Tribune is the only Chicago newspaper which delivers majority coverage of all the families in metropolitan Chicago. It reaches practically as many families in Chicago and suburbs as any two other Chicago daily newspapers combined.

During November, 1936, total net paid circulation of the Tribune was 825,859. During November of this year it was 854,481—a gain of 28,622.

Today, as always, advertisers cannot get more out of a newspaper than the editor puts in. As the newspaper which has best demonstrated its ability to widen the market for its own product, the Tribune is best able to help advertisers find more customers for theirs.

Fashion Decrees Daring Hats for Women

● Above: Unquestionably the most exciting and spectacular duet of gloves and hat of the year, and a perfect foil for an afternoon or dinner dress. The long gloves are cuffed with monkey skin fur.

By RHEA SEEGER

STILL the most exhilarating shopping excitement, hats of all colors, heights and contrasts continue to cause uncontrolable twinges of desire, they still make or ruin a completed ensemble. All you need to best dramatize your personality, to subtly accent your headline are hats of the hour. They may be the towering peaks cleverly molded to the skull, or the perennial flat favorites, the pillboxes, with or without tie straps or the in-betweens, the super-flattering brimmed affairs—but they're all definitely provocative, dangerously so.

Some of the most exciting hats are those that have been designed as the main interest of a costume . . . a costume invariably simple, dress or gown, devoid of any extra ruffle, flounce, or other trim, a mere sheath of material with which the hat, bag, and matching gloves become the eye catching details. Even superlatively sophisticated evening ensembles are achieved with such a Puritan plain gown and a hat and gloves combine. And the same rather breath taking effect has been accomplished with a fur coat as a basic foundation; for instance, black Persian lamb lighted most alluringly with soft doeskin gloves of citron yellow matched to a peaked hat of the same color . . . a blue fox coat made of that flattering smoky gray toned fox, worn with delft blue gloves and matching fox trimmed blue felt hat.

Fur trimmed hats reach new "highs" this winter; if last year's crop seemed high prepare for a shock, for the newest showings climb the stratosphere. Most of them, however, are made of supple materials that can be squashed down into lower altitudes, into softer outlines to flatter your particular headline. Flat fur is used for band trim usually, with pompons and silver fox tails for the more spectacular models. Fur as a winter accent for smart hats is now attached, applied or banded by experts, softly, smoothly and with a total lack of unseemly bulk. Mink trimmed hats are especially becoming and easy to wear, whether they are the dizzily high affairs, the beret type or the smaller, more severe pillbox.

From the designing room of America's most prolific hat maker, Dache, come the most distinctive hat and glove combines of all the fashion showings, creations so startlingly different, so varied as to achieve for the wearers a reputation for smartness and individuality.

Lots of Dache's hats are available without gloves, but it's the hat-glove combine where she really proves her unerring genius for the distinctive and unusual. The colors alone should earn the croix de guerre for millinery showmanship. Only Dache would dare to mix such practically unmixable shades as wine and an eye blinding cerise and then add a dash of sage green or canary yellow with a telling defiance or just plain nonchalance. No one but Dache would dare to loop wooden beads on a towering hat and none but this genius would think of copying the war regalia of African savages and make a hat festooned with rows of wooden beads.

Five new hats with the Dache label have been sketched today.

With 11,000 seats to dispose of, members of the Chicago section of the National Council of Jewish Women are working hard up to the last minute before the curtain rises tomorrow night on the opening performance of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo at the Auditorium theater. The council is sponsoring tomorrow's, Tuesday's and Wednesday's performances of the ballet as its sole fund raising project of the year.

Chicago friends of the late Felix Warburg of New York will occupy the box for which he subscribed shortly before his death. Among others who have taken boxes or seats are Mayor Kelly, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Dr. Joseph B. De Lee, Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Emanuel Mandel, Herbert M. Lautmann, Mrs. Samuel A. Stein, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Block, Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Harrison, and Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Hollender.

Tomorrow's evening opening performance will be followed by a buffet supper in the Blue room of the Auditorium hotel for members of the ballet. In charge of ticket sales for this supper and for the three performances is a committee of 100, headed by Mrs. Fred Bernstein. Tickets also are available, at no increase in prices, at the Auditorium box office.

Mrs. Gabriel Dunkleman will speak on "I Met Henrietta Szold," and Mrs. Harry Berkman will talk on "I Know Henrietta Szold." Rabbi Israel H. Weisfeld also will speak and there will be a musical program. Mrs. Harry M. Fisher is president of the Chicago chapter of Hadassah.

Tomorrow has been designated as South Side Hadassah Membership day. Luncheons will be held at the homes of Mrs. Harry Berkman, 5319 Woodlawn avenue, and of Mrs. David M. Rubin, 5418 Ellis avenue, and teas will be given at Mrs. Phillip Cale's home, 7405 Crandon avenue, and at Mrs. Louis Zax's home, 7914 Eberhart avenue. Programs have been arranged for these meetings, and members have been invited to bring friends.

Three decades of service to the community completed, Sarah Greenebaum lodge, No. 16, United Order of True Sisters, will look forward to new enterprises at its thirtieth birthday party tomorrow. A luncheon will be held at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street, with Mrs. Louis Friedmann, president, and Mrs. Lawrence Smith and Mrs. William Lipman, respectively presidents of Johanna and Lincoln lodges, the other two Chicago branches of the organization, among the speakers.

Mrs. Martin Barbe, pioneer club leader, and Mrs. Ralph Sherman, first president of Sarah Greenebaum lodge, also will address the meeting. Mrs. Robert P. Frank, former president, will present the organization with a new flag. Afterward there will be a performance by the Mummers of an act from the comedy, "No Kidding," at the Chicago Woman's club theater.

Johanna lodge, original Chicago group of the United Order of True Sisters, was 20 years old, and had a capacity membership, when Sarah Greenebaum lodge was organized as an offshoot. Named for the Chicago woman who was the mother of Mrs. Hannah Solomon, founder of the National Council of Jewish Women, and of the Greenebaum family of bankers, the organization numbers some 400 members.

Rest Haven, a convalescent home for women and girls, was founded and maintained by the group on Prairie avenue for 25 years until last May, when the institution was turned over to several auxiliaries. Now Sarah Greenebaum lodge is casting about for a new philanthropy.

A resale shop to which members donate articles is operated at 46th street and Cottage Grove avenue. A variety of civic and charitable projects, including work for the blind and the hard of hearing, also is supported by the organization, which meets at 32 West Randolph street.

Rhumba Under Ban By Girls' Advisers at U. of Pittsburgh

Don't rhumba if you want to be a co-ed in good standing. That's one of the rules in the booklet presented to all freshman girls at the University of Pittsburgh.

"Pittiquette," edited by Mary Roche of the class of '40, advises saving rhumba, tango, and southern swing exhibitions for private showings.

Other pointers given include advice to:

Collect names. Speak when you are spoken to and make a point of finding out later who spoke to you—so you'll know next time.

Give your courtesy muscles a little exercise. Rise at the proper moments. That means rising for faculty members. It is also a good idea to practice on seniors.

Come to class on time. Also say good morning to the professor. And sit in at least a semi-becoming manner in the classroom. ["Incidentally," the booklet adds slyly, "being in the same classroom is considered introduction enough—if you want to speak to that handsome senior two rows behind."]

Learn to smoke fastidiously. Buy your own cigarets. Put your ashes and general débris in ash trays where they belong. But don't smoke in the corridors, on the street, or on the dance floor.

Learn to appreciate all types of personalities. That applies to "Helen who believes in every conceivable form of radicalism . . . to Margery who tells really exciting stores with elastic truth . . . to Lillian who verbally criticizes everything you wear . . . to Betty who thinks of nothing but men."

Hats for Afternoon Wear Are Delightfully Dizzy

AFTERNOON hats are delightfully dizzy. One of them, called "Valentine," is of red velvet, stitched into the shape of a heart, with black Persian lamb facing its rising brim. Another is a Cossack hat of black and fluffy beaver, accented by red antelope and gold.

Shun Barbaric Fashions for Cruise Wear

By Bettina Bedwell.

THERE are only five fatal days left for you folks to win out in your final hectic bout with that Christmas list. But I have a little message for those femmes who are taking a holiday cruise to get away from it all during the next few weeks. What are YOU going to wear?

I hope you haven't been listening too hard to those master minds in fashion promotion who've been burbling about the rich, barbaric fashions of central Europe and urging you into a little sports number inspired by what Hungarian peasants wear on fête days at home. Or something the picturesque proletariat of Jugo-Slavia or the Dalmatian coast were wearing last summer.

These influences are swell and colorful in their place, but on a cruise gaudy peasant clothes are more than apt to make you feel like Mrs. Astor's horse at a Ritz gala.

Why not take a tip from the duchess of Windsor, who recently collected clothes for a cruise to Honolulu. Or what Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt chose to wear on her yacht this winter?

THESE women, and others who are used to travel, cruises, and such goings on, left the fancier clothes scenery where it belongs, on the backs of peasants. They picked their clothes for ease, comfort, and for that well bred, well brushed look that speaks softly and is never tiresome.

Both the duchess of Windsor and Mrs. Vanderbilt ordered very simple tailored frocks of turquoise blue wool to wear around on board. Turquoise blue wool cruise and sports frocks are NEWS for the southern season ahead. Just where the duchess of Windsor is going to wear hers now has nothing to do with the case.

Both these women and others in the rarefied atmospheres of higher society, are packing loose or fitted, simple wool coats to wear over a variety of daytime sports dresses. No fur, no flub-dubbery about these coats. Fine tailoring, good wool, and real simplicity. The duchess has a dark blue wool coat, and a brown one.

VERY new and breath takingly smart for cruise and southern wear are long coats, made of smooth, mens' wear wool, with fine pencil or hairline stripes of white traveling up and down them. Just as new and attractive are coats made of finest shepherd checked wool, also from men's materials.

Cruise hats, aside from the necessary brimmed felt hat, which protects your eyes and is a terrible handicap in a strong headwind, come in small sizes. Schiaparelli's impudent quilted berets and Chanel's Scotch cap berets are two of the best.

For evening Schiaparelli's chiffon stocking jersey hoods will be priceless boons to midnight deck walkers. Louisebourbon's big hats made out of packing case canvas and trimmed with sober velvet leaves are knockout millinery items to wear on southern shores.

Printed silk dresses, already out and rar'in to go south, come in small designs, are shirtmaker types or sleekline afternoon dresses with high necks and elbow sleeves. New beach dresses come in striped linen, worked in chevrons, or in vivid pastel colors.

SWEATERS to wear with checked, striped or plain tweed skirts come longer and are draped along the bosom for women who can't wear the ordinary pull-over. The best of all are Chanel's new waist-coat sweaters, which that genius is showing in her mid-season collection.

Just sheer inspiration. The hip-length sweater is heavy ribbed, blue knitted wool, while the front is made of blue wool goods embroidered all over with small designs in several gay colors. A navy ribbon makes the bow tie and another the belt. An easy skirt of navy blue smooth wool has set-in hip-length pockets. Chanel's Scotch cap beret has embroidery around the sides, a navy top, and navy ribbon hung off the stern.

A second Chanel triumph for the cruise is made of smooth black wool striped with wide and narrow pastel pink stripes, which run vertically on the skirt and in chevrons on the waistcoat blouse. Cuff-link pink buttons fasten this dress up the front. A pink cap with twin bows of black grosgrain ribbon set about the forehead can be folded and stuck in a pocket.

For cruise evenings, Lucien Lelong's ensemble is recommended. First of all the bolero packet wrap, made of golden yellow velvety wool is perfect. When it is removed the soft, Persian green silk bodice, just two crossed, draped bands held by a jeweled star, is very daring and formal. A wide, shirred corselet girdle of ruby red velvety wool and a slim dark brown wool skirt complete this four-color ensemble done by a master colorist.

Oak Furniture Demands Textured Upholstery

OAK is always associated with furniture of sturdy, massive lines. Chairs and davenports of oak should never be upholstered in smooth silks or satins, but should be done in textured, "tweedy" wools, or in heavy velvet, plain or cut, or in mohair velvet, heavy brocatelles, or heavy brocades. When patterned fabrics are used the design should not be dainty or too small.

Empress Nagako of Japan has granted 100,000 yen for the relief of soldiers' families.

No. 5219—The Paris pattern for this dress is available in sizes 14 and 16, and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The spirit of youth apparent in this frock makes it eminently successful for both debutantes and matrons who neither look nor feel their age! It's a discreet model and one which has "gone over big" here in the "style center of Europe." One salon brought out the model and immediately women all over Paris had it copied or adapted for their own uses. The personal seamstresses of many smart women were really busy for a while, and with reason. I'm sure you will like this dress as much as they did.

You won't tire of the frock in a hurry. It has enduring charms. The V neckline is surrounded with soft folds that originate in shirring at the shoulders. The sleeves are raglan and may be full through the entirety of their three-quarter length. The shirring in the bodice, just above the snug waistline, makes for grace. The plain skirt has the fullness you require for beauty and comfort. At the neckline and around the waist is contrasting fabric in a harmonizing shade.

Crepe in its manifold types is the thing for this dress. The original, glimpsed with envy in the smart salon of its creator, was of roughly surfaced silk in a steel gray shade, and the bit of fabric at the neck and the sash around the waist were of shiny black satin.

Is Dad's Name on That List for a Gift?

There couldn't be a better time to bring a neglected father into the place he deserves in the family than right now, with Christmas in the offing; right now, when under the spell of the season we feel more strongly than usual the strength of our close ties and an upsurge of affection—affection which is always there but which gets covered over by the practical, or by the petty annoyances and irritations that the daily business of living sometimes brings with it.

And Christmas is not only a good time for this from, shall we say, a spiritual standpoint, but it's a good time from a practical standpoint. It offers an opportunity to bring father into the foreground in a very tangible way; namely, that of seeing that he's not left out of the gift giving.

Even in families where father is a big factor he sometimes gets overlooked, or almost. In the first place, we're all apt to feel that it's hard to think of what to give a man, particularly father. Fathers don't seem, to the children or to their mother, to have as many wants as other human beings.

In the second place, if you ask father what he wants he's almost sure to say, "O, I don't want anything. Don't spend your money on me." The result is, too often, that when Christmas day comes and the gay pile of gifts gets distributed, father comes out of the generous fray with only two or three small, uninteresting packages. And, let's whisper it among ourselves because he wouldn't admit it, he feels a little hurt, a little disappointed, a little let down.

So, lots of fathers could stand being played up this Christmas; fathers in general, but especially fathers who have been rather thrust into the background.

Mother and the children can put their heads together. There's still almost a week. They can think of things father would like to have, small comforts, little indulgences, wishes he has expressed. You'll be surprised to find that there are many things they can make for him.

If it's something the children have made themselves, he'll appreciate it. If it's something they spent their own money for, it will mean a lot to him. But the important thing is that he shall feel that he's been thought about lovingly and carefully, not just casually, as a gesture.

Not only for father's sake is it right that he should loom large on the Christmas scene. It's right and wholesome for the children, perhaps especially for the 'teen age boys and girls. Their wants increase in number and cost, which is quite natural. A certain preoccupation with their own concerns accompanies this "stepping out" age, but it's not good for them to be allowed to think of "daddy" chiefly as the provider of both luxuries and necessities. It's up to their mother to lead them to think of their father as one they love. They can even go without one of the many things they long for so daddy can have something he in his turn may have longed for.

This doesn't have to be worked out with a large moral gesture as a duty. Children are at bottom generous and warmly responsive when approached in the right way and often the whole thing can be managed so indirectly that they will think the idea all their own.

Through the Looking Glass

By Eleanor Nangle

Here's a gift suggestion that might answer your last minute needs: One of the new dresser sets in finely grained, highly polished wood. They're useful and decorative.

Here is a list of last minute lovelies in the way of gifts. Some are high priced, some startlingly inexpensive, but they're our idea of really beautiful thoughts. Knowing women, we know these are winners.

If you're planning to "take it big," as the youngsters say, and to present your dream princess with something costly, we suggest a fitted case. Now the shopping woods are full of these and you have a wide choice. If you know what cosmetics she prefers above all others, by all means choose those. If you don't know, try to find out.

1. One of our favorites of all the fitted cases is a truly distinguished piece of luggage finely tailored, of black alligator grained calf, fitted with excellent preparations. Jars are of shell pink composition [which is light as a feather]. We adore this bag for several reasons, not the least of which is the second section which is a really roomy space for robe, gown, and slippers. There's sense to it. Cosmetics are almost too numerous to mention. There's just everything in the case. It's a traveling dressing room, but it isn't too large or too heavy. The price is $75.

2. This is a lovely "little thing" for the difficult woman who has everything, including a taste for beautiful accoutrements. It's a pomander ball, a dear, sweet little spice ball, suspended on a ribbon, to hang in her closets or in her sitting room. The pungent fragrance is grand and each ball is accompanied by a vial of scent with which to replenish it occasionally. Prices: $1.75 and $2.50.

3. The "Three Guardsmen" set is the name by which you can find a stunning trio consisting of a compact, lipstick and a handsome little bottle of fine perfume of Russian flavor. The compact is white, its only decoration a Russian cross in blue. The same kind of cross is on the tip of the lipstick case. The perfume can be one of three. You'll love the little round bottles, topped with a crystal eagle. The whole set will cost $9.

4. Also Russian is a remarkable essence, not a cologne, not a perfume, but almost a blend of both, that fashionable women adore. It's rich and luxurious in character, for chic women only. A bottle of this, plus a sachet pillow in the same fragrance, is specially boxed for Christmas at $2.

5. Have you seen the comb, mirror and brush sets with backs of fine wood? They're modern in design and exquisitely grained. We particularly like the round set. The mirrors are good and the brushes not merely decorative. These are among the few dresser sets to be found which are as useful as they're good looking. Prices range from $7.50 to $15.

Please, please don't send checks to us. We can't buy these for you. If you wish to know where they may be obtained, please write or telephone. Happy shopping!

'Well, I Wish--' Say Notables to Old Santa

No matter how much money they have in the bank, or fame in the bag, celebrities have just as definite ideas about what they want for Christmas as little Joey, aged 3, or subdeb Susan, aged 14.

Mignon Eberhart.

Perhaps you labor under the delusion that they are the sort of lucky mortals who already "have everything." Well, they don't think so. Just listen to this!

Mignon G. Eberhart, author of best selling mystery stories, says: "First, I want books. I always want books—new books, old books, books I don't know, books I've always known. Then I want flowers—flowers blooming and bulbs for lovely, slow, later bloom.

"I want a big present and a little present, the big one really big in size, and unexpected—a greenhouse would do nicely. And for the little present I would very much like a small piece of jewelry for the toe of my Christmas stocking."

Jessica Dragonette, radio soprano, frankly says she would like to have "a beautiful silver coffee service. It must be old English Sheffield. Do you suppose you could influence Santa?"

Florence Reed, Theater Guild star, demands for her Christmas wish "another comedy as good as 'Yes, My Darling Daughter.'"

From the orchestra leader Paul Whiteman comes this Christmas wish: "The present I hope Santa will bring me is a stable for my horses."

Florence D. Walrath, founder and managering director of the Cradle, Evanston, voiced her wish some time ago and it is already on the road to realization. "The Christmas present I'd like best," she said, "is a perfect building for our babies. We already have the plans and it's my Christmas wish that some one will make them possible."

Edith Mason, opera and concert singer, would enjoy receiving "a small new 1938 model of an American automobile that I could learn to drive myself. I have owned several Italian cars in the past—and, while they are fine, to me there are no cars like the American makes."

A few pieces of antique furniture would please Vivian Fridell, radio actress, and a new dining room set would warm the cockles of Bess Flynn's [Mother Moynihan's] heart.

Kay Campbell, also in radio, says: "My Christmas yerning is for new traveling bags—the smart new luggage."

A member of the Chicago City Opera company, the mezzo-soprano Eleanor La Mance, wants "only one thing, a square cut emerald," from St. Nick.

"The top of my gift list is a white bearskin rug," says Alice Hill, whose voice you hear in "Painted Dreams" and "We Are Four."

So, there you are, Mr. S. Claus. Who says nobody ever helps you in your work?

Hospital Call Should Divert, Not Exhaust!

Who speaks first after a man has been introduced to a woman? The answer to this question is found in "The Etiquet of Introductions," by Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

The hospital call, while it is not an everyday responsibility, still it is one each of us is called upon to perform at some time or other. Sometimes it may be inconvenient, or the idea may be unpleasant and distasteful to some supersensitive souls, but it is a duty that should not be shirked for selfish reasons.

People who find themselves confined to the small, plain, uninteresting rooms of a hospital are there because they are ill. Friends should appreciate the fact that the lonesome, unending days and nights can be made much more cheerful if they are brightened with cards, letters, little presents or personal calls. In the matter of making calls, however, exercise your good taste and discretion.

Time may be long for the sick one, and a call may have a delightfully cheering influence, but it can be so easily overdone. Hospital calls, when they are permitted at all, should be made during visiting hours. Remember, too, that the purpose of the call is to cheer and not to exhaust. Calls should be short. Conversation always should be kept on a cheerful plane. Just because you inquire after the health of the patient is no reason why the morbid details should be discussed. Drop the subject after the first inquiry and refrain from talking about another friend who had the same symptoms and died a horrible, lingering death. Rather try to get the patient's mind off of her own painful situation.

Sending a little present is another way of showing thoughtfulness. Flowers come to one's mind immediately, but a more original idea than sending large bouquets or potted plants is to select a few little posies and have them arranged in a corsage. It does something to one's spirit to have a cluster of violets, purple pansies, daisies or gardenias pinned on the bed jacket.

For the patient who is convalescing and is not on a limited, restricted diet it is permissible to send delicacies to tempt the appetite, dainties, such as hard candies, choice fruits, not too rich cookies, grape juice, etc.

There are books and magazines for persons of all ages and all tastes. Lovely monogrammed handkerchiefs are a happy suggestion, or some piece of wearing apparel such as a bed jacket, pajamas, dressing gown or nightgown.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

Every social service agency in the city, public and private, is fighting desperately to provide comfortable living quarters and warm clothing for dependent persons. Evictions have been numerous, truancy in schools is high, and hundreds of men, women, and children are shivering with cold.

Equally miserable are numerous families struggling to exist without outside aid. Men and women working for meager salaries, fathers of growing children who are employed only two or three days a week, find it impossible to provide adequately for the needs of their families.

Much misery is to be seen in the medical clinics throughout the city, and workers are asking assistance in obtaining proper clothing for patients who must come regularly for treatment. The battle for health cannot be won if patients are subjected to intense cold without adequate apparel.

"I have a 2 year old child who recently recovered from pneumonia. Due to the fact that I have only one hot blast burner, my flat is not adequately heated and I am afraid she will be ill again, as she is highly susceptible to cold. All of the children need clothing, and this girl is badly in need of a warm snowsuit or coat. My son, who wears size 12, now is in bed with a severe cold. The girls wear sizes 12, 6, and 3, respectively. If any of your readers can help me with their youngsters' discarded clothing, I will be eternally grateful."

A caseworker from a near north side district writes of the X. family. "Mr. X. is a widower with seven children ranging from 3 to 14 years. He is employed, but his wages are too low to cover the family's needs. Two of the boys, aged 10 and 12, are sleeping on the floor, which is cold and drafty, because their father is unable to obtain a bed. These youngsters and their younger brother all are without warm coats. If any reader is discarding a double bed or boys' overcoats, sizes 9, 10, and 12 years, we would be glad to get them for this family."

The worker will be happy to call for any gifts offered.

Mrs. D. writes from the extreme northwest side.

"Dear Miss Brown: May I come to you for help as hundreds of other Tribune readers have done? Here is my problem.

"My husband has been very ill with heart trouble since last July. He is recovering slowly and the doctor told him that if he had a little radio it would help pass the days. The hours are dreadfully long to him, for he is absolutely unable to exert himself in any way. If any reader has a radio we could have, it certainly would be appreciated.

"May I also ask for a small parlor stove? We are very cold in our little flat, and the floors are damp and drafty. My husband takes cold easily as he is in a rundown condition. Our small son is subject to mastoid trouble and has had ear trouble for the last few weeks, after taking cold. We have absolutely no means of procuring these things. A kind neighbor, who has a car, has offered to call for these articles in the event that you can locate them for us."

Mrs. B., living on the northwest side, weighs 95 pounds. She has been trying to care for her 2 year old child who recently broke her hip. The youngster will be unable to walk for some time, and a stroller would make the mother's task of caring for her, and moving her from place to place, a great deal easier.

She also is in great need of shoes for girls, sizes 1 and 2½, and a pair of men's shoes, size 8. The daughter who attends high school is wearing a threadbare spring coat, and needs a warmer one, size 17, and a 6 year old boy has no coat. There are seven children in all, and the father earns a meager salary.

A caseworker calls for assistance in providing furniture and stoves for her clients.

"We could write you long case histories of the families for whom we make this appeal but, as you know, they all are widows, and their only source of income is a small pension. Though they do the best they can, the income is not sufficient for the purchase of such articles. We are particularly interested in obtaining carpets, studio couches, chairs, and living room furniture of any kind."

These cases come from all parts of the city, and we will be glad to supply details to readers interested in offering the requested articles.

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Spray of Wild Roses Is Design of Dainty Quilt

SPRAY OF WILD ROSES.

By Nancy Cabot.

This reproduction in a quilt design of the fragile wild rose which grows so profusely throughout the countryside is one of the most popular of the rose applique patterns. The dainty pink of the rose has been successfully captured by the dye and material manufacturers. The applique block is not among the old timers in the quilt world, but it is so attractive as to be irresistible. The blocks are large, measuring 16 inches square, and there are 20 required for a coverlet. They are set together with four inch bands between the blocks and surrounded by a six inch border. The overall dimensions are 88 by 108 inches.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

Clotilde Children's Fashions

This party dress has a French bodice, tightly fitted. It is topped with a rippling collar and puffed sleeves. The skirt is shirred into the waistline and is flatteringly full. If your tot is really tiny you might abandon the idea of a collar and use, instead, organdy ruffling, detachable for laundering, around the neckline and the little sleeves.

All types of silks and dainty cottons make up well, and prints and plaids are equally as smart as plain shades.

There are trim panties accompanying this frock, too, and the pattern provides for them without extra cost.

Of course Dolly must, in the current tradition, go "dressed up" to parties, too. Pattern No. E-11188, which costs 10 cents extra, provides for a frock designed along the same lines as that for the little girl.

Style No. 2830 is designed for sizes 2, 4, and 6 years. Size 4 requires 2 yards of 39 inch material with ⅛ yard of 35 inch contrasting for both dress and panties.

First Course Important in Holiday Meal

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Strangely enough, the middle and the end of a meal usually are planned before a thought is given to the beginning. For everyday eating, a first course isn't necessary, but for a Christmas feast it is essential, and after the questions of whether to have turkey or goose, ice cream or mince pie, have been decided, the appetizer course should have consideration.

Many of the Christmas first courses suggested here may be served in the living room while the last minute details of the dinner are being attended to in kitchen and dining room. Living room appetizers are pleasant for guests, and often a lifesaver for hostess and cook.

SPICED CRANBERRY COCKTAIL.

4 cups cranberries
4 cups water
1½ cups sugar
½ inch cinnamon stick
4 whole cloves
2-3 cup lemon juice

Cook cranberries with water and sugar until all have popped open. Strain and return cranberry juice to saucepan. Add cinnamon and cloves and let simmer for 5 minutes. Remove spices, add lemon juice, and chill.

CHRISTMAS COCKTAIL.
[Serves six.]

2 cups cranberries
2 cups water
3 whole cloves
½ cup sugar
1 cup pineapple juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Crushed ice [optional]
Maraschino cherries, sliced

Cook cranberries in water with the cloves, until all berries have burst, about 5 minutes. Strain through wet cheesecloth and add sugar. Stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Cool. Add pineapple and lemon juice, and pour over crushed ice in cocktail glasses. Garnish with sliced maraschino cherries. If you prefer not to use ice, see that the cocktail is very cold. My personal preference is to do without ice in any kind of cocktail, as I think that it interferes with the ease of sipping the drink.

This Christmas punch is suitable either for service as the introduction to the feast, or as a party drink to be served on a holiday afternoon or evening.

CRANBERRY PUNCH.

1½ cups sugar
3 cups boiling water
2 cups cranberry sauce
1-3 cup lemon juice
1 pint orange ice
1 quart carbonated water
½ cup maraschino cherries, chopped fine.

Dissolve sugar in hot water, add sauce, and stir until smooth. Add lemon juice and strain. Chill. When ready to serve, pour over a block of ice in the punch bowl, add orange ice, carbonated water, and cherries.

OYSTER COCKTAIL.

30 oysters, well chilled
6 tablespoons finely minced celery
Lettuce
1 pimiento.

Have the oysters very cold. Place them in groups of five in cocktail glasses, each lined with a small, crisp piece of lettuce and sprinkled with a tablespoonful of celery. Pour cocktail sauce over the oysters and garnish each service with a strip of pimiento.

COCKTAIL SAUCE FOR OYSTERS: To ¼ cup catsup add 3 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon horseradish, 3 drops tabasco sauce, 1 teaspoon minced onion and ½ teaspoon salt. Chill thoroughly before using.

My favorite, easily made shrimp cocktail sauce, also is good with oysters. It is composed of equal parts mayonnaise, chili sauce and catsup.

CHRISTMAS CANAPES.

Cut bread into star shapes with a cutter, and toast on one side. Spread the other side with caviar or highly seasoned cream cheese, and radiate strips of pimiento from center to points of the star. Serve with tomato juice cocktail.

HOLLY WREATH CANAPES.

Cut rings from slices of light or dark bread, using doughnut cutter or two round cookie cutters of different sizes. Spread the rings with a cream cheese spread and cover thickly with finely chopped parsley. Garnish with tiny bits of pimiento or chopped maraschino cherries, to resemble holly berries. Serve with spiced cranberry cocktail.

MINT CRUSH FRUIT CUP.

1 cup diced pineapple
1 cup diced oranges, membrane removed.
1 cup sliced bananas
After dinner mints
Confectioner's sugar

Combine fruit and sprinkle with crushed mints. Chill for an hour and serve in cocktail glasses with a little confectioner's sugar sprinkled over each serving.

CHRISTMAS FRUIT CUP.
[Serves eight.]

1 package strawberry gelatin
1 pint warm water or water and fruit juice
2 cups mixed fresh fruit [avocado balls halved, grapes, diced pear, and banana slices]

Dissolve gelatin in warm water and pour into shallow pan. Chill until firm and cut into cubes. Pile fruit and cubes in sherbet glasses, adding a small amount of fruit juice to each serving [orange juice, for instance].

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

Just about this time of year, we know, every collegiate wardrobe, and business girl's collection, too, for that matter, has definite need of a bright dress to pep things up. The stunning blacks and grays that seemed so right and modish at the beginning of the season seem dull. What we all crave at this season is COLOR, and plenty of it. Temperatures being what they are, woolen seems the logical fabric for that new and gay frock. The dress offered in our pattern today is just the ticket of admission to get you into the spirited mood.

The original is made of soft woolen in the soul-lifting aqua shade. The neckline on my own dress has no collar, only stitching all around, descending down the front seam. Two fake pockets adorn the otherwise plain bodice, and at the waistline are strips of material employed to simulate buckles, dashing and jaunty. The sleeves are puffed in such a way that a broad-shouldered effect is achieved, making the waist infinitesimal by contrast. The back of the frock is paneled, and the front boasts one inverted plait. The entire dress, including the sleeves, clings to the idea of the straight and narrow.

The frock sketched at the right, another version of the same pattern, employs a brief collar, shortens the sleeves, and adds a narrow, tailored belt. It takes beautifully to all the gay shades, too, and may be made in a bright crêpe with which you may begin the spring.

Portents of Christmas

By Eleanor Jewett.

[Copyright: 1937: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Pine and fir and holly wreath;
The sound of Christmas rings sweet and fair,
Carols with laughter underneath.

Pencil and paper and ribbons and string,
These are a part of Christmas, too;
And parcels to carry and send and bring,
With something for Billy and Dad and Sue.

Listening for Santa Claus from afar;
Stockings beside a chimney place—

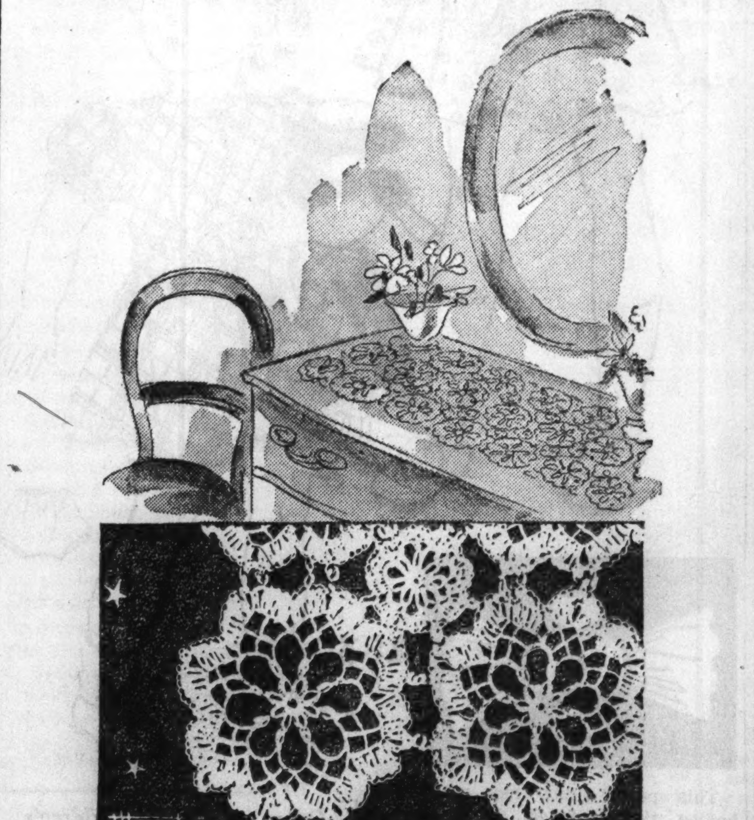
This Crochet Pattern Has Innumerable Possibilities



By Ellen Bruce.

In a national contest judged in the east recently, crochet table doilies, bedspreads, dresser scarfs and tablecloths were the selections which received the majority of the prizes. Originality of design and color arrangement and suitability of the item in question were only a few of the points which were to be considered in awarding prizes.

The crochet pattern illustrated today is suitable for any one of these items, which add to the attractiveness of the home. As a dresser scarf, tablecloth, doily or curtain, the pattern is exceedingly effective when a fine yarn is used. For a bedspread a stronger and more durable material is used. This pattern is not difficult to follow and after the first few wheels are crocheted the work progresses quickly and easily.

Only those who have been fortunate to receive these hand crocheted items for a gift can appreciate how much it means to receive something of this type. For the person who would like to give something different and is handy with a crochet hook there is nothing nicer.

If you wish instructions for crocheting the pattern for the dresser scarf or bedspread illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

Miss Skinner the One Ray on Broadway

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—It was Dorothy Parker who was credited with saying of a certain actress that "she ran a gamut of the emotions—from A to B." We have just been through a theater week as limited as that. A gamut of the emotional drama ranging, with one exception, from bad to worse. The exception, curiously, is Cornelia Otis Skinner's one woman repertory company playing "Edna His Wife" at the Little theater.

The other exhibits have ranged from a labor opera-drama favoring trade unionism, called "The Cradle Will Rock," through a revival of Sean O'Casey's "Juno and the Paycock" to a stage version of the siege of Alcazar in the Spanish civil war, called "Siege" for short. I am purposely overlooking a farce entitled "Something for Nothing," which has promptly discovered to be subject to reversal in title, being most definitly nothing for something.

Miss Skinner's experiment with a full length two hour drama, playing all eight characters herself, may properly be cataloged with the minor triumphs of the season. A major triumph in so far as the actress herself is concerned. Minor only when compared with other standard forms of entertainment.

In "Edna His Wife" Miss Skinner goes a step further than protean artists have gone heretofore. Taking her text from Margaret Ayer Barnes' novel, she not only has composed a completely unified drama, revealing the life story of Edna Losser from her marriage to her acceptance of defeat thirty years later, but she has backed the recital with skeletonized scenic settings and costumed each scene to fit its period. Sitting through "Edna His Wife" you have the feeling of having seen a complete three act play and are a little startled to discover also that it has been a very satisfying evening.

You meet Edna first at a brakeman's picnic, where she meets Paul Jones, orphan and ambitious lawyer, and decides to forget Al Reimer, brakeman. Thereafter you follow Edna through her life in Chicago with Paul, discover her pathetic attempts to keep up with the social climber that is tied to his business success.

You meet her friends and confidants, her mother and sister, her flapper gin and jaz age daughter. And finally you meet Paul's mistress and say good-by to the ageing and defeated Edna. She is having a facial to remove the traces of the tears and anger she has expended on Paul after discovering his duplicities.

Miss Skinner cleverly differentiates these eight women. She has not before been so perfectly the artist in everything she does. The response of her considerable following has been enthusiastic.

"The Cradle Will Rock" is a labor opera with a history. It was rehersed for two months last spring under the direction of John Houseman and Orson Welles while these young men were still importantly concerned with the WPA Federal theater.

During its rehersals a would-be liberal government centering in the relief projects supervised by Harry Hopkins in Washington, tried to make up its mind as to whether or not "The Cradle Will Rock" was satire or dynamite. The story revolves about a strike in Steeltown and there is no attempt at all to conceal the sympathy of actors, composer, and director with the organized laboring man.

On the eve of production word came from Washington that "The Cradle Will Rock" should not be produced. For hours attempts were made to obtain a modification of this ruling. The performance was not actually called off until the night before the opening, when a dress rehersal was being held. The theater was filled with a preview audience and a second crowd milled around in the street outside.

A meeting was called. One man present was the lessee of a theater in 57th street that was not being used. He invited the actors to go there and continue their rehersal. Word came from the Actors' Equity association that Equity actors could not take part. However, it was voted to move over to the available theater.

Arrived there the cast sat in the front rows of the orchestra. The composer, Marc Blitzstein, sat at an upright piano that had been moved out on the stage. He played the score and read the cues. As each actor was called upon he arose and sang his song, or spoke his piece and sat down again. This, then, was neither a performance nor a rehersal.

After this first performance a fund of $2,200 was subscribed. This was enough to pay for other similar showings for two weeks. Meantime Houseman and Welles had quit WPA and taken a lease on the Comedy theater, which they renamed the Mercury. Their first production was a bare stage, modern costume showing of "Julius Cæsar," with Cæsar representing a dictator surrounded by mobs of angry Fascists. With this venture nicely and profitably started, the lessees offered their theater for Sunday night showings of "The Cradle Will Rock." Mr. Blitzstein at the piano is still orchestra and director. The cast is seated on the stage. Everybody wears his street clothes. Cues are called and the action followed, as before.

"Scene 1. A Street Corner!" announces the composer. Up steps a young woman impersonating a street walker. She leans over the end of the piano and sings a lament concerned with her unhappy adventures when she couldn't get a job and felt she had to live. A plain clothes policeman, unable to make a bargain with her, arrests the girl.

"Scene II. A Night Court!" drones Mr. Bitzstein. And then, doubling as court clerk, he adds: "First case. Name? Do you swear," etc.

Thus the story of the strike is told. You learn how Mister Mister, owner of the steel mill, has refused to let the men organize; or how he has organized a liberty committee of subsidized citizens; of how everything is dictated and controled by Mister Mister.

In the end rebellion is afoot. The workmen have risen in protest and banded together. There is a rousing finale with the whole company singing a marching song, the refrain a spirited warning to all the Mister Misters in the world that when the bough breaks the cradle will fall and down will come the whole bally mess.

The drama called "Siege" was written by the Irwin Shaw who last season produced "Bury the Dead" and caused considerable excitement. It was produced by Norman Bel Geddes, who judges all plays by the opportunity they offer him to construct unusual scenery.

"Siege" is practically the story of the siege of Alcazar that ran on for so many months when a valiant band of rebels was holding out in an ancient Spanish fortress. Mr. Shaw has turned the rebels into loyalists and put them in the west tower of a fortress on a high hill near Madrid.

Mr. Bel Geddes has built a wonderful tower showing a parapet stacked with sandbags from which the beleaguered forces carry on the fight. As they start into the caverns beneath the parapet the tower swings on a turntable and there they are, coming down through a heavy door into their living quarters.

The setting is striking for a few scenes and then it becomes as monotonous as the dialog, which is dull, and the characters colorless and hard to take. A touch of rough romance reveals a bullfighter soldier who takes the wife of an intellectual pacifist out from under the pacifist's nose. In the end the bull fighter, having lost a leg, becomes a whimpering coward and the pacifist, grown calloused, shoots the bullfighter and leads a charge.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

That collectors do not appreciate material which is common and easily obtained is almost an axiom of the hobby, and it is particularly true of covers used before stamps were invented. These were destroyed in great quantities not so many years ago, while now they are eagerly sought by serious collectors who wish to trace the history of postal rates and of postal markings.

Covers without stamps may be divided into two or three classes, the first of which includes the folded letters and envelopes used before stamps appeared in 1847. These are generally known as the "pre-stamp" covers.

From 1847 until 1856 stamps were available, but their use was not obligatory, and covers of the period are sometimes classified as "stampless" to distinguish them from those of the earlier group. The practice of sending letters unpaid continued to some extent until about November, 1860, when it was announced that all unpaid letters would be sent direct to the dead letter office.

The third grouping of covers without stamps is based upon the fact that under certain conditions the letters of soldiers and others are carried without stamps, the postage either being collected on delivery or in some cases conceded entirely. Since a great proportion of the pre-stamp and stampless covers were postmarked with the same hand stamps used after postage stamps appeared, there is a very definite tieup with regular stamped covers, and it has been possible for students to obtain clear copies of many postmarks which were scarcely legible when applied over a dark stamp.

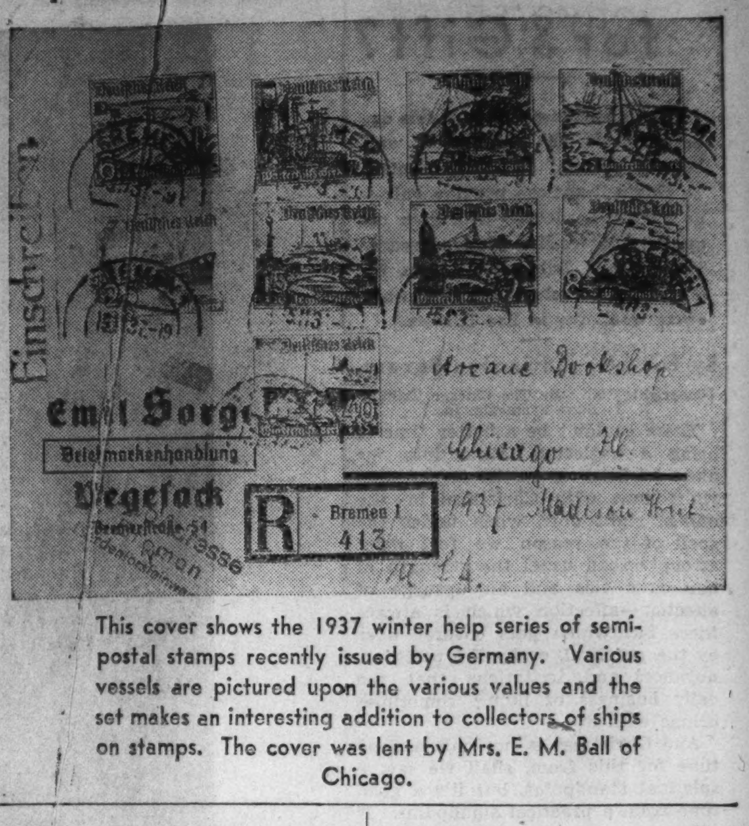
The very early domestic postal rates are not important to the beginner, as such covers are very scarce. In 1799 the rates on letters were fixed as follows: For a single sheet of paper conveyed not more than 40 miles, 8 cents; between 40 and 90 miles, 10 cents; between 90 and 150 miles, 12½ cents, between 150 and 300 miles, 17 cents; up to 500 miles, 20 cents, and more than 500 miles, 25 cents.

Double and triple letters, etc., that is, letters containing two or three sheets of paper or an enclosure such as a bank note, were charged at double or triple the rates quoted, and packets of greater bulk were charged at quadruple those rates for each ounce. On account of the war of 1812 all of these rates were increased by 50 per cent from Feb. 1, 1815, until March 31, 1916.

Effective May 1, 1816, the domestic letter rates were modified as follows: A single sheet up to 30 miles, 6 cents; between 30 and 80 miles, 10 cents; between 80 and 150 miles, 12½ cents; between 150 and 400 miles, 18¾ cents, and more than 400 miles, 25 cents, with double, triple, and larger packets rated as in 1799. These rates were in effect until July 1, 1845, when they were simplified and lowered so that a single letter carried less than 300 miles cost 5 cents; over that distance, 10 cents, and all letters under ½ ounce in weight were rated as single letters. In 1847 5 and 10 cent stamps were provided to facilitate the payment of this postage.

A radical change in rates took effect on July 1, 1851, and provided that single letters up to ½ ounce in weight would be carried up to 3,000 miles, for 4 cents if prepaid, or for 5 cents if sent collect, and more than 3,000 miles for double these rates.

On July 1, 1855, a new law became effective which increased the rate to 10 cents on letters carried more than 3,000 miles and required the prepayment of all postage. This law also authorized the postmaster general to require domestic postage to be prepaid by stamps after Jan. 1, 1856, and ended the use of stampless covers except as before noted.



This cover shows the 1937 winter help series of semi-postal stamps recently issued by Germany. Various vessels are pictured upon the various values and the set makes an interesting addition to collectors of ships on stamps. The cover was lent by Mrs. E. M. Ball of Chicago.

Club Notes.

The Crescent City Stamp club of New Orleans, La., is preparing to move into permanent quarters on the third floor at 333 Carondelet street in the heart of the business district. These clubrooms will be open every day and evening and will be a gathering place for the collectors of New Orleans as well as for visitors, who are invited to make use of the club for their engagements with other collectors.

Cachets and Covers.

Some time ago it was announced that Emil A. Thurman, 1338 St. Bernard avenue, New Orleans, would cachet covers for the first air mail flight from New Orleans to Bloomington, Ill. Since this flight has been postponed indefinitly, collectors who have sent covers to Mr. Thurman and wish them returned should send a self-addressed stamped envelope, otherwise the covers will be held for the next air mail event originating in New Orleans.

Stamp Notes.

First day sales of the Porto Rico stamp on Nov. 5 disposed of 483,577 stamps with a face value of $14,507.31, and a total of 244,054 first day covers were serviced at the postoffice of San Juan, in that territory, according to a notice from the postoffice department. On the following day 579,826 stamps were sold at the philatelic agency in Washington. These stamps, which show a view of La Fortaleza, seat of territorial government, were designed by William A. Roche for the vignette and William Schragge for the border. The steel dies were engraved by John Eissler for the picture and George E. Huber for the lettering. The stamps were printed in sheets of 200 on rotary presses from plates numbered 21721, 21722, 21723, and 21724, and were delivered to postoffices in panes of fifty, five rows wide by ten high.

The new winter help charity stamps of Germany, as illustrated on cover in an adjoining column, show the following ships or types of vessels: 3 plus 2rpf, life saving boat; 4 plus 3rpf, the lightship Elbe; 5 plus 3rpf, fishing smacks; 6 plus 4rpf, cruise vessel Madeira; 8 plus 4rpf, three-masted windjammer; 12 plus 6rpf, S. S. Tannenberg passing a buoy light; 15 plus 10rpf, dredging vessel; 25 plus 15rpf, S. S. Hamburg, and 40 plus 35rpf, S. S. Bremen or Europa.

Banks are about the only places that use such stamps and they usually damage them with perforated initials. Through a very fortunate purchase by our agent in Liberia we were able to obtain a supply of the very scarce beautiful bicolored $1.00, $2.00, and $5.00 stamps of the very expensive 1906 issue in perfect condition without any perforated initials. We can GUARANTEE these stamps to be the last to come on the market for general distribution as no more exist in any part of the world. WE OFFER the three values $1.00, $2.00, and $5.00, all for ONLY 10C to approval applicants. These stamps have a total catalog value of 90c, so you had better rush your dime as we expect to have an enormous amount of requests for them.

Friendship Is Main Goal of Conversation

By Doris Blake.

When a group of you have been chatting and then everybody leaves except you and one other person, have you ever noticed how completely the atmosphere changes and how the tone of any conversation which follows is altered?

Milton Wright reminds us of a situation in which we all have been caught at least once in a lifetime in his invaluable donation to society, "The Art of Conversation" [Whittlesey House].

No matter how small the group has been [there may have been only three of you] something happens that changes the relationship.

In the group, Mr. Wright interprets it, a speaker is indulging in showmanship, but in talking with only one person, the relationship becomes intimate and personal.

The technique of conversing with a single person, Wright thinks, is easier and simpler, but, because it is easier and simpler, it provides greater latitude for making mistakes.

"When two persons, and only two, get together, there is a human desire for them to understand each other. Subconsciously, each of them speaks and acts in such a way as will accomplish two things:

"Reveal himself to the other person.

"Find out what the other person likes."

For this reason conversation with one other person becomes more personal than conversation with several, Wright declares.

The aim of talking with another person is to make friends with him. If our conversation does that, no matter how lacking in wit, information, or ideas it may be, it succeeds, Wright says. If it does not make friends it fails.

So, the problem confronting you under the circumstances is: What can you say that will make the other person like you, or will increase the liking he already feels for you?

Your attitude is vital to success. Without the right attitude you are sure to make blunders according to our authority. And the helpful attitude described by him requires that:

"You must be really interested in the other person.

"You must be interested in the things that he is interested in.

"You must be friendly to him.

"You must be sincere.

"You must be candid."

William Hazlitt said: "Desire to please, and you will infallibly please."

In carrying through with your attitude of friendliness you should try to remember what kind of person the other likes. People's likes and dislikes, as Wright says, vary widely. Some people don't like the Irish or the French or the Germans; some have no use for women; some scorn people who lack education; some despise people who are failures; some have an antipathy toward the rich, and so on. So, naturally, you would detour the dangerous road of such antipathies.

But you can take a cue from Wright's summary of the kind of people whom almost everybody likes:

People who like them.

People who appreciate them.

People who like the same things they do.

People who are the same kind of people they are.

People who are helpful.

If you can just steer the conversation in such a way that the other person sees you as one or more of the persons enumerated above you'll have no trouble conversationally.

Maple Furniture Has a Simple, Informal Note

MAPLE furniture is necessarily simple and informal. The Windsor chair is suitable for use with the average maple dining or card table. An alternative is the ladder back chair. The Hitchcock, painted chair is also often drawn up to a maple table.

Regency Style in Furniture Again to Fore

Does your dinette appear smaller than it really is? How to select furniture, wall coverings, rugs and cabinets in order to give greater utility and a more pleasing appearance is told in the booklet, "Making the Most of the Dinette," by Edith Weigle, Tribune furniture stylist. On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents. Postpaid, 3 cents.

By Edith Weigle.

MANY who are interested in furniture design and interior decoration are familiar with the work of Chippendale, Heppelwhite and Sheraton, but know little about that short but important English period called the Regency. Indeed, for years nothing has been heard about it. But with the return to luxury and quality in decoration it is bobbing up again, and next to the trend toward the baroque is THE prestige style of the season.

Regency is not a period that appeals as widely as other more informal, intimate modes, for it is a stately, dignified, even severe manner of decoration. It was the last noteworthy era before the advent of Victorian fussiness. It lasted from 1810 to 1820 when the prince of Wales, later George IV., was regent, and extended also into his reign, continuing to about 1825 or 1830.

It is actually the British version of French Empire, and Empire was inspired by Greco-Roman forms. So furniture was ornamented with heads of animals, tripods were adapted to chairs and sofas, and all the decorative motifs of ancient Rome were revived.

THE favorite furniture woods were mahogany and rosewood, and there was a great vogue for black painted pieces, as well. Gilt trimming relieved the black and on the mahogany and rosewood, ormolu mounts [brasswork] took the place of carving.

This furniture was used in huge rooms whose ceilings merit the adjective "lofty." Windows were tremendous and were elaborately draped, sometimes with materials of two or three colors. Walls were either painted a plain color, or papered, or were paneled with strips of molding. Favorite colors of the Regency were bright yellow, deep maroon, blue, brown, buff, pink, light green, and apricot.

The most perfect example of an English Regency room in Chicago is the architectural model made by Mrs. James Ward Thorne and shown among a series of beautifully executed miniature rooms at the Art institute.

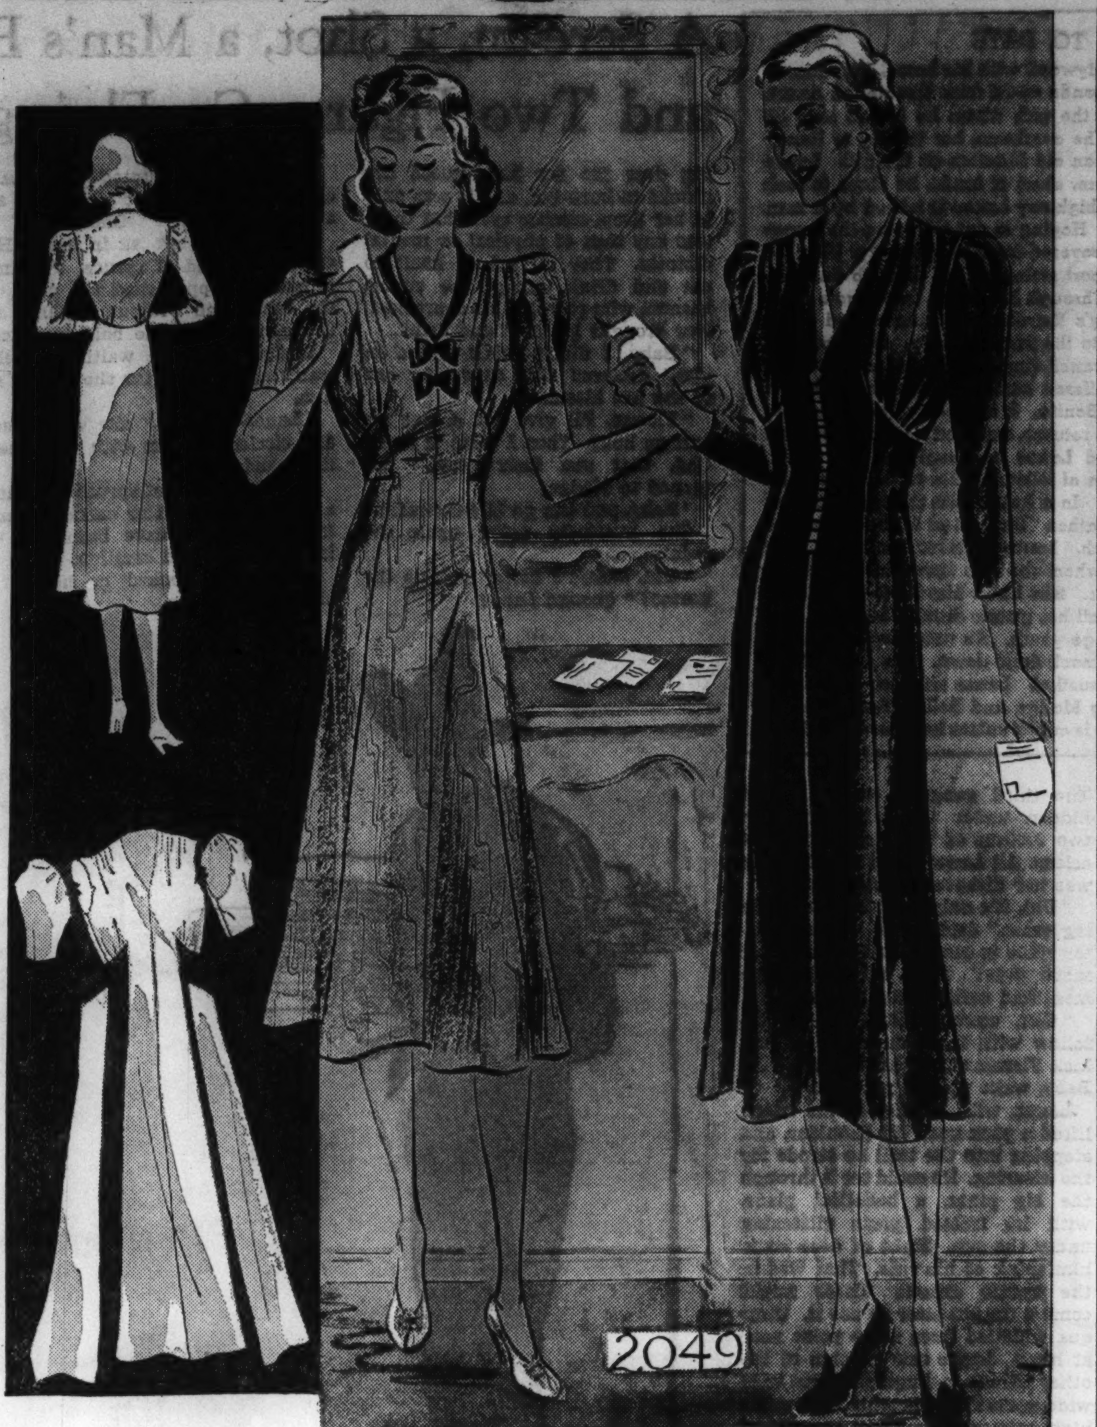
The marble, circular hall is copied from a house built by Sir John Soane, an architect of note of the period. The room seen in the rear is a library with a bookcase in a classic niche, another characteristic of the Regency era, when niches, cupboards and recessed bookcases were used to break up the huge expanse of wall.

The furniture in both rooms was copied by Mrs. Thorne from outstanding pieces of the time, and the rug is a design in harmony.

Mrs. Thorne's exhibition at the Art institute should be a "must" for all students of interior decoration and for any one interested in art and beauty. There is nothing else like it in the world. Besides twenty-nine miniature period rooms there is a cathedral, built on a slightly larger scale.

Patterns by Clotilde

• In November, readers bought 26,593 Tribune patterns



By Clotilde.

If your figure is a "perfect 36" or larger you will appreciate the lines of this dress, which was designed especially for women who wear sizes up to 50. We're extremely proud of this model, because it has none of the effect of deliberate slenderization so apparent in most of the dresses designed for the heavier person. It is, on the contrary, a wonderfully youthful and smart frock. Your slimmest debutante daughter could wish for no smarter lines.

The V neckline may have a vestee or a soft rolled collar, below which there may be a slide fastener, buttons, or a couple of fetching ribbon bows. Paneling is important, creating the slim waistline, the narrow hips, and the wide skirt. There may or may not be a belt, depending upon how you feel about it. If you select one it extends only from the side panels and around the back, to allow the front line to remain unbroken, all in the cause of the slim effect. The sleeves, which may be short, three-quarter or full length, are puffed at the shoulders, and fullness is employed by means of shirring above the panels in the bodice. Tight-fitting garments exaggerate one's size. Softly draped ones with some fullness minimize one's extra weight.

The original of this dress is created from roughly surfaced crêpe in the new and rich grape shade. Any silk or sheer woolen, and velvet, too, will make up beautifully. The color depends upon your choice. Black always is good, but there are other neutral and seasonally smart shades which you can't afford to pass up.

Style No. 2049 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, and 50 inches bust measurement. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 39 inch material, with ½ yard of 27 inch contrasting for trimming.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 20.

Tin cans make good containers for plants. Porous clay pots absorb so much moisture that the soil is likely to become dry, with subsequent harm to the feeding roots. A cactus collector recently stated that tin cans were much better for the soil kept moist much longer, the plants doing better than in any other kind of pot. Examine plants daily and water only when water is needed. Glazed novelty containers in all shapes and sizes may be procured and when planted with interesting plants delightful effects may be obtained.

Tuesday, Dec. 21.

Now is the time to move large trees with frozen balls of soil. A single tree, well placed, will change the entire appearance of a yard, but do not use a large tree in a spot that requires a smaller kind. A tree is planted for permanency which makes it necessary to plan carefully as to place and kind. Usually native hardwoods are best, but in the city one must plant the kind that will do the best. Select a specimen with a good, straight trunk, an ample root system, and superior shape. The pruning of a tree should be done by some one who understands it. Pruning trees during their youth will make it unnecessary to remove large branches when they are older.

Wednesday, Dec. 22.

A fish garden can be arranged at small cost. Miniature walls, bridges, pools, paths, and figures of animals, fish, people, mountains, and what not may be procured to fit practically any plan. And they may be changed at any time. Ordinary builder's cement of plaster of Paris mixed with a little sand, are used to cement the various parts together. Pockets may be arranged to hold a few small plants. The terrarium is similar but the type of material varies. A well kept terrarium requires little attention.

Thursday, Dec. 23.

By giving good care to Christmas pot plants, they may be enjoyed for a long time, but neglect will soon injure them. Give these plants plenty of water and keep them in a cool place. The poinsettia should be kept from sudden drafts or changes in temperature or the leaves will turn yellow and drop. Potted bulbs are among the finest flowering plants and their season of greatest beauty is while they are in flower. Give them water every day. After flowering, gradually withhold water until the leaves begin turning yellow, and store the bulbs for outdoor use.

Friday, Dec. 24.

Mulch the bulb beds now for if this is neglected the bulbs may be heaved out of the ground during next spring's thaw. Mulching with organic manure adds some food to the soil, aiding the bulbs to produce better blooms. An application of commercial plant food to growing plants is essential. Use common sense when caring for plants. A lack of food or too much food is harmful.

Saturday, Dec. 25.

Contract According to Culbertson

Echoes from the Bridge Exams

By Ely Culbertson

(Copyright: 1937: By Ely Culbertson.)

THE first general conclusion that I have been able to draw from the answers to questions in the national bridge examination, recently concluded, is that the average player is far too conservative in his bidding and that he has a tendency to "pass the buck" to his partner whenever a close decision is required. Please note that I am not including all my readers in this indictment! In point of fact, I am decidedly gratified at the large number of perfect responses to every question. Many of the questions were by no means easy to answer. A few of them I purposely made so difficult that I could give rewards for correctness rather than penalize error. In almost every case the correct answers outnumbered the total of varied incorrect answers. It will be interesting and instructive, I think, to review some of the questions, re-analyzing the answers.

Question No. 30: Both sides vulnerable. You are South. North deals and bids one spade. Next hand (East) doubles. Your holding is:

♠ Q 10 8 7 5 ♥ 4 ♦ K J 6 3 2 ♣ 4 2

What call do you make?

Answer: You should jump to four spades. This, of course, is a preëmptive (shut-out) raise. It would be naïve to redouble one spade merely because you "like" your partner's bid. Obviously the opponents never would permit you to play the one spade redoubled, and thus you would only be giving them opportunity to get together and select a suit of their own.

My chart shows that 1,187 readers split their answers to the above question as follows:

648 agreed with me that four spades was the proper bid.

368 submitted a minority report for three spades.

91 voted for a supercautious two spades.

Remarkably enough, no one passed.

The two diamond takeout does not strike me as deserving much comment; it is a completely worthless bid except perhaps as part of a deep-laid plot to pretend fear that the one spade double will be left in. From the tenor of the answers I cannot think that any of my readers had this Machiavellian intention, and therefore this bad reply was ruthlessly demerited two points. It will be noted that there was only one point demerit for a jump to three spades. This was because I recognized that such a bid had preëmptive qualities that were almost as good as the recommended four spades. What the three spade bidders overlooked, however, was that South has a dual duty to perform the moment that one spade is doubled for a takeout. With his 5-5-2-1 distribution and questionable defensive strength he should, of course, attempt to shut the opponents out of the bidding. But if he does this at the expense of a lost game for himself it will be a Pyrrhic victory. It must be remembered that any bid over a takeout double, except a redouble or a single jump in a new suit, is really a weakness, not a strength, showing bid. If South, therefore, jumps merely to three spades, and West passes, North, with just an average one spade opening bid, will and should pass. East then may do likewise. And if the North-South hands happen to fit well—a possibility that cannot be scientifically determined under the circumstances—North-South will have lost a game. It is on this basis that the four spade bid must be reckoned as definitly superior to the jump to only three spades.

As to a redouble instead of a shutout bid, I shall discuss this at the same time I discuss a redouble in the next question.

Question No. 31: Both sides vulnerable. You are South. North deals and bids one spade. Next hand (East) doubles. Your holding is:

♠ 8 ♥ A J 9 4 ♦ K J 8 3 ♣ K 10 7 6

What call do you make?

Answer: You should redouble. You have such strength outside of the spade suit that you need have no fear of playing one spade redoubled. Partner will be able to make sufficient side suit tricks to compensate for trump losers. Your redouble asks partner to let you take charge, and obviously you are prepared to massacre any takeout opponents may make. Any action other than a redouble on your part will let the opponents off the hook which at the moment they most decidedly are on.

The statistics on this question were:

90 jumped to two no trump.

28 ran to two hearts.

35 split their votes indicriminately among one no trump, two diamonds, two clubs, three hearts, and three no trump.

In discussing the redouble on this hand it is vital to bring in the very theory and raison d'être of all low range redoubles. Apparently many readers have an upside-down understanding of this department.

When your partner opens the bidding with, let us say, one heart, and the second hand doubles, a redouble by you does not proclaim, "Partner, I love your heart bid and know that we can make at least seven tricks with hearts as trump." Such a proclamation would have no value, because the opponents haven't the slightest intention of letting you play a contract with which you are so delighted. Thus your redouble, because you like a certain bid but would not like a higher or different bid, is clearly a waste of breath—and, what is more important, a waste of a potentially valuable opportunity. A redouble on the hand discussed above (question No. 30) would be silly.

Now that we have taken up what a redouble does not mean, let us consider how it can be used to advantage, taking the hand in question No. 31 as our example.

South holds a really good hand outside of the spade suit. In fact, the figure "2½ honor tricks" does not quite do justice to his powerful holdings of A-J-9, K-J-8, and K-10 over the takeout doubler's advertised strength. The opening bidder guaranteed 2½ tricks, and the doubler at least that many. These, with South's 2½, add to 7½ minimum, which leaves only about half an honor trick that West can hold. The enemies' strength is further depleted by the fact that some of the honors upon which East depended will be slaughtered by South. Obviously, then, South can see that the opponents have already begun to fall into a bottomless pit from which they will not be able to rescue themselves! South's one consideration, therefore, must be to refrain from rescuing them and, equally important, to warn his partner against a rescue.

Most of the 384 contestants who favored a pass by South pointed out that they were trapping—that East's double would surely be taken out and that they (South) would proceed to slaughter whatever the opponents bid. This was sound reasoning except for one flaw. If South passes and East bids two of a suit, North, with no idea of the true situation, is very apt to rebid his spades if he holds a good six card suit and an outside trick. He must be forewarned against such action, and the only way this can be done is by South's redoubling. This brings us directly to the message that is conveyed by a redouble as used by expert and master players. The message is simply this: "Partner, I have heard your bid and the opponents' takeout double. Please, please let me get at the next bid made by the opponents!"

As to the minority reports submitted in favor of one no trump, two diamonds, etc., I am afraid that these are pretty bad bids that commit the unforgivable sin of rescuing the opponents from a horrible position. I admit that North-South probably have a game in either no trump or a fitting suit. Certainly there is no assurance of a slam, however, and a mere game is not to be considered as against the 800 to 1,400 penalty that appears likely.

A Versatile Knitted Jacket Designed for Night or Day

By Jean Macdonald.

If the winter is to be as long and as cold as indicated by the idiosyncrasies of our animal and bird life, according to some observers, there will be great need for odd jackets.

The hand knitted bed jacket illustrated today serves innumerable purposes aside from the luxurious fun of being snugly warm while munching toast in bed. An invalid can wear this lightweight jacket as a sleeping garment and be certain of a comfortable and undisturbed night's rest. It has full raglan sleeves, and the front, closing with the high round neck, is a protection for any one who sleeps with arms outside the covers.

This same little jacket can be knitted to wear over a one piece hand knit spring number. The garment in this case must be of a contrasting note to the dress and the ribbon omitted. One or three buttons and buttonholes may be used instead. Featherweight wools are suggested for this simple garment if it is to be used as a bed jacket. Crêpe or lightweight tweed mixtures are ideal for the jacket when used as a street garment. Shetland is excellent when it is to be worn as a serviceable sweater coat.

MAJESTY'S RANCHO

By Zane Grey

A Scream, a Shot, a Man's Body Slumping to the Ground, and Two Figures Go Flying Away on Gallant Umpqua

THE STORY TO DATE

● Lance Sidway, about to leave Hollywood with his horse, Umpqua, to look for a cowboy's job, rescues a blonde co-ed from threatened arrest. Next afternoon Lance waits to meet the girl, whom he knows only as Madge, but changes his mind when he overhears her talking to Honey Bee Uhl, a gangster, who is pressing an old flirtation on the girl. Lance rides Umpqua to Douglas, Ariz., where, short of funds, he stops to look for work. At a service station on the highway Lance is hailed by a man in a car whom he recognizes as Uhl. Hoping to get a line on the gangster, Lance agrees to drive an empty covered truck to Tucson for Uhl. He suspects Uhl is using trucks to transport stolen cattle. His job finished, Lance continues on to New Mexico. Through Ren Starr, Lance gets a job from Gene Stewart, owner of Majesty's Rancho. Depression and cattle thieves have brought Gene Stewart to the verge of ruin. Nels, an old-time Texan who runs a store on the ranch, suggests that Gene throw in with Danny Mains, who has also suffered cattle losses. Danny has a Mexican wife and a pretty daughter, Bonita. It is a complete surprise to Lance when Gene's daughter, Madge, returns, expelled from college, and turns out to be the girl who moved Lance so deeply at first sight. Madge insults Lance by accusing him of following her to the ranch and then trying to buy Umpqua from him. In a battle with the truck rustlers Lance kills a man to save Madge's father. Several of Madge's college friends spend the summer at the ranch. Lance believes Madge to be a heartless flirt. Carrying her home when she has sprained her ankle, Lance presses violent kisses upon her. She hates him for it—and loves him. Madge gives a party and gets all her guests drunk. Lance is cool to her, and she leads on Rollo, a college youth. An unwilling witness to their lovemaking, Lance is forced to knock Rollo down. The night of the party Stewart's last herd of cattle is rustled. Lance rides off to retrieve them and comes upon Uhl kidnaping Madge and Rollo. Pretending to befriend Uhl, Lance warns him escape is cut off unless he takes to the hills.

INSTALMENT XIII.

LANCE rode on into an up-and-down cedar country with an occasional pine tree heralding the approach to the heights. The air began to have a cool edge. The moon climbed toward the zenith. Presently the trail led into a narrow canyon. It was long and tortuous, heading at last into a mountain meadow, where traveling was comfortable for a while. A black belt of pines loomed ahead, shining in the moonlight. Lance kept eye and ear keen for his followers. Madge appeared to ride easily, but the others were growing crippled. They shifted from side to side in their saddles, let their legs hang, and grumbled intermittently.

The moon reached a point overhead; the air had a bite in it; coyotes mourned lone cries; the night grew far advanced. Here Uhl at last fell off his saddle and walked behind Madge leading his horse. The other gangsters cursed and raved for a halt.

"Sidway, for cripe's sake, have a heart!" yelped Uhl, finally. "Aren't we far enough? Can't we camp here?"

"No water. No grass. You must go on," replied Lance.

Uhl obeyed groaning. Lance would not let them rest and, divining that Uhl was dependent upon him and knew it, he turned a deaf ear to appeals and curses and threats alike.

Lance led on, riding with his hands in his pockets. On the heights it was cold. Madge would be warm, all except her feet. Stevens appeared to be sagging in his saddle, but Lance could not summon any sympathy for the collegian.

The last miles of that uphill ride were dragging and cruel to the gangsters. Even Stevens, hurt at the outset in some way, endured the ordeal better. When Lance led into the beautiful wooded park, which inclosed Cochise's stronghold, the moon was low and dawn not far away. He halted the cavalcade under some spreading pines.

Lance's hands were so stiff from cold that he could scarcely start a fire. But that once done, he gathered firewood, and soon had a blaze. White and silent now, Madge leaned against a tree. Lance threw his saddle, then flew to the packs. In a few moments he had them off the horses. He carried one to the fire and threw out blankets. Uhl knelt, his shaking hands to the fire. The other men stood over the blaze, guns in hands, still wary and watchful. Their chief might have trusted Lance, but they did not.

"My feet—are ice," she whispered.

"Here," cried Lance, sharply. "They can't be frozen. It's not cold enough. . . . Sit here, on this blanket. Lean against the pack. Put this blanket over you. . . . Never mind, I'll take off your shoes."

Her thin shoes and stockings afforded little protection against this frosty air. Her little feet did feel like blocks of ice.

"Rollie, throw a blanket round you and sit close to her," went on Lance. No one seemed to oppose him, and he caught Madge's great dark eyes upon him.

Then Lance leaped to throw the other pack, and unsaddle the horses. He turned them loose. Madge was asleep, her fair face drooping upon Rollie's shoulder. He, too, had sunk into weary slumber. On the other side of the fire Uhl lay covered with his head on a log, dead asleep. Fox appeared to have crawled under a pack canvas. Flemm sat on his guard, his machine gun at rest, his eyes like gimlets.

"Cowboy, stretch yourself right there," he said. "Me and Fox will have a go at this job."

Lance dragged his saddle close and wrapping in his blanket he lay down to make up a little for the loss of two nights' sleep.

Daylight had come when he was awakened by a sound of wood being dumped upon the fire. Fox had taken Flemm's place on guard. The others were locked in slumber. Lance fell asleep again and when he was awakened the sun was high. Uhl sat huddled near the fire, his pale face showing the havoc of extreme exertion and privation. Behind him the fox featured guard paced to and fro, gun in hand.

"Good morning. Kind of brisk up here on top," he said, cheerfully.

"Brisk? Ha! I damn near froze to death," ejaculated Uhl.

Lance spread his hands to the blaze, and casually looked about. The third gangster evidently was hidden under the tarpaulin. The two victims of the kidnapers were asleep. All Lance could see of Madge was her disheveled golden hair.

"Uhl, it's only a little way to the log cabin," said Lance. "Much better place to camp. Hadn't we better move over? Then I'll cook some meat and make some hot coffee."

Lance, with murder in his heart, lifted a pack upon his shoulder, and stepping into the trail he strode for the clearing. He could see it through the big pines, a beautiful glade, with its frosted grass glistening under the sun. Sight of deer made him think of his rifle. That was in the saddle sheath. There might come a chance later to use it. Umpqua whistled from some point near at hand. Lance saw no sign of the other horses. A huge pine tree with wide spreading branches, and some high gray rocks marked the site of the log cabin. Its open door stared like a black curious eye, wondering what was to happen there. All around, the stately pines stood up and beyond them rugged crags. This spot had once been the stronghold of the Apache chief, Cochise, at which time the trail was known only to the Indians.

Depositing the pack under the pine, Lance hurried back for another load. Half way he met the gangsters. Lance swerved off the trail into the brush. He had a reluctance to meet Madge Stewart face to face. Yet the part he was playing sustained him with a kind of rapture.

Flemm, the meanest looking of the gangsters, manifestly distrusted Lance, and for that matter the situation itself. He sat apart, holding the wicked machine gun across his knee.

Lance spread the tarpaulin on the grass and proceeded to empty the contents of a pack.

"Rollie, you're one of these worthless rich guys, I know," said Lance, not without sarcasm. "But if you'd condescend to help me, we'd have breakfast sooner."

"I'd starve to death before I'd associate with you in any way," declared the collegian.

"Yes, and you'd let Madge starve, too. If you and she were left alone on your own she'd soon get your number."

"Don't address me again, you two-faced scoundrel. You're a dirty bum, Sidway, and your pleas won't get you anywhere with Miss Stewart or me."

"What would you call yourself for night before last?" queried Lance, in bitter scorn.

STEVENS' pale face flamed red, but it was fury more than shame that strangled his speech in his throat.

Suddenly Lance felt Madge close to him, and then heard her light step. He was on his knees on the tarpaulin fumbling among cans and parcels, and he was aware that his hands shook.

"Did any one see the sack I had with me last night? Coffee and butter."

"If it was a snake, it'd bite you," spoke up Madge sweetly. "There, under your nose! Lance, can I offer my services as assistant cook?"

Lance sustained a slight start. "Are you—any good?"

"Pretty good—in that way."

"Can you mix biscuit dough?"

"Swell. Nels taught me."

"Go to it. Here's flour, salt, lard, pan. Fetch some water. I'll heat the Dutch oven."

Uhl showed interest in the proceedings. The other gangsters grinned sardonically. Stevens sat dejectedly with his face in his hands. Lance cut strips of bacon into a skillet, all the while bafflingly aware of the going and returning of the girl, and then her agitating presence close beside him, on her knees.

Madge was in deadly peril, yet seemed oblivious of it. Lance's calculation had been that by midday Stewart would be on his trail. That would fetch him to the mountain clearing late the coming night or at dawn. What might happen before then? No matter what happened, Stewart and his men could be expected to waylay or ambush the gangsters and kill them. And Lance had to escape with Madge before nightfall. These thoughts revolved in his mind as he performed the tasks of cook around the campfire.

Presently breakfast was ready, and it was Madge, not Lance, who called: "Come and get it!" Kneeling over the fire had caused her cheeks to burn red, and it was only in her deep, somber eyes that there was any sign of physical or mental distress. They all sat or knelt to eat and drink, except the cursed Flemm, who patroled his short beat. Fox brought his food and drink.

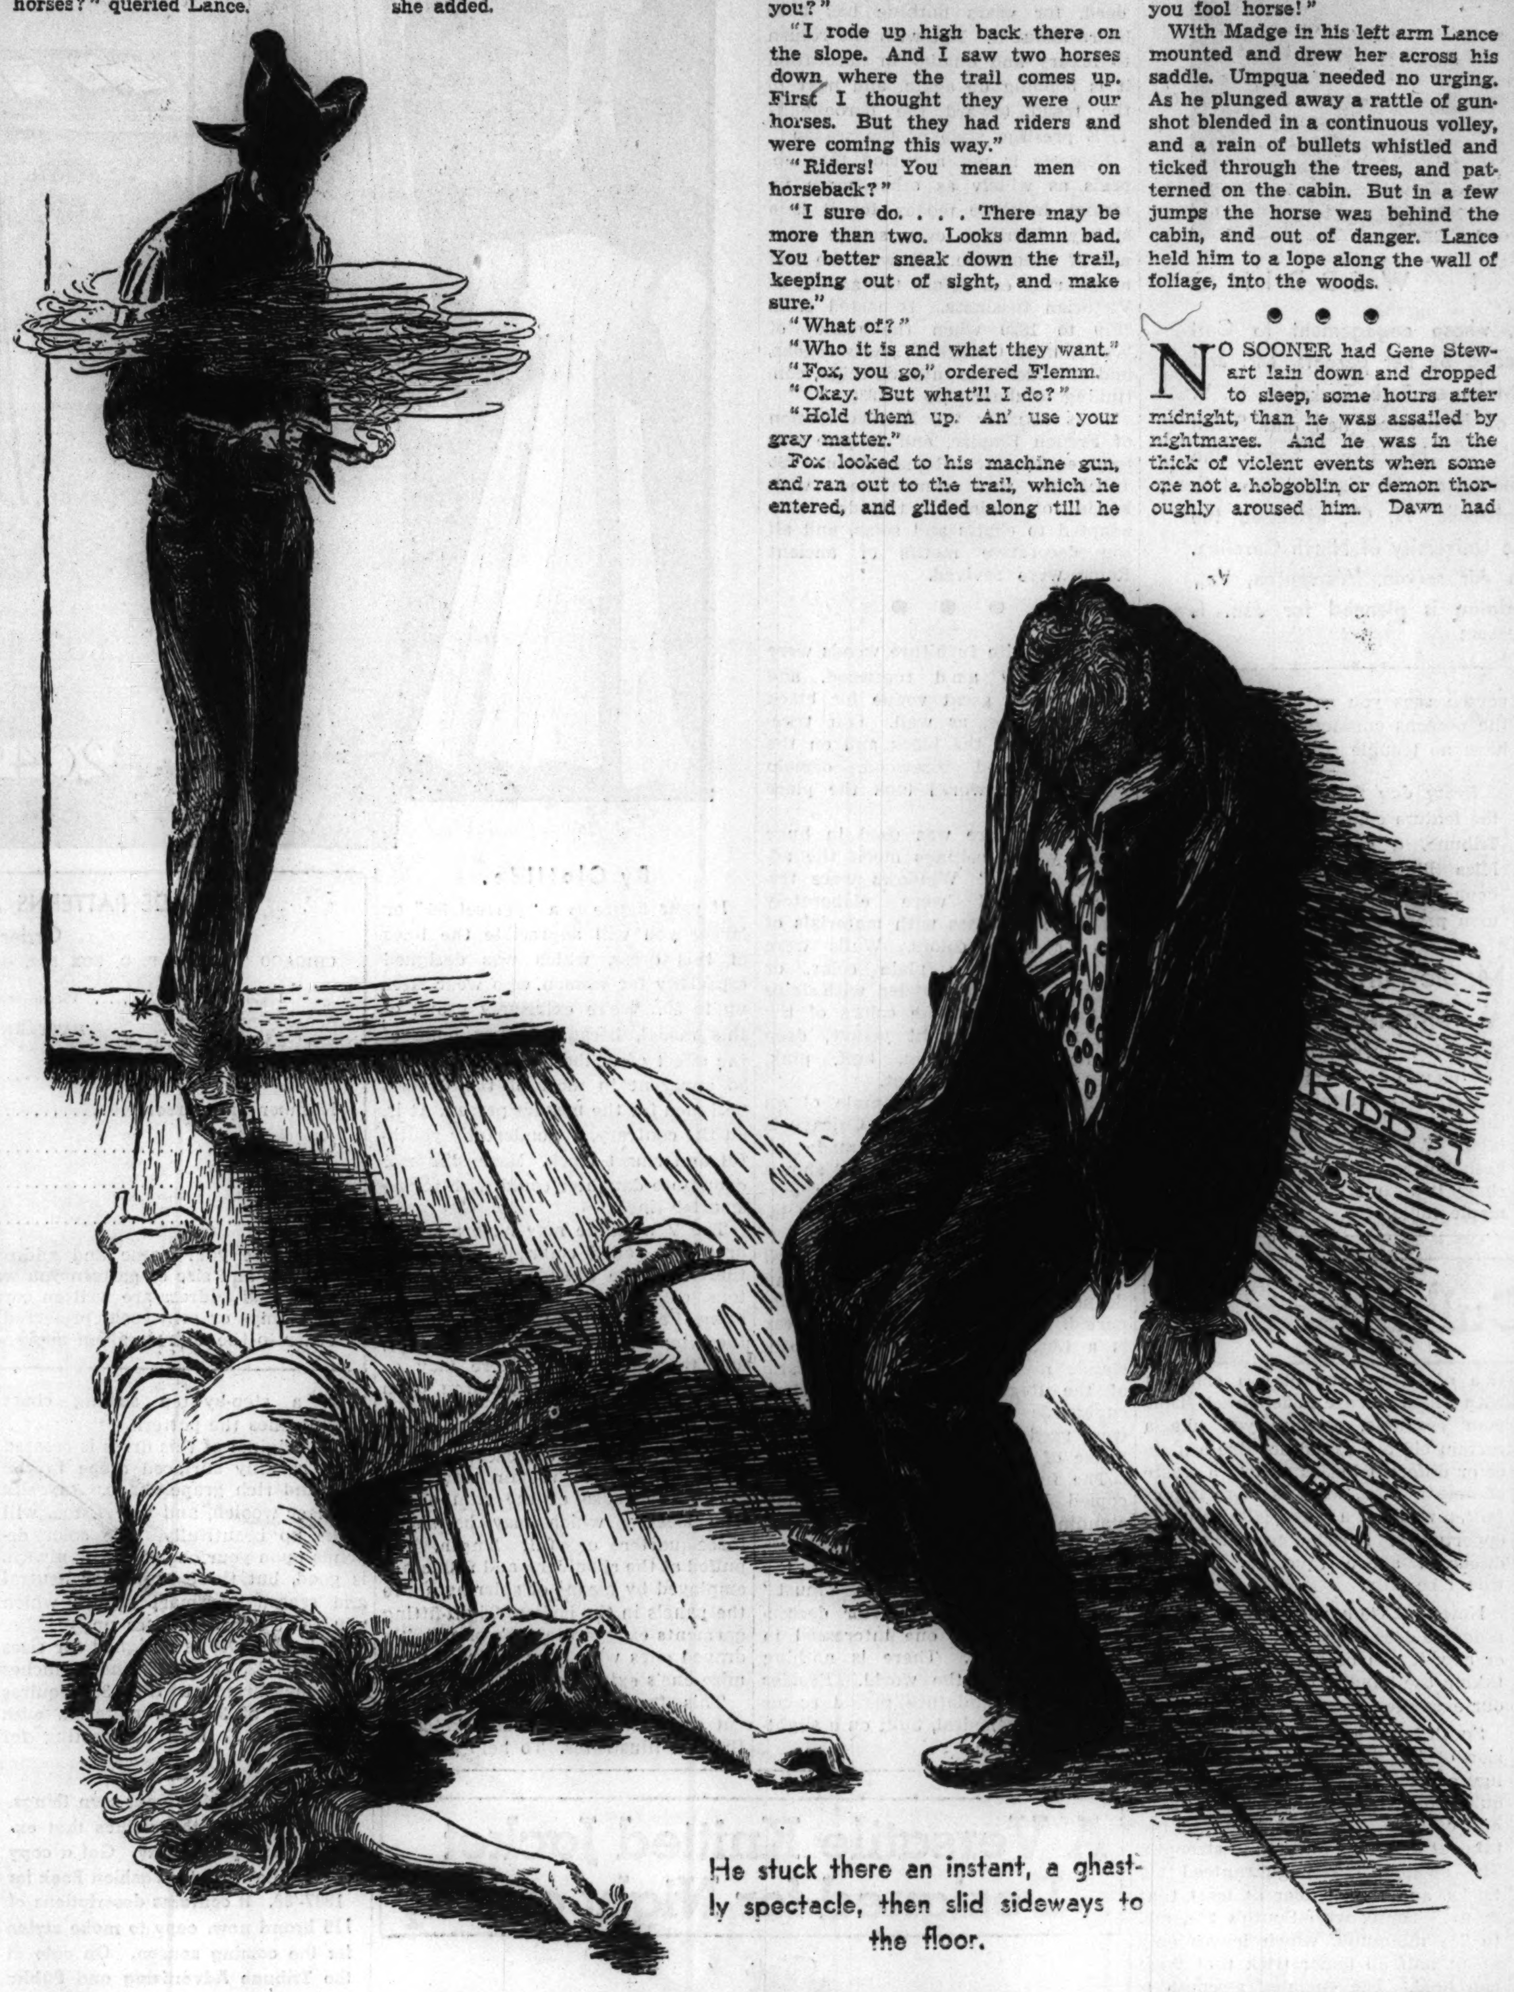
"Baby, I didn't think it was in you," declared Uhl, devouring one of the hot biscuits.

"Flemm, I'll give you a rest for half an hour. Then I want to sleep. God, that sun feels good!" He turned to Madge.

"Baby, you can go into the cabin."

She hurriedly acted upon the order.

"Uhl, hadn't I better look up the horses?" queried Lance.



He stuck there an instant, a ghastly spectacle, then slid sideways to the floor.

"Horses? I forgot them."

"They've strayed. I didn't see any tracks going down the trail. So they must be around. You realize how important horses are, don't you?"

"By God, I do now! . . . Here, Stevens, you wash up that mess. Cowboy, find those horses."

Lance, making a show of anxiety and hurry, strode off. Circling the clearing he found Sloan's roan and nearby his own horse, Umpqua. No sign of the other animals. He made a detour and came up within sight of the camp, and sat down on a log to peer through the foliage. He could see the cabin. Presently he saw Flemm rejoin Uhl and Fox. The three scoundrels held a colloquy, which was unintelligible to Lance. But they did not appear concerned. Once Fox pointed at Stevens, who knelt with his back turned, laboring over his task. Again Uhl made a passionate gesture toward the cabin, at which Flemm threw up his hands in resignation. Then Uhl lay down on a blanket in the sun and went to sleep.

Lingering there for some time Lance finally retraced his steps.

"Found only two horses," he informed Flemm. "The rest have wandered off. I'll have to saddle up to find them."

"Wait. If we waked up the boss now he'd bump you off."

"But every hour they may stray farther away."

"Okay by me. I'd a hell of a sight rather walk."

Whereupon Lance proceeded to wipe the utensils for Stevens. "Rollie, this is a tough break," he said. "Don't take it so hard. You'll come out okay, except for a loss of some dough you won't miss."

"I don't mind the money. I fear for Majesty. It was all my fault—that we were caught by these ruffians. I persuaded her to come out. And we were held up."

"Sidway," interrupted Flemm, sarcastically, "you don't strike me as a snatch scout. . . . Cheese it!"

Lance strode off, ax in hand. He cut an armload of spruce. Packing it back he approached the door of the cabin, and without a glance at the gangsters, made bold to enter.

Madge had been waiting, surely watching for him, for she leaped at him.

"Lance—darling," she whispered, and circled his arm with two steel-like hands.

He let the load of spruce fall with a sodden swish. Her extraordinary loveliness must have been due to intense spirit and emotion.

"Are you crooked or honest?" she added.

"Crooked as hell!" he gasped.

"I feared it. . . . But still you must save me from him—and get the ransom. I'll pay anything. . . . He means to outrage me—keep me! . . . For God's sake—for mother's—for mine—save me from that!"

"I'll try. . . . Like as not—it'll mean death!"

"I'd welcome that rather than . . . submit to that rat."

"Wait! Keep your nerve. Watch!" he whispered, huskily, and strode out. In camp he said to Flemm:

"It's getting late in the afternoon. I ought to be wrangling the horses."

"Set down an' keep your shirt on. Or you might peel potatoes an' what have you."

"Uhl!" yelled Lance, suddenly.

"These guys won't let me hunt for the horses. I found only two. I ought to ride around these woods and find them."

"Hop to it, cowboy. But don't forget we want supper soon."

Lance ran to get his saddle and bridle and blankets, tingling with the vibration of his nerves. All day he had pondered over the need to saddle Umpqua. Once astride the horse he felt that the critical hour was near at hand. Riding off out of sight he returned to the point where he could watch the camp. The heat of the day was waning, and sunset burned in the west. Lance saw Uhl, bareheaded, get up to go toward the cabin. And he went in.

That was a signal for Lance to ride back toward camp. He had to meet the crisis. Terror and panic gave way to fury, and by the time he had reached the clearing he was steel cold and tight in mind and body. Boldly he rode to the big pine opposite the cabin, and there halted. Flemm and Fox were watching him curiously. With warning gesture, Lance pointed down the trail toward the opening into the clearing. Both gangsters were impelled to leap up and look. On the moment Lance heard Madge's ringing voice: "No! . . . Bee Uhl, I'll pay the ransom. But . . ."

Lance leaped off Umpqua and ran over to the excited gangsters. His manner would have struck any one into amazement and fear.

"Where's Uhl?" he queried.

"He said he was goin' to love his Baby," replied Fox. "What's eatin' you?"

"I rode up high back there on the slope. And I saw two horses down where the trail comes up. First I thought they were our horses. But they had riders and were coming this way."

"Riders! You mean men on horseback?"

"I sure do. . . . There may be more than two. Looks damn bad. You better sneak down the trail, keeping out of sight, and make sure."

"What of?"

"Who it is and what they want."

"Fox, you go," ordered Flemm.

"Okay. But what'll I do?"

"Hold them up. An' use your gray matter."

Fox looked to his machine gun, and ran out to the trail, which he entered, and glided along till he reached the green foliage where he soon passed out of sight.

Lance stepped up on the pack beside Flemm.

"There! Look!" he whispered, tensely. "That little open place, beyond the yellow pine. See?"

"My eyes must be damn poor. I see nothin' but green," growled Flemm.

"Okay! then see stars," hissed Lance and swung his heavy gun on the gangster's bare head. Flemm fell suddenly. Whereupon Lance sped across the space to the side of the cabin.

He heard a scuffle, then swift, light footfalls, then panting breaths, and——: "I'm not—afraid of you—Bee Uhl!"

"Swell! I like my dames to be wildcats," replied Uhl, with something exultant in his voice, no longer cold.

Lance made for the door. He heard thudding footfalls, a cry, and then a rip of cloth.

"Let go! O, you beast!"

"Baby—I'll strip you—right now," grunted the gangster. Madge backed against the wall. The gangster's clawing hands held strips of her clothing. The girl, half naked, was warding him off, like a tigress at bay.

"Madge! Duck! Get away from him!" shouted Lance.

The gangster froze a second, then sprang into convulsive action, to catch the girl and get her in front of him. But she was as strong as he and far more supple. A short struggle ensued, the end of which came when Uhl made the blunder to strike her down. Then, even as he half turned, his thin face gray, his eyes hot and clear as molten steel, Lance leaped to get in better line. When his gun boomed, the gangster appeared to be propelled against the wall. It upheld him a moment. A great bloody blotch came as if by magic. Lance thought he had shot away half of Uhl's face. He stuck there an instant, a ghastly spectacle, then slid sideways to the floor.

Madge lay apparently unconscious, a bruise on her white temple and a red welt across her bare shoulder. Lance snatched up a blanket, and lifting her flung it around her and carried her out the door. Flemm lay as Lance had last seen him. Far down the trail Fox appeared running toward camp. Lance took a long shot at him for luck, then sheathing his gun, he stepped to the snorting Umpqua, and kicked the stirrup around.

"Steady, Ump! It's me. Hold, you fool horse!"

With Madge in his left arm Lance mounted and drew her across his saddle. Umpqua needed no urging. As he plunged away a rattle of gunshot blended in a continuous volley, and a rain of bullets whistled and ticked through the trees, and pattered on the cabin. But in a few jumps the horse was behind the cabin, and out of danger. Lance held him to a lope along the wall of foliage, into the woods.

NO SOONER had Gene Stewart lain down and dropped to sleep, some hours after midnight, than he was assailed by nightmares. And he was in the thick of violent events when some one not a hobgoblin or demon thoroughly aroused him. Dawn had come. He made out Nels standing over him.

"Uhuh. What's up?"

"Sidway just left on the trail of your cattle. Rustled last night before the ball opened. We're to hit Sidway's trail pronto. Danny is wranglin' the hawses. An' I've throwed some grub together. Come along, boss. We hev Sidway to thank fer somethin' like old times."

Gene quickly dressed in his range garb. His gun belt had ample shells, and his rifle was down at Nels' bunkhouse. Then he went to his wife's room and awakened her. "Sorry, dear. Nels just called me. We're going after a bunch of strayed stock. May not be back for a day or two."

"So this is what young Sidway had to tell you?" she replied, quickly.

Clear daylight had come when Stewart reached the bunkhouses. Four horses saddled and bridled stood at the rail. He found his men inside.

"Boss, let's get goin'," said Danny Mains, darkly. "If I don't miss my guess we'll hev hell catchin' Sidway. Thet boy's another Nick Steele on a hawse."

They rode down past the village, Stewart and Nels gradually drawing ahead, while Mains and Starr followed.

"Nels, what's the deal?" asked Stewart.

"Wal, some Mexicans sloped off with the rest of yores' and Danny's cattle. Gosh, but Danny is sore! They was slick aboot it, when every last person in the country was heah last night. I've a hunch how Sidway got wise to the deal."

Once across the highway, the four riders settled down to a steady trot, and in two hours had reached the rocky point of the ridge. They rode around cautiously. The gateway to the valley was wide, and on the ridge side thick with sage and brush.

"Let's hold up heah," suggested Nels, and reined in. "Ren, climb up the slope heah an' see if you can spot the cattle down the valley."

"My Gawd! Climb in these high-heel boots?"

"Come on, Ren. I'll go, too," offered Stewart. Gene saw a long black band, moving like a snake, down the valley.

"Eight or ten miles?" asked Gene.

"More'n thet, boss. Jest moseyin' along."

They returned their steps and reported to Nels. "Wal," said that worthy, "I reckon we better keep travelin'. We want to be on their heels when Sidway haids them back in the mawnin'."

Some time late in the afternoon Stewart and his men arrived at the head of the creek and halted to make camp there.

Before broad daylight they were on the move. When the sun arose, Danny and Ren rode up the slope to locate the cattle, but failed to do so owing to a projecting cape that ran down into the valley. This was some miles ahead. Before they reached it, Ren sighted dust clouds.

They rounded the cape and rode at a trot fully five miles farther before Ren sighted cattle. They were headed up the valley and evidently had been running, but had now slowed down. They rode on the slopes, and presently had to take higher ground to let a scattered herd pass.

"Aboot seven hundred, I'd say," observed Nels. "Reckon thet's all of them. Not winded much. They'll be home tomorrow."

Stewart suggested they ride on to meet Sidway, and whoever he had with him. Very soon Ren sighted three riders, whereupon Stewart ordered a halt.

"Lance ain't in thet ootfit," declared Starr, presently. "Say, they see us, an' air ridin' to beat the band."

In very short order they arrived, three lean cowboys, ragged and dusty and hard eyed. Stewart recognized them.

"Howdy, boys. Where's Sidway?"

Stewart thought Sloan's intent eyes searched his with undue fire, and he wondered what was coming.

"Mawnin' all," returned Sloan. "Stewart, you don't 'pear all het up aboot this raid—or nothin'."

"I'm well satisfied, thanks to you boys. Did you get a line on the rustlers?"

"They seen us far off an' bolted. We couldn't make them out."

"All right, that's that. Where's Sidway?" rejoined Stewart, sharply, suddenly sensing some untoward circumstance.

"By now Sidway must be at Cochise's stronghold, guidin' some gangsters who'd kidnaped your girl Madge an' a young fellow."

A BLANK silence ensued. But amaze did not long obstruct Stewart's faculties. He had sensed catastrophe. Sloan's tan had lost a shade. His eyes smoldered.

"Listen, all of you. But don't waste no time restin' here. Come on. Ride close an' let me spill it. . . . Yesterday a little before sundown Sidway caught up with us on the road to town. He told us about this cattle steal an' asked us to help him haid them back this mawnin'. Me an' the Spencers was glad to help, of course. We made camp jest outside of town. Jest about dusk Sidway walked to town to get some coffee an' butter. Not long after, but it was dark, a big black car came up, an' Sidway was on the runnin' board. We was held up by two men with machine guns. Then their boss got out an' bought my hawse outfit fer a thousand dollars. They was a gangster outfit an' Sidway 'peared to be on good terms with them. I didn't get wise to the kidnapin' till Madge an' the young feller was dragged out of the car. Then I seen it plain as print. . . . Now, to make it short, one gangster drove the car away, up the range road. Sidway an' us fellers, under them guns, saddled an' packed. Then thet pale faced gangster ordered me to wait till mawnin' an' notify you to send one man up the Cochise trail with fifty thousand dollars for Miss Madge an' the same for the young feller. An' if his orders was not carried out Miss Madge would be raped, an' both of them killed. . . . It was hard fer me to wait till mawnin', but with your telephone wire cut I couldn't find out if you'd left, an' I knew you'd be a-comin' along here after the cattle. So here we are."

By the time Sloan had concluded Stewart's horror had mounted to a ruthless and terrible wrath. Starr's face had grown a leaden white, and he appeared incapable of speech. After a brief paroxysm of emotion, Nels interrupted Danny Mains' curses with a terse query: "Gene, what do you make of Sidway?"

"What do you?" countered Stewart, huskily.

"I got it figgered. When he went in town he seen thet car with Madge in it. He must hev been slick enough to scare them kidnapers off the highway, to take to the hills."

"It shore did," corroborated the Spencer boys in unison. "Their boss knew him."

"You all think Sidway was in with the gangsters?" queried Stewart.

"I'm afraid, sir—we do. Why, we stayed awake half the night talkin' it over. These kidnapers are pretty smart. They take their time. We figger Sidway must have been sent on ahead—planned the job—rode away the day it was done. But we jest couldn't figger this cattle steal in the job at all."

An Open Letter to Miss Billie Burke

BILLIE BURKE

Dear Billie: You are now entering a new phase of your career; it will be just as different and interesting as anything you have ever known—connected with educational, dramatic, and possibly governmental service. It means new prominence and added influence for you, with opportunities to chalk up achievement of a new kind alongside of what you have already accomplished. It may not be easy; it certainly isn't going to be something you can float through like Annette Kellermann's old supper show. Be on your mental toes—this can be something mighty good. With best wishes, WYNN.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

Part 7 | Music Hollywood

DECEMBER 19, 1937.

Sigrid Gurie, a newcomer to our screens, plays the feminine lead in "The Adventures of Marco Polo." This is her debut in American movies. Gary Cooper plays the male lead.

Eugenie Leontovich returns to Chicago in the comedy "Tovarich" tomorrow night for an engagement of four weeks or longer at the Selwyn. She acts a Russian grand duchess in exile.

At Long Last Chicago Stage Gets "Tovarich"

By CHARLES COLLINS.

"TOVARICH," a play of international popularity, comes to the Chicago stage tomorrow night with Eugenie Leontovich, whose career as a dramatic star began here in 1929, as the leader of its cast. Her association with this comedy of French origin started in London in the spring of 1935. The New York company had Marta Abba, an actress of Italian background, in the heroine's rôle, but this department is assured by Alexander Woollcott that Miss Leontovich's performance is better than her rival's. This is a case when Chicago is fortunate in not getting the original New York cast, so far as the interpretation of the Grand Duchess Tatiana, employed as a maid in the household of a rich French communist, is concerned.

"Tovarich" was written by Jacques Deval, a dramatist of excellent rating in Paris who happens to be working at present in the scenario mills of the California motion picture industry. Two other plays from his pen have been produced on the American stage—"Her Cardboard Lover," with the late Jeanne Eagels and Leslie Howard in the central rôles, and "Mademoiselle," with Grace George as star. His career in Paris is represented by the following titles and production dates:

"Le Bien Aimé," 1924; "L'Amour Rêve" and "Le Beauté du Diable," 1925; "Dans Sa Candeur Naïve" and "La Rose de Septembre," 1926; "Ventose" and "Viens Avec Nous, Petit," 1927; "Etienne" and "Baricou," 1930; "Mademoiselle," 1932; "Prière pour les Vivants" and "Tovarich," 1933; "L'Oeil de Lynx" (in collaboration), 1935.

Deval writes tragedies as well as comedies, and one of his serious works, called "Prayer for the Living," was indirectly responsible for "Tovarich." After spending seven months on the former work he discovered that he had only three weeks in which to fulfill a contract calling for the delivery of a second play to the same manager. An anecdote about Russian emigrés in Paris gave him an idea; he imprisoned himself in a hotel room, and three weeks later emerged with the completed manuscript of "Tovarich." "Prayer for the Living," which he regarded as a valid piece of literature, failed immediately, but "Tovarich," which

Tamara Grigorieva and David Lichine are two reasons for the popularity of Col. de Basil's Ballet Russe, which enters upon an engagement at the Auditorium theater tomorrow evening.

Supper Rooms Prepare Gala New Year's Eve Celebration

Merry Makers to Hear Noted Band Leaders

The Hotel Sherman is preparing four café rooms for its New Year's eve celebration, with table accommodations for about 4,000 guests. "Buddy" Rogers will be the band leader and director of entertainment in the College Inn; Frankie Masters in the grand ballroom; Al Trace in the Old Town room; and another, not yet chosen, in the Bal Tabarin.

● The Stevens hotel is preparing table space and entertainment for 2,000 guests at the New Year's eve celebration. Marek Weber's symphonic dance orchestra will play in the Boulevard room, and "Tweet" Hogan's swing band will be heard in the grand ballroom. The floor show, which will be performed in both rooms, will contain Betty Lee, xylophonist; Moss and Manning, dancers; June Glory, dancer, and the Royal Rollers, a skating trio.

● Harry Richman will return to the Chez Paree on Christmas eve as the star of a new floor show. Other principals in the troupe will be Grace and Nikko, dancers; Terry Lawlor, singing girl; Johnny Woods, impersonator; the Crane Sisters, dancers, and Gwen Lee, dancer. Henry Busse's orchestra will return at this première. Richman's engagement will be for two weeks only. Grace and Nikko are known to Chicago cabaret patrons from a former engagement at the Chez Paree and the first bill of the Casino Parisienne. Terry Lawlor recently appeared on the Chicago stage in the revue called "The Show Is On."

● The New Year's eve celebration in the Terrace Casino of the Morrison hotel will have Jimmy Garrigan's orchestra for public dancing.

● Shep Fields' orchestra came to the Empire room of the Palmer house last Tuesday night as the focus of a new floor show called the "Holliday Revue." The bill also includes Milton Douglas, baritone singer who appeared here with Guy Lombardo's band in 1936; the Three Nonchalants, in acrobatic feats; Frank Gaby, ventriloquist; Johnny Bryant, whistler, and the twelve Abbott ballet girls.

● The Edgewater Beach is preparing for the entertainment of 1,000 guests on New Year's eve in the Marine dining room and South room. Orrin Tucker will be the orchestra leader in the Marine dining room, where the current floor show, with additions, will be given. Dancing will continue from 10 p. m. until dawn.

● Herbie Kay's orchestra will begin an engagement in the Gold Coast room of the Drake hotel next Friday. His specialty performers will include the Three Kays, a choir, a quartet, Fuzzy Combs and King Harvey. Kay organized his first orchestra while a student at Northwestern university.

● Harriet Norris heads the bill at the Club Alabam. Others are Marrita Ryan, soubrette; Effie Burton, singer; Skippy and Marie, dancing girls, and the Paramount singing Trio. Three dance bands.

● Ann Pennington, dancing star of several "Ziegfeld Follies," is appearing in the Hi-Hat club show; co-starring with Willie Shore, the comedian. Others are the Casinos, dancers; Hazel Harmon, swing singer; the Hi-Hat Ingenues, a ballet, and Sid Lang's orchestra.

● Colosimo's will offer a new show next Wednesday. The performers will be: Cliff Winehill, master of ceremonies; the Keller Sisters, singers; Cecil Blair, dancer; Barry, Breen and Wyler, comedy dancers; Don Enrico, tenor; Sally Osburn, singer; Auburn and Dodge, roller skaters; the Costellos, singers; Grisha and Brona, dancers who were at the Villa Venice last summer, and Henri Gendron's band.

● The Royale Frolics revue is starring Sid Tomack and the Reis Brothers, comedians; and Ann Lester, the singer. Others on the bill are the Karre Le Barron trio, a group of adagio dancers; Abbott and Marcia, tap dancing team; Rhetta Rey, dancing girl, and Jackie Hilliard, tenor. There is a ballet of 28 girls in production numbers with handsome costumes. The dance bands belong to Mark Fisher, Tiny Parham, and Al Turk.

● The star of the Yacht club show is Lita Grey Chaplin, who sings two new songs, "I Was Only Looking for a Flat" and "I'm the Wife of the Life of the Party," and current popular songs. Other performers are Jackie Green, who sings "My Cavalcade of Stars"; Honey and Weldon, tap dancers; Gladys Crane, dancing soubrette, and Tommy Martin, magician. Hugo DePaul leads the orchestra. On Dec. 29 there will be a new show with Esther Ralston and Jimmy Allen as stars.

IN REVUE AT ROYALE FROLICS

Ann Lester is prominent in the group of entertainers who are giving the current floor show at the Royale Frolics. She sings the kind of ditties called "blues."

Notes of Music and Musicians

Otto Klemperer.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra introduces as its guest conductor this week a musician of international note. Otto Klemperer, present conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra, has left California for a brief spell, and will conduct the pre-Christmas Thursday-Friday concerts. Mr. Klemperer, formerly director of the Berlin State Opera, first visited America in 1926 as guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra. His program this week includes the first Chicago performance of Leo Weiner's transcription of Bach's Toccata in C major:

Toccata, C major .... Bach
[Orchestrated by Leo Weiner.]
[First time in Chicago.]
Suite from the Ballet "Petrouchka" .... Stravinsky
Symphony No. 5, C minor .... Beethoven

Mr. Klemperer will remain in Chicago long enough to conduct the orchestra's Tuesday matinée on Dec. 28, repeating the Beethoven Fifth symphony and accompanying Artur Rubinstein in Tschaikowsky's B-flat minor concerto.

Josephine La Placa, a Chicago girl, will be the second 18 year old coloratura to make her debut as Gilda in "Rigoletto" this season, when she appears at the Civic Opera house tonight in a post-season performance of the Chicago City Opera company. Other principals in the cast are Joseph Bentonelli, Ada Paggi, and George Czaplicki, who will sing the rôle of the hunchback here for the first time.

The opera company plans two additional special performances. Next Sunday evening the Provident hospital and training school will benefit from the receipts of "Aïda," given with colored singers—La Julia Rhea and William Franklin—as Aïda and Amonasro. A New Year's eve production of "Martha," starring Tito Schipa, will be followed by supper and dancing at the opera house.

Vitaly Schnee, Chicago pianist and teacher, will play Mozart's concerto in C minor [Köchel 491] with the Illinois Symphony orchestra today. Jerzy Bojanowski, Polish born conductor, will introduce a "Tryptique Champêtre" by his compatriot, Felix Labunski. The program will be played in the Great Northern theater:

Toccata in F major .... Bach-Esser
Concerto for piano, C minor .... Mozart
[Vitaly Schnee.]
Tryptique Champetre .... Labunski
[First time in America.]
Symphonic Sketch, "Bethlehem" ..... Burnet Tuthill
Dance of the Nymphs and Satyrs ...... Georg Schumann
Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1 .... Enesco

Florence Kirsch plays the third recital in the Musical Arts series at Orchestra hall Tuesday evening. Now only 21, Miss Kirsch's training includes periods of study with Artur Schnabel, Silvio Scionti and Howard Wells. She appeared with Dr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra at 11, and later won the contest of the Society of American Musicians. Her program will be an arduous test of her powers:

Fantasien, Opus 116 .... Brahms
Sonata Quasi Una Fantasia, Opus 27, No. 1 .... Beethoven
Sonata, C major [Köchel 309] .... Mozart
Kreisleriana .... Schumann

The Chicago Council of Teachers of Singing offers a prize for the best setting for solo voice of Matthew Arnold's "Longing." Details of the competition may be obtained from D. A. Clippinger, 306 South Wabash avenue, Chicago.

Weary of inactivity, Fortune Gallo has put his San Carlo Opera company on wheels once more and will arrive here for a two weeks' stay Monday, Jan. 3, immediately on the heels of the departing Ballet Russe. Hizi Koyke, the popular Japanese soprano, is out in Hollywood, and will not return. But the resourceful Mr. Gallo will bring instead "a newfound Filipino soprano, also diminutive." Other newcomers are the baritone, Stephano Ballarini, who sang briefly with the City Opera a year ago, and an unidentified tenor. Instead of Carlo Peroni the conductor probably will be Giuseppe Bamboschek, formerly of the Metropolitan. The returning personnel includes the familiar faces of Bianca Saroya, Lucille Meusel, Philine Falco, Charlotte [now Carlotta] Bruno, Dimitri Onofrei, Aroldo Lindi, Mario Valle, Stefan Kozakevitch, Harold Kravitt, and the venerable Natale Cervi.

The American orchestra première of the newly rediscovered violin concerto by Robert Schumann will be given in St. Louis Thursday by Yehudi Menuhin and the St. Louis Symphony orchestra under Vladimir Golschmann. Menuhin has decided to play the concerto, with piano accompaniment, at his Chicago recital in the Auditorium theater Jan. 9.

The American Sibelius society was recently formed in Boston, in celebration of the Finnish composer's seventy-second birthday. The society avows the following purposes: "To foster appreciation and study of Sibelius and his works, to provide for stimulation of interest in the composer, the composers and their works who have been influenced by him, and other composers whose works may be deemed worthy of study." Includes nearly everybody, doesn't it?

he did not esteem highly, quickly won international popularity and got itself translated into twenty-two languages. This turned Deval into a cynic and drove him to Hollywood.

This Dramatist Thinks Critics Are Right.

Some of his utterances are so unlike the traditional playwright that they deserve to be quoted. For example:

"From the point of view of humanity in total, the production of a play has only a relative importance. The finest and most successful play is not worth one good deed."

He speaks kindly of dramatic critics, for he himself has served in that literary trench for the Revue de Deux Mondes, as follows:

"The critics are right nine times out of ten. One critic can be wrong, another correct; but their opinions average out correctly. In general, the critics are never mistaken."

His opinion of the theater's function is unusual and stimulating. He says:

"The theater, in my opinion, has no other function than to help man not to think in loneliness about himself."

McKay Morris, last seen here in Ibsen plays with Mme. Nazimova, will be Miss Leontovich's chief associate in the cast for the Chicago engagement of "Tovarich," which will remain at the Selwyn theater for four weeks or longer. After the run the company will disband because of the impending release of a movie version of the play.

"Tovarich" was staged under the direction of Henry Miller, under whose management Helen Hayes will come here on Dec. 27 in "Victoria Regina."

Miriam Hopkins Finds a Weak Role.

Last week's première of "Wine of Choice," freshly minted by the Theater Guild, conveyed the feeling that the play's author, S. N. Behrman, is seriously in need of a collaborator who can supply the bones of a dramatic structure upon which he may drape his too elegant language. This is the third or fourth time that Mr. Behrman has assembled a group of alleged intellectuals and fancy Long Islanders in a country house and permitted them to prattle prettily but ineffectually about current affairs. If he has no other play making ideas than this, let him get a literary partner or take a vow of reformation.

This play buries Miriam Hopkins' talent in a vaguely conceived and thoroughly uninteresting character. Girls of this type can be found perched on the bar stools in almost every tavern. The flood of talk about her glamour carries no conviction, and her sudden leap into bed [off stage] with a communist writer [her only dramatic moment] calls for harsh descriptive words that may be tolerated in the stage speech of this loose era but which are still barred from the newspaper vocabulary. My opinion of Mr. Behrman's Wilda Doran can only find private expression, and I feel that Miss Hopkins' Chicago debut as a dramatic star has been made in unfortunate circumstances.

The best characterization of a first night which was slightly jittery from nerves was contributed by an actor, new to me, named Theodore Newton, as the young writer. Proletarian novelists, as a class, may not resemble Mr. Newton in their Long Island behavior, but they write as if this crisply handled portrait was their ideal.

"Mme. Bovary" Perishes in New York.

The Theater guild's production of "Mme. Bovary," fortunate in Chicago and mistreated in New York, closed its Broadway engagement and its American career last night. Constance Cumming's next activity will be in a farcical comedy by her husband, Benn W. Levy, adapted from one of the late Thorne Smith's novels and bearing the title, "If I Were You." The first performance will be given in Princeton, N. J., on Jan. 8. A week in Washington will follow.

The Mercury theater, New York, of which Orson Welles, formerly of Chicago, is the leading spirit, expects to send a second company of its production of Shakespeare's "Julius Cæsar" on tour late in January. Alex Yokel, producer of "Three Men on a Horse," will coöperate in the business management of this venture. The cast will be selected from the Mercury's acting company and will be directed by Welles.

Guild Directors.

Four of the directors of the Theater Guild, Theresa Helburn, Lawrence Langner, Philip Moeller and Lee Simonson, attended the Chicago opening of S. N. Behrman's comedy, "Wine of Choice." This is the sixth play by Behrman which has been staged by the Guild.

"A GIRL WITH IDEAS"

Dorothea Kent is the pretty blonde who can be so glamorously dumb when a role calls for appealing dim wittedness. She's making George Barbier's eyes pop in "A Girl with Ideas." (Palace.)

'Brother Rat' Turns Cadets Into Authors

For years everybody in Lexington, Va., knew that there was plenty of humor in the life of a cadet at Virginia Military institute in spite of the rigid discipline and conservative traditions which have brought the college the name of "the West Point of the South." It was the general belief, however, that such humor was too specialized to be transmitted to the theater going public. Only forty cadets availed themselves of the opportunity to attend the opening of "Brother Rat," the V. M. I. comedy, in Baltimore about a year ago.

But now that the play has passed its first anniversary on Broadway and is about to complete its seventeenth and final week in Chicago all that has changed. When a touring company of "Brother Rat" played recently in Lynchburg, Va., not far from Lexington, it developed that 400 of the 700 V. M. I. cadets had been to New York during the summer for the specific purpose of seeing the play. The other 300 went to Lynchburg for a special matinée given in their honor by the producer, George Abbott.

The comedy, written by John Monks Jr. and Fred F. Finklehoffe, both of whom were graduated from V. M. I. in 1932, has had a marked effect upon life in the century old barracks at Lexington. The English department reports that it has served as a marked stimulus for play writing, although most of the manuscripts submitted do not use the college as a background.

Most of the vernacular used in "Brother Rat" has existed in V. M. I. barracks for many years, but the authors inserted a few trick phrases of their own. These expressions have taken their place in the lexicon of V. M. I. slang and are now a recognized part of the cadet's barracks vocabulary.

The military department is happy to report, however, that there has been no case of marriage in the corps since the play opened. The secret marriage situation in the play is based on an actual occurrence, but marriages are exceedingly rare in the cadet corps.

Stage Champion

"You Can't Take It With You" reached its 400th performance in Chicago on Dec. 10. "Abie's Irish Rose," "Lightnin'" and "The Student Prince" are the only shows of the last twenty years which have surpassed this record.

On Dec. 14 the New York company of "You Can't Take It With You" began its second year. Sam H. Harris, the producer, announces that between Dec. 14, 1936, and Dec. 11, 1937, the show grossed $775,028. This represents an average weekly business of $14,904. Three other companies are now on tour. A London production is due late this month.

Critic Offers Reason Why Dance May Seem Meaningless

Due to Seeking for Something That's Absent

By Edward Barry.

Any unsympathetic person who has ever watched a so-called modern dancer writhing about the stage in a series of seemingly arbitrary movements and striking apparently meaningless postures at all too frequent intervals must have taken with more than a grain of salt the statement made in this column last Sunday that the dance springs from life itself.

Even more difficult to reconcile with this conception of the dance is that form of it which concerns itself merely with pleasing pattern—that form of it which aims to delight the eye by means of grace and symmetry of motion.

Now both the "modern" dance and the decorative dance spring from life. The derivation is not as plain as it was in the case of the two forms treated in last Sunday's piece—the dance expressive of simple states such as joy or sorrow, and the dance which seeks to translate into its own terms the characteristics of a person or a type—but the connection exists and can be traced with a little thought and study.

The Modern Dance Often Seems Meaningless.

The modern dance [an arbitrary name for the dance which aims to be purely expressive rather than partly imitative] often seems meaningless because the spectator keeps searching in it for something which is not there—a representation of simple, identifiable emotional states or a commentary on persons or types. As a matter of fact, the dance is under no more obligation than any of its sister arts to spend its resources expressing cheerfulness and despair, or delineating character. There is more in life than this and an art can establish its derivation from life without concerning itself exclusively with such things.

Certain sentimental philosophers believe that art in its higher reaches can reveal what they pompously call the pure throb of life in its ideality. If this means anything at all it means that art, by stripping away nonessentials and revealing a hidden beauty, exposes to the cognitive [the knowing] faculties of man certain facts about the universe which are customarily obscured by what we wittily call "reality," by the chaotic aspects and activities of "real" life.

Now the dance is privileged to deal with these high matters if its votaries think that they have the spiritual penetration necessary to the task. Motion and pattern can concern themselves with an essential rather than a superficial life just as the materials of other arts so often do. It is true that the things which motion and pattern have to say about the hidden form of things may be grasped only intuitively, but the same objection—if it is an objection—holds good in music and architecture and, to a lesser extent, in the graphic arts.

Dancer Also Might Propound Questions.

Take the dancer who declares that his movements and postures are intended to reveal beauty and to arouse in a spectator those mysterious emotions which underlie life. If an irreverent bystander happens to ask just what such and such a swoop means and just what significance some particularly awful stance is intended to convey, the dancer is fully justified in countering the questions of that irreverent bystander with other, equally difficult questions of his own.

What do the horns mean when they first speak alone in the opening movement of the C minor symphony? Why does the south tower of Chartres mean more than the north—and just what does either of them mean?

The point, of course, is that none of these things has meaning if we are determined to confine meaning to the obvious features of everyday life. They all mean something if we admit that life goes deeper than surface realities, and that its "real" reality can be glimpsed only in the surge of those terrific emotions which accompany the recognition of beauty.

This Is Ultimate Trueness to Life.

This is ultimate trueness to life as opposed to immediate trueness to life. The horns of the symphony, the towers of Chartres are meaningful and are true, difficult as it would be to prove this truth by means of the medium of language. Similarly, the motions and patterns of the dance can be true to life even though they may ignore the truth of the surface of life.

If the dancer is a good artist, if his movements and postures are dictated by his intuitive grasp of the means by which underlying reality may be expressed in motion and pattern which become beautiful by that very fact, then his dance has sprung from life as certainly as if he had tried simply to mimic his grandmother's peculiarities.

It is up to the spectator to allow for the possibility of authentic derivation and to try to grasp intuitively what the dancer is striving to convey. If he finds that he cannot grasp anything, the fault may lie in the fact that the dancer is not an honest artist, that his movements and postures are arbitrary and meaningless, and that he is simply trying to exploit the gullibility of the public.

Even the decorative dance, which aims to delight a spectator by means of grace and symmetry of pattern, springs from life. Here, however, the derivation is not so direct.

Liking for Symmetry Is Deeply Implanted.

A liking for symmetry and for an easily grasped and perfectly ordered design is deeply implanted in men and women. The fact that no absolute symmetry exists in nature justifies us in calling this a purely human ideal, certainly as much a part of our lives as any other persistently held aspiration.

No perfectly symmetrical leaf, no genuine square or circle may be found anywhere in nature. Man in his art, even in those crude drawings which preceded art, has striven constantly to realize this purely human ideal and to create out of the stuff of his own aspirations that particular kind of order which nature has denied him. Now idealizations of this order are as truly a part of life as anything on the physical plane.

In seeming to deny any kinship with the visible world, the decorative dance is doing much the same thing as the modern dance. It is going below the surface, in this case to deeply held aspirations. When a dancer ornaments a meter symmetrically or attempts to delight the eye with the sheer balance of movement against movement his actions are springing from the same real life instinct which causes a child to complement one line scratched in the sand with another scratched through it at right angles to form a cross.

To cap this brief attempt to explain all about the dance in two Sunday columns, here is a definition which may possible make an acceptable basis for some brooding of your own. The dance is beautiful and expressive motion and pattern, the form of this motion and pattern being determined by the movements and postures of the performer or performers.

WILL SING IN "MESSIAH"

Else Harthan Arendt, soprano, will assist the Swedish Choral club in this afternoon's Orchestra hall presentation of the Handel oratorio.

Single Disks Maintain High Quality of the Large Sets

Although the recording companies are understandably eager to keep their expensive new albums in the limelight, there are constant releases of single disks which maintain the quality of the large sets and which can be acquired at very reasonable cost.

Among Victor's recent pressings are two little ten inchers of extraordinary interest. One is the work of Juissi Bjoerling, Swedish tenor, who has made three appearances in Chicago this season; the other of José Iturbi, Spanish pianist, whose name and face are familiar to every faithful concert-goer of America's major cities.

Mr. Bjoerling records "La Donna è Mobile" on one side of his disk and "Recondita Armonia" on the other. The former is from "Rigoletto," the latter from "Tosca." Musically, the pieces offer examples of two contrasting moods of Italian song—the gayly insouciant and the deeply passionate.

Recorded Voice Proves Superb.

Mr. Bjoerling's voice is superb. Here are easy production, rich timbre, and the eloquence of a sensitive and articulate person.

Mr. Iturbi's contribution is the exquisite little "Cordoba" of Albeniz, played with a delicate ear for tone colorings and for nuance. The piano records spendidly.

Also on a single disk—a twelve incher in this case—appears the seriously lovely "Elégie" of Fauré. It is interpreted by no less a combination than the Boston Symphony orchestra and Serge Koussevitzky, the latter one of the most distinguished of living conductors.

Columbia Brings Out Splendid Single Discs.

Columbia has brought out a number of splendid single discs lately. Joseph Szigeti plays Mozart's Sonata, No. 28, in E Minor, the Rondo from Schubert's Sonata in D Major, and an Ondricek arrangement of Tartini's Adagio in E. Georges Thill's golden voice is heard in two Bach Cantatas, "Seht! Was Die Liebe Thut" and "Nimm Mich dir zu Eigen Hin."

Two pleasant bromides, Wieniawski's "Polonaise Brilliant in D" and "Romance" from his Concerto, No. 2, are played by Nathan Milstein. Faure's charming piano compositions — Nocturne, No. 4, in E Flat and Barcarolle, No. 6, are played by Marguerite Long. A sonorous recording of Mozart's Fantasia in F Minor for organ has been made by G. D. Cunningham in Kingsway hall, London. The Don Cossack choir records three of its liveliest songs on a single 10 inch pressing, "Volkslied," "Onkel Pachom," and "In der Schmiede."

The largest of the new Victor albums comprises a program of varied music by the admirable NBC String Symphony orchestra. The director is Frank Black. Varied in type and time, the program begins with a Sinfonietta by Miaskowsky, important contemporary Russian composer, jumps back to a symphony of Karl Philipp Emanuel Bach, one of the sons of Sebastian, and concludes with the Arensky variations on a theme of Tschaikowsky.

Stokowski Makes "Godounow" Synthesis.

Leopold Stokowski has made what is called a Symphonic Synthesis of Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounow" and records it now in the Musical Masterpiece series. This extremely beautiful pressing offers the most notable music of the most Russian of Russian operas and offers it in a form more authentic than that in which it is usually heard. Mr. Stokowski has based his synthesis on the original score, not on Rimski-Korsakov's well meaning but often out-of-character reorchestration.

"Boris" is the most widely known work of a composer whose reputation and stature are constantly growing. The title rôle, in actual stage performance, is widely identified with Chaliapin.

An interesting chamber work by the living Italian composer, Gian Francesco Malapiero, is offered in album form in a recording by the Kreiner string quartet. It bears the untranslatable title of "Rispetti e Strambotti" and turns out to be a quartet in one long movement divided into twenty episodes. There is immense variety of style in the compass of the work.

Another Delius Album Is Made Available.

Another albumful of the gentle art of Frederick Delius has been made available by Columbia with the general release of the Delius Society Set, No. 1, which was first issued several years ago, but was sold only as an importation. Composed of two symphonic works, "Paris" and "Eventyr," two songs sung by Heddle Nash, the closing scene from the opera "Koanga," and an interlude and the serenade from "Hassan," it is a collection which should impress a potential Delian and gratify a confirmed one.

The songs, piquant and with a direct appeal, show a rather different Delius from the one in the ponderous orchestral works, but in both we sense the fine reserve which checks a tendency to lose the self in nostalgic emotional wanderings. The London Philharmonic orchestra, conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham, is eloquent and sonorous.

Seven English madrigals, sung by the Madrigal Singers, Lehman Engel conducting, have been handsomely bound up in a Columbia album, making a holiday package of gayety and freshness. The set includes pleasant bits by Thomas Morley, John Farmer, John Dowland, and others who were part of that sudden and brief flowering of English music in Elizabethan days.

Mr. Engel has managed to infect his group with a highly convincing air of spontaneity, which is a very important quality if the charm and delicacy of these little secular songs is to be felt after two hundred years. Included in the album is also an English folk song, "The Turtle Dove," beautifully harmonized by Vaughan Williams and sung by Simon Rady, baritone, a member of the Madrigal Singers.

Swedish Choral Club to Sing 'Messiah' Today

By Cecil Smith.

Christmas, every one agrees, just wouldn't be Christmas without at least one preformance of Handel's "Messiah." This season there will be two big time versions of this traditional oratorio downtown, and dear knows how many less pretentious productions of it in whole or in part in the churches of the city.

The Swedish Choral club gets its oar in first this season. Directed by Harry T. Carlson, the capable chorus will present the "Messiah" in Orchestra hall this afternoon. Forty-five members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will play the orchestral score and the soloists are Else Harthan Arendt, soprano; Elizabeth Brown, contralto; Charles Sears, tenor; Raymond Koch, baritone, and Stanley Martin, organist.

The annual Apollo Musical club performance of the same oratorio falls on Monday, Dec. 27, also in Orchestra hall. The "Messiah" is a deeply grounded tradition with the Apollo club, for they have given it every Christmas season since 1879. Edgar Nelson will direct the chorus of 200 voices and members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra will again play. The recitatives and arias are in the hand of Olive June Lacey, soprano; Virginia Auyer, contralto; Earle Tanner, tenor, and John Macdonald, bass.

Other Programs Bid for Attention.

A multitude of other Christmas programs bid for attention this week. In the formal lounge of the Medinah club this afternoon Mathilde Ernestine has arranged a musical benefit for the charitable work of the TRIBUNE Good Fellows. A carol concert will be sung by the Chicago Concert chorus, a women's group of seventeen voices, directed by Lucy Atkinson and accompanied by Mary Ruth Craven.

The program will be followed by a reception in honor of Philip Maxwell, director of the Good Fellows, Jean Fardulli, Greek baritone of the Chicago City Opera company, and Charles Espenscheid explorer recently returned from the fastnesses of Tibet.

Howard McKinney's pageant, "A Mystery for Christmas, in the Medieval Manner," will receive two representations tonight—at the Rockefeller Memorial chapel of the University of Chicago under the direction of Mack Evans and at the Fourth Presbyterian church under the direction of Barrett Spach.

Two Services at Fourth Presbyterian.

The morning and afternoon services at the Fourth Presbyterian church are also full of interest. At 11 o'clock Barrett Spach will play Christmas organ music, by Dupre and Mulet; Paul Nettinga, tenor, will sing "Comfort ye" and "Ev'ry valley" from Handel's "Messiah" and the choir will sing works by Kastalsky, Holst, Herzogenberg, and Sowerby. The 4 o'clock service will bring forward a Christmas hymn by Harrington Shortall of Chicago and carols by Schindler, Whitehead, and Gevaert.

The New England church choir, Porter Heaps, director, will sing Armstrong Gibbs' cantata "The Birth of Christ" in a vesper service at Thorne hall this afternoon. The cantata was written in 1930 for the famous Three Choirs festival in England. Mr. Gibbs is a member of the faculty of the Royal College of Music in London.

The Sunday Evening club makes its contribution to the holiday musical season this evening in Orchestra hall. Music ranging in age from Pergolesi [about 1725] to the present will be sung. Mary Ann Kaufman, soprano, will be soloist with the choir in a Hungarian carol, "The Christ of the Snow," and Mark Love, baritone, and Charles Sears, tenor, will present, with the men's chorus, an Andalusian folk song, "Carol of the Christmas Presents."

Central Church Choir in Orchestra Hall.

This morning Orchestra hall will resound to the caroling of the Central church choir, under the baton of William Hughes. Among the carols chosen are "A Virgin Unspotted." "Sno Gan," "Baloo Loo Lammy" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem." Archer Lambuth, organist, will play compositions by Bach, Handel and Saint-Saëns.

Out at St. James Methodist church on the south side the choir of 95 voices will sing ten new carols, the text by Mrs. Walter Dill Scott, wife of the president of Northwestern university, and the music by Bethuel Gross, organist and choirmaster of the church, this afternoon.

Tomorrow evening the Elizabeth Madrigal singers, under the leadership of Madi Bacon, will present their sixth annual Christmas program at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. Bacon, 2333 Cleveland avenue. The program will be composed of old English, German, and Italian works as well as the madrigals in which the singers specialize.

Ballet Engagement Opens Tomorrow.

The chief secular attraction of the holiday season is, of course, Col. W. de Basil's Ballet Russe, whose engagement of fifteen performances opens at the Auditorium theater tomorrow evening. The four new ballets in the rèpertoire will be given on the first four consecutive nights. The week's schedule follows:

Progress Lies in Religion, Savant Avers

By the Rev. John Evans.

Addressing the freshmen group recently at the University of Michigan, President Alexander G. Ruthven asserted that religion is the basis of all social progress because only through religious thinking can there be produced that mature human being who is an essential unit in a decent world society.

"Religion, produced by study and reflection on the nature of man and the world," said Mr. Ruthven, "produces coördinated individuals who constitute the foundations of a dignified group life, a world community and real social progress. The fate of civilization, as measured by culture, depends on the nature of the inner man; its hope is in the understanding of the heart and not in any of the 'isms' which have repeated from time immemorial."

Dr. Ruthven argues that the true scientist conceives religious education to be the ultimate response to the age-old admonition, "Thou Shalt Know"; consequently he is less and less inclined to permit the religionists to separate knowledge of the natural world from knowledge of the spiritual nature of man, and to preempt the term religion for theology. The scientist insists upon order and unity in the universe and, with the great Hebrew teachers, sees this unity as the highest purpose of human existence to be fully appreciated only by those who gain wisdom.

In the course of his address Dr. Ruthven pointed out that youth's principal troubles were engineered by adults who tried to direct youth by aphorisms which are only partially true and by catch phrases based on outworn traditions.

"You are informed, often hysterically," he told the freshmen, "that you are ungodly, radical, iconoclastic and without judgment because you are losing some of the narrow, silly, theologic notions of your elders."

The point that Dr. Ruthven made was that the important thing is not what we think but that we do think. Youth has always been accused of being venturesome and impetuous," he concluded, "and that is the way the human race progresses; not necessarily by using the ideas of youth but by harnessing and directing its energy.

Hollywood Is Fairyland in Holiday Garb

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Christmas season in the film colony is in full blast. As in other years, Hollywood boulevard from Vine street west to Highland avenue is rechristened "Santa Claus lane," and is lined with huge, modernistic Christmas trees, cone-shaped, and studded with yellow candles bearing electric tips in various colors.

The effect of the green and white painted trees and their burden of lights is fairylike when viewed down the length of the boulevard as they make a complete lane so closely are they placed. Above the trolley wires are illuminated lanterns bearing Christmas scenes of snow, reindeer, and carol singers outside lighted homes. All this is to help the exiled easterners realize that it is really Christmas time in a season that shows 80 degrees temperature and record breaking crowds flocking to the beaches only a week ago.

Hollywood would not be what it is without its touch of film life in everything, even Santa Claus himself. Saint Nick rides nightly down the boulevard with his reindeer in a swirl of movie snow, taking as his companions on the ride several movie stars. The night we joined the crowd to await Santa's ride Joan Davis and Victor Moore were in his sleigh.

It's really marvelous to see jolly old St. Nick in his glorified sleigh, golden reindeer [no, they're not real ones, the live ones proved impractical] on the huge float that bears them down the boulevard, with a microphone in hand to deliver his messages to all the little folk who line the boulevard simply popeyed at the apparition.

The untoasted corn flakes that are the snow whirl realistically but don't get mushy as they slide down your neck. Marvelous how everything nowadays is so improved and so convenient. In Hollywood, that is.

Film Stars Planning Early Christmas Parties.

Film stars, knowing full well how shooting schedules may catch up with them at the most unexpected times, begin planning their yuletide parties well in advance. Patricia Ellis, newly returned from picture work in London, gave a buffet supper at the Cock and Bull, taking over the place for the evening. Pat has grown in height since she went abroad; but then the girl is still in her teens. She hostessed in a handsome gold lamé gown, with a shoulder spray of huge gardenias. All the younger set were on hand to get the yule season going.

The Basil Rathbones, who give the most elaborate parties that Hollywood sees nowadays, began their yule season with a huge party at their Los Feliz place, the home formerly occupied by Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor during their married life.

The place is a lovely English style house, with large grounds and a lovely recreation house that connects with the main building by a picturesque gallery. For the party the gallery was carpeted in white and guests entered the ballroom and gasped at the splendor of the silver draped walls.

In the center of the ceiling hung a huge crystal ball reflecting the lights over the silver walls and ceiling. The tables that lined the sides of the room were ornamented with gardenia plants in bloom. The preliminary cocktails were served in the main house, followed by dinner in the ballroom later.

A few of the guest names that highlighted the evening are Marlene Dietrich, who appeared in a black satin gown with high neck but very décolleté about the sides, with no sleeves and so much armhole that one couldn't say there was an armhole; Miss Dietrich was the only guest who wore a hat, also in black satin.

Hollywood Is Haven for Practical Jokers.

Hollywood worships the great god GAG above all things. Film folk will do anything for a laugh. It's a usual thing to get a lunch invitation with the accompanying line, "Let's get together and have some laughs."

We were watching Sonja Henie do a bit of fancy whirling out on the set the day after she was awarded the distinction of the Order of St. Olaf from the king of Norway, and while waiting to get a chance to talk to her we noted a commotion and a great deal of laughing off to one side. The set was full of youngsters, college age, who are skating in the film with Sonja.

We just came in in time to see them put their pet gag in operation. Don Ameche stood talking to one of Mr. Zanuck's secretaries on the set to distract her attention from what the gagsters were up to.

As the secretary looked into his big brown eyes and smiling face a sneaking figure appeared from the back with a little contraption that made a small spark. He tapped her foot ever so gently with it. This was repeated at intervals, the girl not knowing what was going on but becoming increasingly restless as it registered on her that there was something funny about her feet sending off little sparks.

Then the rascal doing the tapping told her that the electricians had noted static on the set and had traced it to her. A long yarn followed, all about the ice on the set [there is a huge rink for the skaters] and static and a lot of nature-faking nonsense.

The girl was quite worried over it, as she hated to leave and not see all the lovely figure skating that was going on. The gagster solemnly advised her that the only thing the studio technicians had been able to do about such cases was to wrap the feet in asbestos. Along about here in came one of the fellows who had taken the gag seriously and wrapped his feet in asbestos.

As he came clumsily in the roar that went up was terrific and the laughter lasted so long that tears were rolling down every one's face. It is quite the most successful gag hatched in some time.

Boulevardiers have noted that there has been a lot of remodeling going on at the Trocadero. The big opening is any minute now, with Bal Cap d'Antibes to introduce the new Trocadero to its clientele. Palm trees and lanterns are designed to give a continental Riviera air to the spot. Costumes for the ball are to be strictly informal sports attire.

Coming Jan. 10

"Stage Door," the successful comedy staged by Sam H. Harris, will begin an engagement in the Grand Opera House on Monday, Jan. 10, with Joan Bennett in the leading rôle. Its authors are George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, whose joint contributions to the theater include "Dinner at Eight" and "The Royal Family."

Miss Bennett is the latest Hollywood star to embark upon a stage career. Before she became a film celebrity, she appeared with her father, Richard Bennett, in the play "Jarnegan." She now plans to divide her time between the stage and the films.

"Stage Door" is a play about the theater. Its action takes place in the Footlights club, a New York rendezvous for girls making their start on the stage, and 18 of its 32 characters are actresses in the throes of job hunting or rehersing.

Winter Circus

The Shrine winter circus will open for a fifteen day run on Dec. 25 in the International amphitheater, under the auspices of Medinah temple. Capt. Terrell M. Jacobs, wild animal trainer, will appear alone in a cage with fifteen lions and tigers. Another star will be Hoot Gibson of movie reputation, with his rough riders. Among the equestrian acts will be the Davenport and Hodgini troupe, somersaulting bareback riders. The proceeds will be used for charity.

DANCES IN YACHT CLUB SHOW

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

This is, I believe, what is called a comedy romance. And again a maiden [who has never been in a newspaper office before in her life] heaves ho and shows seasoned fourth estate men how to really run a daily publication.

The lady, a rich society girl, is given the paper in payment for a libel verdict and promptly takes upon her elegant shoulders the responsibility of making things go. Both the managing editor, Frank Barnes, and Publisher "Mickey" McGuire—two twelve minute eggs if ever there was such a pair—fall in love with her and do mental kowtow to her perspicacity . . .

These foxy gentlemen spend a great deal of thought and time in outwitting one another, and in so doing run afoul of many untoward events, but Mary Morton sees that the paper is on the streets, come what may, the while circulation increases by leaps and bounds.

The action is screwy, and occasionally amusing. You can't take it seriously at any time, but as long as you're not supposed to do so, I'll make no cracks about folks who ought to come up and see a newspaper office some time if they're going to write, act in, and direct newspaper pictures.

Wendy Barrie has a lot of charm. Messrs. Kent Taylor and Walter Pidgeon carry off their ridiculous rôles with tongue in cheek and an air, and George Barbier and Dorothea Kent have a couple of laugh provoking situations. She's that pretty, dumb [screen dumb] blonde, as you may recall.

Dialog's nothing to rave about—but it clicks now and then, and if you don't mind spasms of childish horseplay I guess you won't find "A Girl with Ideas" so hard to take.

See you tomorrow.

Play for London.

London will get Robert E. Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight" in late March, with Raymond Massey and Tamara Geva in the Lunt and Fontanne rôles.

Variety Bills

Ted Lewis has brought his orchestra and a new revue to the stage of the Palace theater. Seen in the show are the Sylvia Manon dancers, the six singing girls of the Ben Yost Varsity Co-eds, Gaye Dixon, Ray Royce, Theo Troy, Loretta Lane, Betty Dickerson, and "Snowball" Whittier.

The Chicago theater's stage revue this week, called "December Rhythms," contains William and Joe Mandel, acrobatic comedians; Ada Brown, former star of colored revues; Emerson Frome, tap dancer; Frakson, in sleight of hand tricks; and a piano fantasy with Rudy Wagner, pianist; Adrian Frieche, violinist, and the Evans ballet.

The current vaudeville bill at the State-Lake theater includes Betty Lee, xylophone expert; Maude Hilton and Gladys Fox in patter, Jed Dooley, comedian; Markell and Faun, dancers; Parker and Fredericks, singers; Johnny Sanna, Verne Buck, and the State-Lake ballet.

Midnight Acting

The Federal Theater Project [WPA] announces special midnight performances at both the Blackstone and Great Northern theater on New Year's eve. Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" will remain the bill at the latter playhouse. The attraction at the Blackstone will be Elmer Rice's comedy, "See Naples and Die," which will open on Dec. 29.

Musical Show.

"Babes in Arms," a musical show, ended its New York engagement on Dec. 18. It will go on tour starting at Philadelphia. It had 289 performances on Broadway.

Right: Ever since her debutante days of two seasons ago, Miss Florence Hermes has been in demand to sell flowers at charity parties. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Hermes.

Miss Eleonore Thompson always wears demure clothes to set off her own vivid features. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Thompson Jr., and was a debutante two years ago.

Miss Dolores Gillen sometimes wears a romantic flower and veil headdress when she goes dancing, as she did at the party the board of directors of the Margaret Etter Creche gave recently.

Chicago Folk Begin Trek to the Southland

By Cousin Eve.

It is early to be speaking of Palm Beach and things southern, but the Florida season is getting under way. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick left a week ago for a carefully considered Christmas at Villa Viscaya at Miami. They took a family vote among their three sons, Deering, Brooks, and Roger, and the majority ruled that hot weather for Christmas vacation would be fine. Mrs. George McKinlock lef Saturday night.

Last night the vanguard of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Butler's seventy-five Christmas eve guests was off for a splendorous party with a tropical Christmas tree and all, bearing exotic fruits in the way of elaborate gifts for all. Dancing, dining, bridge playing, are a part of this night before Christmas à la Palm Beach.

A vast hotel at Palm Beach, the Alba, closed for years, is reopening this season in January as the Biltmore. It is said that more than half a million dollars has been spent upon new equipment, and the tarifs take into consideration the fallen stock market and the dark cloud on the western horizon somewhat larger than a man's hand. The Alba has taken on the Sun and Surf club and golf links.

One heard a while ago that many houses would be vacant this season in the Palm Beach sector, but I wonder. The sapient are convinced that Wolcott Blair's lovely new house, 'way off by itself on an exclusive peninsula with a beautiful beach and the breakers rolling in, will house an interesting guest or two.

Wolcott Blair and the duke of Windsor are friends of long standing, and the Blairs have been frequent visitors at Belvedere, Edward's erstwhile royal country place near London. So we may expect unusually bright and festive events when the Windsors arrive in Florida, Mme. Wally with eye-filling wardrobe and the duke with all his wistful, romantic charm.

Mrs. Barney Goodspeed's impersonation of Wally Windsor was a recent treat for members of the Scribblers' club, an association of supersophisticates which carries on in our midst.

Mrs. George Corson Ellis on a hospital bed, all bandaged and plastered up from a motor smashup, was a guest at a large dinner-dance at the Casino preceding the Assembly ball last week. With her handsome and attractive mother, Mrs. Robert Thorne, in attendance dressed as a trained nurse, it seemed to me this took the bun for long distance originality and the Chicago spirit "I Will."

The Assembly, held this year in the Gold ballroom of the Congress, demonstrated as never before the changing world. A thick covering of evergreens faced the walls and the balcony of this richly bedizened salle, where sat the nondancers in glorious array, for at this party one wears one's best if ever. The music was lovely, the dancing in the ballroom ultra formal and conventional, and the loveliest gowns were those divine tulle things which make their wearers look like angels in the clouds.

Subscribers who supped late had scrambled eggs and sausage in the supper rooms downstairs and caught a sight of the "Big Apple," a negro shakedown which "is being done" these days. Whether this was a part of a floor show, or by guests of the Assembly, I don't know.

The "Big Apple" is performed by a ring of dancers going round and round. The music gets hotter and hotter; tomtoms beat madly, the dancers cry out and finally one of them gets the power and steps out to dance alone. With wriggles and struts and the stampings and clappings and shoutings of his mates, the dancer competes for the Big Apple. One by one others follow as the spirit moves them to these wild cavortings. There is an element of coarseness in the "Big Apple" as a ballroom entertainment which will, I fancy, give it a short life, if a merry one.

Champagne was the sole drink at this great party and more of it than has been used in past years. A waiter seemed at everybody's elbow every minute, and nobody really could have died of thirst who stayed on until 5 a. m. Saturday.

It was a much younger ball this year than ever before. Among the out of town guests was Ralph Hill of the state department at Washington, staying with the Ballard Moores. Mr. Hill is a perennial bachelor, with a nice house of which his mother is hostess, and terribly popular with the great hostesses of the capital.

A Sunday luncheon was given in honor of Mr. Hill by a charming couple whose several children, all married, were present. Also a married brother or two and their wives, also a young French countess, who sat at the right hand of the host. It was a handsome, gay, typical American party, and the visitor kept asking her host who every one was:

"Who is that lovely tall girl?"

"That is my daughter-in-law."

"Who is the young man with the dark mustache?"

"That is my son-in-law."

"Who is the charming girl in the blue hat?"

"That is my sister-in-law."

Finally the countess paused in her questionnaire, afraid that this jovial American was having a bit of fun. But it was all true, it was a really patriarchal and harmonious family party in honor of a state department official. I don't know whether it was Ralph Hill who spilled the beans, probably not, but our far-away friend, Edward Blatchford, who has lived for thirty years in Jerusalem, has been transferred to Beirut in Syria. Mr. Blatchford's sister, Mrs. Robert Bliss, lives there, and his niece is Mrs. Robert Dodge, wife of the president of the American college.

Edward Blatchford was vice consul at Jerusalem and full of the interesting culture of the near east. Also, he is an authority on the history of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. He had a delightful little pink Arab house, a garden with tall cypresses and a high view off country. His servants were petticoated Arab men, and the day I lunched there Gifford Cochran Jr. and Robert Garrett, two Princeton men, came in from climbing the nearby mountains of Moab.

Jerusalem is a British mandate and prosperous; Beirut is French, and Syria is a poor country. Mr. Blatchford takes the consular post of Theodore Marriner of Washington, murdered recently by a native who was irritated about something.

The debut reception of this week was Mrs. James Hopkins' for her daughter, Kay Sawyer Goodman, at 1530 North State parkway, a beautifully thought out at home in an enchanting high-up habitat.

There were many guests, but not too many. There was music by Hungarian gypsies, but rather faint and far off. There were lots of flowers, exquisitely arrayed and distributed, all white bouquets in the white drawing room where the lovely bud received with her mother. Kay Goodman is a tall, slight girl, very pretty, accomplished, poised. Her debut frock was a crisp flame taffeta, her bouquet of multi-colored roses. Receiving also was Mrs. W. O. Goodman, the bud's grandmother.

Debutantes assisting in the dining room were the Misses Betty Armour, Mary Gardner and Mary Adams, also Babs Culbertson, a January bride-to-be, whose black velvet Dutch bonnet was tied demurely under the chin.

Mrs. Ford Carter, an artist in floral effects, had done marvelous things with red carnations by way of flowers on the tea table. How can one tell about scarlet carnations maneuvered into a low bowl, among silver leaves that are as blades of steel? Carnations that are dramatic, vivid, intriguing; some of them are massed together and others as a climbing vine.

The youngest man at this tea was Charles S. Dewey III., nephew of the debutante, a sturdy lad of three, already with manners of the most charming. Among other galas of the week, one at the Polish consulate, 1444 Lake Shore drive, when Mr. and Mrs. Waclaw Gawronski received in honor of Countess Dembinska of Poland, a lovely solo dancer, and George Czaplicki, a baritone of our Chicago City opera. The latter, after a popular success, is reëngaged for another year.

The grand old house smelled divinely of log fires and mulled wine as we came blowing in on the stiff winter wind. On the receiving line were yesterday's bride and groom, Miss Blanche Gambon and Josef Staniewicz, the popular young consul. Their wedding week has been gay indeed with parties chez Count and Countess Antony Potocki, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meeker and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McLennan, who gave a large dinner Friday night.

The Gawronskis give charming at-homes and the very sight of their splendid buffet in the candle lighted dining room, groaning with magnificent cakes and sandwiches and fruits and what not, made one feel far, far away from home in some more Christmasy land than ours. Everybody was smiling and cordial and playful, and one met nearly all the consular corps, Lewis and Mrs. Bernays, Rene Weiller, Mr. and Mrs. Cabric of Jugo-Slavia, also Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Meeker.

Another matter of the week was a grand get together of members of the American Chamber of Commerce. On Friday Eliot Wadsworth of Boston had a luncheon at the Stevens for many of his friends who were delegates to Berlin last July, when the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce was on. At that time Thomas J. Watson was elected president and Silas Strawn of Chicago, vice president.

The other day Mr. Wadsworth was elected president of the American Chamber of Commerce and there was discussion of the place where the next biennial congress will be held in 1939. Japan had been the place most favored by all the delegates, but inasmuch as the far east seems not to be so popular for the moment, a fascinating north of Europe capital has been selected.

The same night a large dinner of the delegates heard the celebrated Thomas J. Watson speak on world trade, which he and all the other delegates believe is the solution of this state of world unrest. Mr. Watson, tall, white haired, handsome, and bland, believes the whole world will have a higher standard of living with pepping up of world trade.

Silas Strawn was chairman of this large dinner and made an amusing and brilliant preamble, in which he referred to the long speaker's table as "a bench show." And one after the other he told a half dozen stories new and nice. One I liked particularly he prefaced with the thought that "a zebra may have beautiful stripes, but he is a jackass just the same."

It seems that Mr. Strawn was in London at a large banquet and his next neighbor was a small man, not impressive, nor did he say much. Finally they got on the subject of the American bar and the little man said he believed that while in England lawyers were divided into barristers and solicitors, in America it was different.

Yes, Mr. Strawn said, it was "different." After the American lawyer had practically patted the plain little Britisher on the head, he asked him if by any chance he had anything to do with the bar in England. "Well," said the little man, "I happen, but not through any fault of my own, to be lord chief justice of England." While this was largely a man's dinner, Mrs. Silas Strawn was present with a dove party of eight, and Comtesse Alain de Pierrefeu was sitting hard by with another group.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Rohde, former minister to Denmark, was the special attraction at an open midseason meeting of the Contemporary club on Friday, and Dr. William Link addressed members of the Fortnightly with an essay called "Back to Religion" the afternoon before. This was an open meeting with guests, and the air was vibrant with excitement as to what remained of religion to discuss in a lighter vein.

However, Dr. Link, who heads a school of applied psychologists in New York, immediately announced that he had three titles for one lecture, and this time religion was out. The speaker was most entertaining. His plea was for more common sense in life, for a complete forgetfulness of inferiority complex and Oedipus rex and all that lingo, and a return to good old biblical behavior.

One quite lapped up this talk as being timely and rather salty, too.

Mme. Rohde repeated the lecture I heard her give some years ago at a large dinner, and this Contemporary audience was delighted with the tall, gray haired daughter of the "Great Commoner." Her husband, Capt. Rohde, has the title of Kammer Junker to his Majesty, King of Denmark; that is, he has the appointment and is in the line of attendance upon the Danish king, but has never been called upon for service.

The most charming moments of the ex-diplomat's talk were about her trip to Greenland, the country of ice, and also recollections of a long ago journey by trailer with her children among the forests and rose hung lanes of beautiful Denmark.

CHRISTMAS WITH GRANDMOTHER!

Little Martha Royer and her cousins, Joseph W. Royer II. and Henry Royer Jr., are looking forward to spending Christmas day with their grandmother, Mrs. Joseph W. Royer, in River Forest. Martha, who is three and a half, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Royer of Evanston. Joseph, who was named for his late grandfather, is thirteen, and his younger brother is six. They are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Royer, also of River Forest.

Woman Customs Inspector Retires After 46 Years

AFTER serving 46 years as customs inspector on the water front and the piers of trans-Atlantic liners of New York City, Miss Eva F. Smith, 70 years old, has retired from service.

Varied Events Begin Season in Palm Beach

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Like the slow unfolding of a huge Japanese fan painted with tropical scenes, that national institution known as the Palm Beach season is getting under way. Numerous informal luncheons, dinners, and cocktail parties keep the social kettle singing. As the holidays approach, night clubs begin to twinkle like fireflies in the dusk.

Cultural phases will be supplied by the Society of Four Arts, which opens with an exhibition in its new building the first of the year, and with that brand new brand of gayety to be injected into society by the interests operating the Whitehall, the Alba, the Sun and Surf club, and the Palm Beach Country club, there is every indication that Palm Beach now will be "all things to all men."

Recently arrived Chicagoans see beautiful new houses and improvements on every side. More than $3,000,000 has been expended on new homes, but landscaped grounds and artful planting make them appear to have been here for generations.

The new cream colored stucco house of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy of Lake Forest suggests the charm of Charleston, S. C., as it must have been in the gallant days of Rhett Butler. A graveled driveway curves in front of its hospitable door. Green gardens surrounded by white brick walls distinguish the grounds. Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy are expected in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton of New York have a beautiful new house on Ocean boulevard, about a mile south of Mar-a-Lago, the Spanish castle where Mr. Hutton lived with nis former wife, now Mrs. Joseph Davies, wife of the ambassador to the soviet.

The dusty pink brick house of Harold Sweatt of Minneapolis, on North Ocean boulevard, is a perfect example of Norman French architecture.

In addition to the houses, which are stupendous in size. there is any number of smaller homes, built since last season, these featuring either Monterey or colonial architecture.

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury are not expected from Philadelphia until after Christmas, but their forty-two acre estate is being groomed to the last blade of grass. A bumper crop of oranges, grapefruit, and kumquats weighs down the trees. Flower gardens are a riot of bloom in a color motif of gold and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Morris of Chicago, who have been at the Breakers, are now occupying Earlham, Howland Spencer's ocean front estate, which has its own private beach. The Morris' yacht Whim is here. Mrs. Peyton Van Rensselaer, of New York and Newport, who is a real estate operator, also announces the sale of the estate of the late Edward Lowber Welch to Charles S. Davis of Chicago.

The colony here has heard with interest of the marriage of Miss Margaret Crowley of Boston and George Rich of Chicago, which was solemnized in Phoenix, Ariz., on Dec. 4. Planned for a Palm Beach event later in the season, the marriage took place in Phoenix because Mr. Rich had to accompany his father, who is ill, to that city. The newlyweds are expected here later, when they will be honored with a reception by Mrs. Rich's aunt, Mrs. James H. Kennedy of Boston.

Other Chicagoans in the resort include Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hayes, who have been at Villa Charmae since November; Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bode, who are at the Breakers, and Mrs. H. Orr Perkins, who is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Marion Sims Wyeth, at Trefontaine. H. Stillson Hart and his sister, Mrs. Evan Evans of Barrington, are at the Hart home on Sea Breeze avenue. Mrs. Hart will be down soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Klotz of Winnetka are at their Everglades avenue home. With them is their granddaughter, Nancy Pardue, whose parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Austin Pardue of Minneapolis, will be here in January.

Joining the Klotz household for the holidays are another daughter, Mrs. Donald Williamson and Mr. Williamson, who recently returned to America after a two year residence in Buenos Aires.

The arrival of the Marquis and the Marquise Georges de Cuevas is anticipated in January. They will occupy the David Hugh McCulloch estate this season. The marquise, a cousin of Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard, is the former Margaret Strong, daughter of the late Bessie Rockefeller Strong.

Mrs. George Alexander McKinlock came in on Wednesday afternoon and Mrs. George Henry High also is here to occupy a charming house on Pendleton avenue, where several other prominent Chicagoans also have homes. This thoroughfare, with its white Charlestonian houses gleaming through native trees, vines, shrubbery, and emerald lawns, is considered one of the most charming "picture book" streets in Palm Beach.

Mrs. Stresenreuter Butler of Hinsdale is the guest of her sister, Mrs. H. Courtney Strotz, at Villa Ford. Mrs. Butler and Mrs. Strotz joined Mr. and Mrs. John Wilson Esmond of Barrington, Ill., for a yacht cruise to Miami this week. Mrs. Strotz and Mrs. Butler will spend some time in Hinsdale during the Christmas holidays and will be joined by their mother, Mrs. F. Bartholomew Ford. Later Mrs. Strotz will sail on a world cruise which will be prefaced by a visit of a few weeks in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Thorne Donnelley, who have spent a fortnight at the Brazilian court, left this week for Miami on their yacht Makö. They will leave soon for a three months' cruise and will be joined in Jamaica in January by Mrs. Brown Wentworth of Chicago and Sarasota. National figures now in Palm Beach include Joseph P. Kennedy, who came down for a rest but who has been kept busy dodging reporters and camera men.

ARRANGING FOR DANCE

As one of many young matrons interested in the Eli Bates Settlement house, Mrs. John I. Shaw is taking part in the arrangements for a supper-dance to be held at the New Boulevard room of the Stevens hotel Dec. 30, after the performance of the Princeton Triangle club at the Civic Opera. The Trianglers are invited to the dance, which will benefit the settlement house.

Princess, Wed to American, Scorns Title

By May Birkhead.

PARIS

Reaction to the possession of a title, especially when it carries H. R. H. with it, varies according to circumstances and temperament. For example, a French princess—directly descended from the French kings—now an American through her marriage to a New Yorker, occupying a truly distinguished place in European society, is Mrs. Walter F. Kingsland. By birth she is the Princess Marie-Louise d'Orleans, daughter of the Duchesse de Vendôme [sister of the late King Albert of the Belgians and aunt of the present king] and of the late Duc de Vendôme, who descended directly from King Louis Philippe of France.

Mr. and Mrs. Kingsland used to be very much in the social news of Paris, but in recent years they have been living in America. They recently arrived for a short visit on this side, and will be much entertained here. Although both her mother and father are of royal blood, it is well known that she never refers to her title and is delighted to be simply Mrs. Walter Kingsland. Her parents opposed her marriage, but, as in the case of her brother, the Duc de Nemours, she married an American and greatly enjoys living in America.

It will be remembered that the Duc de Nemours married Peggy Watson of Washington and Newport. Mr. and Mrs. Kingsland will be in Paris a short time and then will go to Pau, near Biarritz, to spend Christmas with Mr. Kingsland's brothers, Harold and Arthur, who more or less live there.

The holiday drift to the Riviera already is well under way. It has, of course, been accelerated by the rumored intention of the duke and duchess of Windsor to pass Christmas, and perhaps New Year's, in Cannes. In spite of the many attractions of the Côte d'Azur, Edward always has liked Cannes best of all, probably inheriting this from his popular grandfather, or perhaps because he has enjoyed, in the past, basking in its freedom from petty annoyances so apt to dog the footsteps of the illustrious.

Now that Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers are in America, every one is wondering who the hosts of the duke and duchess of Windsor may be in Cannes. It was said Leon Bailby, publisher of the Paris daily Le Jour, placed his villa at their disposal, but if they have accepted the offer it has not been made public.

It also was rumored that the ducal pair would visit the André Dubonnets—not Mme. Paul Dubonnet, the internationally famous Jean Nash. Mme. André Dubonnet's first husband was Comte Paul de Vallombrosa [half American through his mother].

Gordon Selfridge is following his old custom of crossing the channel every Friday to pass the week-end in Paris. He often has his daughter Violette and her husband, the Comte de Sibour, with him. Mr. Selfridge and his daughter and son-in-law are great flyers and pilot their own airplane over from London frequently, although recent fogs have been keeping the London-Paris week-enders from flying.

Role of Santa Annual Joy to Club Leader

By Betty Browning.

To thousands of Chicago children Santa Claus is Mrs. Emma Huising Wall. Silvery haired, pleasingly plump, dimpled—"Doll," shortened from Dolly Dimples, is the name by which her fellow Ladies of Isabella know her — Mrs. Wall smiled when her friend, Sister Clare, directress of St. Mary of Providence institute, said: "Can't you just see her as Santa Claus?"

Mrs. Emma Huising Wall.

For 19 Christmases, without a break, Mrs. Wall has appeared as Santa Claus at St. Rose's social center and kindergarten on West 25th street, and not a New Year's day in 26 years has she missed at St. Mary's Training school in Des Plaines, when the boys and girls there have their Christmas party.

And at the other forty parties that the Ladies of Isabella give every Christmas for underprivileged children, old people and disabled war veterans, she is always on hand, if not actually as Santa, then as a leading spirit. They say a party can't be a "flop" if she's there.

Christmas giving, to Mrs. Wall, means giving of one's self. "And that means having such a blamed good time," as she put it.

It is she who, from the first, has insisted that the Christmas gifts that the Ladies of Isabella give must be something the recipient really wants, something "frivolous." That means asking the person in advance what he wants, personally selecting the gift and wrapping it for him, all multiplied many times over to reach the hundreds of inmates of institutions to whom the Ladies of Isabella bring their Christmas cheer.

"Sometimes members or our council have brought in practical gifts, but I always tell them: 'They'll get the practical things somehow, but will they get the things they really want if we don't give it to them?'" Mrs. Wall said.

Then she explained her philosophy. "A doll or a toy—if it's something the child has set his heart on—will bring joy that will be remembered 20 years from now, long after the practical articles of clothing will be worn out. What children in institutions really want is love, anyway. They need to feel that some one cares about them and their hopes and desires."

"Mrs. Wall eats, sleeps and breathes Ladies of Isabella," is the way one of her fellow members describes her leader's absorption in the work of the organization. Since the Ladies were organized more than a quarter of a century ago she has been active in their work, and has been supreme grand lady for 14 years. In 1936 the Ladies of Isabella joined with religious and civic leaders in giving a testimonial dinner for Mrs. Wall.

In addition to these activities Mrs. Wall also finds time to run her own tearoom downtown, to be a homemaker and to be a devoted aunt to her nephew, whom she describes as "my hobby."

"Christmas cheer" parties, as they are called, are synonymous with the Ladies of Isabella in the public mind, but the service of the organization extends the year around to the institutions visited at Christmas time. The supreme council and the 30 subordinate councils with their 5,000 members, give card parties, minstrel shows, dances, carnivals and a variety of other benefits to raise funds for these philanthropies.

The "fairy godmother" work of the Ladies brings individual members into contact with children who otherwise would have no one to take a personal interest in them.

As an instance of the Ladies' work, the Sisters of St. Mary of Providence had just come from Italy to work among the Italian immigrants, and were living in poverty on West 26th street when Mrs. Wall first became interested in them 19 years ago. Now, with the assistance of the Ladies of Isabella, the order has established several schools and institutions in Chicago.

The Ladies of Isabella are a Chicago organization. "We've never had time to organize nationally. There's always too much to be done right at home," Mrs. Wall said smilingly.

Mrs. Robert S. Didier is the former Helene Snyder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul J. Snyder of Chicago. Her wedding to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril C. Didier took place Thanksgiving. After a wedding trip to Florida and Cuba they are at home in Chicago.

Lenroot, chief of the children's bureau, United States department of labor, has announced that at the request of various professional groups and national organizations interested in maternal and infant health and welfare, the children's bureau is calling a conference on better care for mothers and babies to be held in Washington, Jan. 17 and 18.

Lighted Trees in Pasadena Fete Holidays

By Ruth Billheimer.

the holiday weeks. This week they have burst into full, electrical bloom all over town. And Chicagoans, as they behold the loveliness here, remind Pasadenans proudly that this heart gladdening custom really started in Kenilworth when, 30 years ago, the architect, George W. Maher, threw flood lights up through the branches of two great trees marking the entrance to Kenilworth, and lighted one in his own yard, too.

Every train, arriving or departing, brings in and carries away prospective holiday guests. Mrs. J. Fletcher Skinner welcomed her son and his family this week from New York City, the J. F. Skinners Jr., J. F. Skinner III., and Alan Kingsbury Skinner. They will stay just through the holidays.

Mrs. Peter Berkey, at the Huntington, expects her son, Peter Jr., here from the Hill school. Mr. Berkey will not be out again until February, having left here only a few days ago. He was accompanied as far as Phoenix by their daughter, June, who is back now in Pasadena.

As soon as Christmas and New Year's eve are over Mrs. Harry Mayhew hopes to leave for Chicago and bring her mother, Mrs. Albert W. Raymon, back with her for the remainder of the season. She will, of course, visit her sister, Mrs. Donald W. Mercer of Winnetka.

The Thomas Wolfes of Evanston will spend Christmas in their brand new hilltop home at 873 Linda Vista avenue. Last Sunday they invited a small company of friends in for a house warming.

On the same avenue are the Donald Armours, formerly of Chicago, who plan to do the honors at breakfast on Christmas morning with Mr. Armour's sister, Mrs. Armour Morris, Barbara and Armour Morris, as their guests. Barbara, home from Occidental college, is spending this week-end at Palm Springs.

Much partying is in the air, and almost every day from this week-end on through New Year's claims from three to six major events. The Charles Paxtons and Mrs. Paxton Warner will entertain jointly for their children Wednesday night with a dancing party at the Paxton home. The honorees are Miss Jean Paxton, home from the Katherine Branson school, where she is a senior, and her cousin, Tom Bakewell, just out from Baltimore to be with his mother. For many years the Paxtons resided in Lake Forest.

The Eugene Leslie Bruces [Gertrude Gaylord] will entertain on the same day, giving their first big party. They will serve cocktails to one hundred of their friends.

Among the subdebs are almost as many social events as among the debutantes themselves. Miss Josephine Swift, daughter of the Carlton Swifts, and her friend, Miss Deborah Kirk, from Miss Madeira's school in Washington, D. C., will be honored jointly by Mrs. Swift on the twenty-first. Josephine is home from the Branson school. Miss Kirk is the daughter of Capt. Allen Kirk of the United States navy, and Mrs. Kirk.

OAK PARK GIRL TO WED

Miss Marion Low Field, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson L. Field of Oak Park, is engaged to be married to James Loring Peirce, son of Mrs. L. H. Peirce of Chicago. The wedding will take place in February.

Astronomer Stirs Wider Interest in Study at Vassar

Special interest has been lent to the subject of astronomy at Vassar college by the presence of Dr. Robert J. Trumpler, astronomer of the Lick observatory of the University of California and member of the National Academy of Sciences.

As visiting lecturer during the first semester, Dr. Trumpler is giving for students majoring in astronomy a course in astronomical statistics. A new three inch telescope is being set up under his direction.

The study at Vassar goes back to the college's earliest years, for Maria Mitchell, the first woman astronomer, was a member of the first faculty, and the observatory now in use at the college was one of its three original buildings.

The enrollment in the department this year is fifty-two students in five courses. Included are two seniors and four juniors who are majoring in astronomy and two graduates of 1937 who are candidates for the master's degree.

Each year, in the course in orbit theory and celestial mechanics, students compute the preliminary orbit of a newly discovered minor planet, the observations being furnished by the Yerkes observatory and the Berlin Rechenistitut, and orbits are published in the Astronomical Journal.

Smith Alumnae Luncheon Will Be Tomorrow

Two Splendid Art Exhibits Now on View

By Eleanor Jewett.

There are two beautiful exhibitions in town to carry us safely through the holiday season. The seventeenth exhibition by artist members is current at the Chicago galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue, and an exhibit of original color etchings by Elizabeth Orton Jones is to be seen in the O'Brien galleries, 820 North Michigan avenue.

Elizabeth Orton Jones presents imaginary children doing the most fascinating things. Her drawings are spirited and amusing. She deals in clear, pure color and throws over the infants' least actions a romantic veil spun from her own delicious fancy.

Her two new tiny prints this season are "Shampoo" and "Shower Bath." If the one does not capture your heart, the other surely will break it. The "Fish Story" is a larger etching and presents a group of boys listening to one of the band, whose hands creep further and further apart as he dilates upon the "fish that got away." "The Secret" shows a circle of little girls very busy with something no one must know.

There are two exquisite water colors in the exhibit, "First Snow" and "I See a Ship." "Pedie," the portrait of a Persian cat, is stunning. A delicate little etching in keeping with the season is the "Christ Child." "Hill Top" and "Lunch Time" complete the new series of prints. Many of her old favorites also are hung, and the show is guaranteed to delight you.

The Chicago galleries are offering a brilliant exhibition of paintings by artist members. I cannot remember when there has been as flawless a show held in any Chicago gallery featuring contemporary work by a group of painters. We have had stirring one man shows in different galleries, but where many artists have been gathered the rule has been that more tares than grain was the harvest. There are in this exhibit, too, some pictures which are not so good; however, their number is infinitesimal and they have been neatly hung in a little room by themselves.

It is with the vast majority of the pictures that we have to do. So many of the canvases are so stimulating and so fine that one could almost transcribe a column of titles and artists' names and, enjoining the public to go look at one and all, feel one's duty had been accomplished. There really is little need for a critic in the Chicago galleries these days. What they want is a ballyhooer with lungs of brass to stand up and shout:

"Come one! Come all! This way to the most colorful and brilliant show of paintings you will see in many a month! This way! This way!"

Well, consider for the moment that this has been shouted and you are answering the invitation. What are you going to see?

You will see a magnificent landscape, "Myriads of Blooms," by Florence White Williams. You will see two stunning bird studies, "Quetzals," by Karl Plath, and "Birds of Paradise," by Julius Moessel. You will see a brisk and bright canvas, "Autumn," by Tunis Ponsen, and a brilliant hunting scene, "Following the Hounds," by Ole P. Larsen. You will see "Loaves," by Macena Barton, a stunning still life so rich and true and of such admirable quality and texture that your mouth waters as you scan each crusty loaf.

You will see a vigorous, red-blooded western landscape, "Wyoming," by Edward T. Grigware, and a beautifully toned, marvelously blended landscape of water, hills, and rising mists, "Along the Pigeon River," by Rudolph F. Ingerle. You will see a beautiful group portrait of father and little girl, "Mr. C. M. MacChesney and Daughter," by Frederic Tellander, one of Chicago's most versatile and most brilliant painters. You will see the delightful "Portrait—Donald Moore," by Othmar Hoffler, the recognizable "Smoky Mountain Painter," by F. R. Harper, and the challenging "Adirondacks," by Averill Conwell.

You will see beautiful still lifes by Gerald A. Frank, Anna Lynch, Anna L. Stacey, Bessie Helstrom, Karl Wolfe, Joseph Allworthy, and Gasper J. Ruffolo; a picturesque bit of Mexico envisioned by Charles P. Killgore, and a ruined barn on a windy hilltop, from the brush of Oscar Soellner; you will see "The Winding Road," by Dale Bessire; "Girl in Blue," by Helga Haugan Dean; "Evening in Indiana," by Arnold E. Turtle; "Untrodden Ways," by Will Vawter; "Across the River," by Carl R. Krafft; "Circus Group," by Walter Krawiec, and the very charming blue terra cotta figure, "Repose," by Bernard Frazier.

No matter how few the days before Christmas nor how rushed the days immediately after, give yourself a Christmas present and go see this exhibition. You will not be sorry. It will continue to Dec. 31.

Mrs. Frank G. Logan awarded prizes to the following paintings: "Along the Pigeon River," by Rudolph Ingerle; "California Landscape," by Orrin A. White; "September," by Lucie Hartrath; "Mrs. Alex S. Greig," by Antonin Sterba; "Landcape," by Pauline Palmer, and "From Sylvia's Garden," by Gerald Frank.

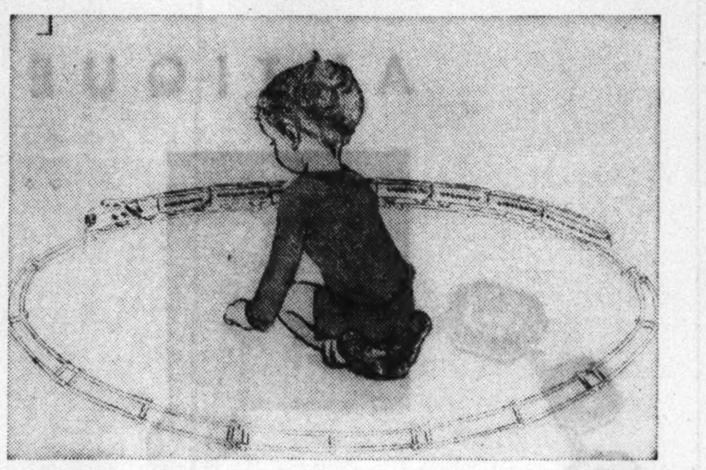
TO BE DECEMBER BRIDE

Miss Mary Frances Burnham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Burnham of 1252 Rosedale avenue, will be married Dec. 23 to James David McLean. Mr. McLean is the son of David McLean of Hammond, Ind.



"STREAM LINER"

Christmas must be near when new trains are in question. This delightful color etching by Elizabeth Orton Jones is one of a new group of her work on exhibit in the O'Brien Art galleries, 820 North Michigan avenue.

De Diego Work Wins Medal in Chicago Exhibit

In the Chicago Society of Artists exhibition, which closed yesterday in the gallery at 316 North Michigan avenue, the gold medal went to "Composition," by Julio de Diego; the silver medal to "Slaughter House Ruins," by Gertrude Abercrombie; the bronze medal to "Still Life," by Kathleen Blackshear, and honorable mention to "Setting the Table," by Fritzi Brod. It is remarkable how true to pattern these exhibits run and how replete they are with museum material, although in the present show there were several pictures delightful enough not to be so classified.

The Renaissance society of the University of Chicago is sponsoring a delightful exhibit of water colors by the late Florence Robinson, to Jan. 9, in 205 Wieboldt hall.

Etchings by R. Stephens Wright and a special exhibition of fine drawings, water colors, and lithographs in color by modern masters are on view in the Roullier galleries, Fine Arts building.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Feb. 28, 1889.

Dear Julia: Do you remember a handsome new, though unfinished, building Will showed you when you were here, which you thought compared favorably with New York's new business blocks? It is to be called the Monon building, you know. We have been interested in it because J. M. Van Osdel, one of our fine architects, designed it.

Waiting in Will's outer office this afternoon when I called for him, I found a client who had come to see him. We fell into conversation and I discovered that he is the contractor who is putting up the building. He had come, he said, to get some advice for a friend out in Deadwood, that new mining town in Dakota.

I never hesitate to talk freely with Swedish people, they are so frank true. Their keen eyes seem to measure you and if they decide you are worthy of confidence, it is readily given.

Mr. Ericsson, the contractor, though not quite thirty, I should think, is one of our rising men. He came here in 1881, he told me, not only without funds but $75 in debt. An uncle in Chicago was a cabinet maker and that fact drew him here. He had attended college in Stockholm and his intelligent face indicated that he was no ordinary person. As is the case with many Europeans, he had mastered a trade before reaching manhood, so he was ready to earn his living. I wish learning a trade were customary in America.

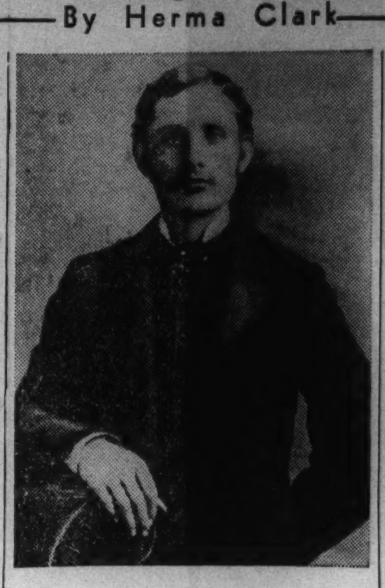
My very bones ached as I learned of the hard work this young Swede did when he first arrived, not only with plane and saw, but in laying bricks, for there was no work at one time for the carpenter. As a bricklayer, too, he could earn three dollars a day, while carpenter work brought only two dollars and a half.

He almost left Chicago, he told me, when, after he had been here for about a year, times were slack and he saw in the papers that the town of Deadwood had burned. There, he thought, would be opportunity. A town to be rebuilt! Work for everybody! He would go out west and grow up with the country.

He walked around to the railroad station and regarded eagerly the poster in the window. Yes. He had enough money for the ticket to Deadwood. He would go. But before he could move to the entrance a slap on the back caused him to turn. There was Andrew Langquist, with whom he had worked for a time on the south side.

"What are you doing here?" cried Langquist.

"I'm starting to Deadwood," answered young Ericsson.



Henry Ericsson.

"No, you aren't," countered Langquist, "you're coming with me to my uncle's clothing store. I want a new suit and I can get it at almost half price from him."

So off the two young fellows went and both invested in clothes, which, said Mr. Ericsson, meant he couldn't go to Deadwood as he no longer had enough money. It was easy after that for Langquist to persuade him to go into partnership with him. Both were able business men, I judge, and soon they were prospering. Now they are building the lofty Monon building, which is arousing much comment.

It took but a few minutes for Will to make an appointment to see Mr. Ericsson the next day and, finding that he lived not far from us on the north side, Will asked him to drive with us. We took him to his home, a nice three story apartment building on Delaware place, not far from Pine street, and went in to meet Mrs. Ericsson, a beautiful young woman, not blonde, as I had supposed one born in Sweden must be, but with lovely dark eyes.

I hope to see more of these young people who are making their way in this new country, asking no odds of the world, but winning by their merit.

Much love, as always,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Henry Ericsson, who still spends many hours daily in the office of the business which bears his name, has erected many fine buildings in Chicago. Among these are the Conway building, the Continental-Illinois Bank building, and the Pittsfield building. He was commissioner of building in Chicago from 1911 to 1915. Mr. and Mrs. Ericsson live at 534 Surf street.

Many readers write us of the Nye-Riley entertainment of 1889. Dr. David S. Hillis says: "Nye's tall, thin figure, shiny dome and serious manner set my lifetime standard for a humorous personality. You can imagine how I enjoy your column, when it recalls incidents so dear to the heart of a native."

Walter Williams writes: "I received quite a thrill on reading the Esmond letter covering the Nye-Riley evening at Central Music hall forty-eight years ago. I was 'among those present' and will always remember Riley's rendition of his exquisite 'Beautiful Hands,' as well as 'The Old Man and Jim.'"

A. P. Pauly, Sheboygan, Wis., writes of the John Allen Preitsch Glee club, whose eighty-five members always attended the Lincoln's birthday celebration.

Since Saint Nick and his reindeer will soon be here, we are reminded to pass on information which interested us . . . that the author of the words of a Christmas song which delighted children of yesterday was a Chicago woman, Mrs. Sophia Tayler Griswold, wife of a well known doctor of the city. Miss Eva Griswold and Mrs. G. G. Rockwell, 2817 Washington boulevard, and William R. Griswold of Wheaton, are children of Mrs. Griswold. The chorus of this old song began:

"O, O, O! Who wouldn't go
Up on the housetop, click, click, click,
Down through the chimney, with good Saint Nick?"

Hall, Winnifred Erickson, and Carolyn Erickson, the club's vocal trio; Miss Bellvie Wiberg, reader; Clarence Brack, violinist, and Miss Enid Nelson, piano accordion player. Kenneth O. Chicago of Old to Live Again in Play Dec. 26

Chicago of other years will live again with the revival of "When Chicago Was Young," a three act play by Herma Clark and Alice Gerstenberg, opening Dec. 26 at the Studebaker theater. The drama, which first was presented in 1932 for the benefit of Chicago charities, is being revived with the support of civic groups and women's clubs, and proceeds again will go to charity.

"Long John" Wentworth, John Crerar, George M. Pullman, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Marshall Field and other famous figures in early Chicago history are portrayed in the play against authentic backgrounds reproduced through the coöperation of the Chicago Historical society. Many of the costumes and furnishings have been loaned by descendants of pioneer Chicagoans.

The first act of the play is laid in the Tremont house lobby on the eve of the Lincoln-Douglas debate; the second act, in a fashionable house on Wabash avenue and 12th street during the fire of 1871; and the third act, at the Potter Palmers' home on Lake Shore drive when the Infanta Eulalia of Spain was a guest there in 1893. A prolog and an epilog are laid on the skytop terrace of the Tavern club in 1937.

Garrett H. Leverton, head of the production department of the Northwestern university theater, is directing the play. Mrs. Minna Schmidt, creator of the gallery of figures at the Chicago Historical society, and lecturer on costuming at Northwestern university, has designed costumes for the production, many of them reproductions of gowns loaned by Mrs. Frank G. Logan, Mrs. Emanuel Mandel, Mrs. Carolyn Tyler, Miss Caroline M. Wicker and Mrs. Erich Gerstenberg.

No President's Wife Has Worn Hair in Bob

NO wife of the President of the United States of America ever wore her hair bobbed, and not in thirty years has there been a first lady who was a blonde, either naturally or by artifice.

There are two women who are secretaries of state, Goldie Wells of South Dakota and Elizabeth F. Gonzales of New Mexico.

Yule Parties Prominent in Clubs' Plans

Merry Christmas! The approach of the holiday is being heralded by almost every organization with Christmas carols and Christmas giving, and members are finding in their plans for the happiness of others the best introduction to their own family celebrations.

The Sunday before Christmas always is reserved by the Lutheran Woman's League of Chicago and vicinity for a Christmas party at the Children's Receiving home maintained by the organization in Maywood. The 48 dependent boys and girls who live there will give a program this afternoon, and members of the league will bring presents to be given to the children on Christmas eve.

It was as an aftermath of the Congress of Religions at the 1893 World's Fair that Lutheran women representing all nationalities combined to form the Lutheran Woman's league in September, 1894. Through its 1,500 members and other friends the organization supports the Children's Receiving home, which was founded 18 years ago. Mrs John L. Forch Jr. is president.

This afternoon the Germania club, at Germania place and Clark street, will be the setting of a Christmas party given jointly by the German club of Chicago, its woman's auxiliary and the Germania club itself for children of members.

Hindu tricks of magic, learned while he lived in Bombay, will be presented by Col. J. A. LeBouthillier, and Christmas carols will be sung. Santa Claus will be there to give presents to the children. Arthur C. E. Schmidt is chairman of the entertainment committee. Herman C. Hintzpeter, official greeter of the German club, will be master of ceremonies, and Capt. George H. Weideling will head the reception committee.

One hundred Little Sisters and their Big Sisters will attend the annual Christmas party of the Service Council for Girls, next Thursday at the council rooms, 203 North Wabash avenue. The afternoon will be devoted to games, and at dinner Mrs. Burnett D. Warner will throw a snowball package to each young guest.

Alpha Chi sorority is contributing individual Christmas trees to decorate the table, and members will give a program. Mrs. Harry Hayes will read the Christmas story, Miss Mildred Patten will play the violin, and Christmas carols will be sung to the accompaniment of Miss Mary Ellen Groshans, pianist.

The climax of the evening will come with the distribution of presents selected for each girl by her own Big Sister. Members of the council are planning the party under the direction of Mrs. Albert Held, chairman of the Big Sister committee, and of Mrs. L. D. Underwood.

Those patients at the Cook County hospital who are being helped to health and independence through the efforts of the occupational therapy committee of the Cook County School of Nursing will be guests at a Christmas party Wednesday afternoon.

The Chicago Musical Arts club is sending Miss Margie Mayer, contralto, to sing, and Miss Bess Boynton, dramatic artist and co-author of the radio production, "There Was a Woman," will read humorous selections and will tell a Christmas story. There will be community singing, led by Mrs. Glenn H. Warren, and young Jimmy Warren will sing and dance. Mrs. F. Jefferson Redfield is in charge of the program. The committee is headed by Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher.

The Chicago Musical Arts club's own Christmas program will be given at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the clubrooms of the Alliance Française, 416 South Michigan avenue.

A number of MacDowell compositions will be presented by Florence Tennyson, soprano; Ruth Radkey, pianist and member of the club; Mark Garner, tenor member, and Rocco Germano, 15 year old violinist, whose musical studies in Chicago are being financed by business men of Mishawauka, Ind., his home city. Mrs. Samuel V. Robuck is president of the club.

One of the largest Christmas celebrations will be the annual party given Wednesday evening by the National circle, Daughters of Isabella, for the 2,000 patients at the Illinois State hospital at Dunning. A vaudeville show will be presented, and the boys' choir of Our Lady of the Angels church will sing carols. Bags of candy, fruit and cookies, and packages of cigarets will be distributed to the patients.

Fifty orphan children will be guests of the Woman's Progressive Club of Chicago at its annual Christmas party Tuesday afternoon. Luncheon at 12:30 o'clock will precede the party. Mrs. Harvey Martling is chairman of the event.

The old English custom of lighting the Yule log will be followed when some 300 members of the Central Eleanor club hold their annual Christmas party Tuesday evening at the club headquarters, 16 North Wabash avenue.

Miss Grace A. Coulter, president of the Eleanor association which sponsors the club, will tell how the custom originated, and each guest will break off a bit of green from the Yule log, and will make a wish. The nine little girls who are provided with homes through the Eleanor club will give a Christmas program. Every one at the party will bring a gift for some child at the Northwestern university settlement.

Miami Opens Surf Club for 1938 Season

By Clarissa Greene.

MIAMI, FLA. The informal opening today of the ultrasmart Surf club on the ocean front in Miami Beach is typical of the hospitality with which southern Florida is preparing to greet returning visitors from many cities and many quarters of the globe.

The club, which counts many Chicagoans among its members, has been repainted, redecorated, and in many respects refurnished since it closed its doors in the early summer.

A new club publication, the Surf Club Stroller, in royal blue, coral, and white, inaugurates a weekly paper to portray the various activities of the club and to disseminate more intimate news of the activities of its members and their guests during the season, bringing them into closer relationship and furthering the club spirit.

The orchestra which will furnish the music this season at the Surf club was selected from a group of 30 candidates. Muted music will be furnished during the luncheon hour in the patio restaurant and for dancing later.

Greater Miami is duplicating the northward trend of Chicago. Here the government cut, at the south end of the island on which Miami Beach nestles, as a parallel to the Chicago river, leaves but one direction in which the playground city can grow.

Collins avenue, paralleling the ocean front, has been transformed into a four lane artery to the northern city limits of Miami Beach, there to join the curving trafic way through the town of Surfside and enter the wide boulevard to Haulover, Sunny Isles, and Golden Beach.

Anticipating this new trend, many Chicagoans have purchased or built homes along the north shore. Robert Ilg and Miss Kathryn Hancock are purchasers of homes or home sites in Sunny Isles. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Bagley of Chicago and Grand Beach, Mich., purchased a residence, which will be their permanent home, on Sunset Island No. 1, in Biscayne bay, with patio, loggia, sun deck, and upper balcony contributing to the outdoor life of the tropics.

Thomas McKernan of Chicago purchased a home on North Bay road designed in the modified Monterey type, with an upper balcony overlooking Biscayne bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Thorne Donnelley, with Mrs. Brown Wentworth and the Ralph Ishams as guests, arrived at the Miami yacht basin last Sunday afternoon in the Donnelleys' new yacht Mako.

Mrs. Charles Lyon Krum and her son Howard and his family have opened their home at Miami Beach and their cabana at the Bath club. Mrs. Krum has taken up her duties on the faculty in the voice department of the University of Miami.

On Thursday night, when the singing men of the steppes, the Don Cossack Male chorus, were presented by the university, Mrs. Krum was among the hostesses sponsoring the event. The entire house was reported sold out four days in advance.

Mrs. J. T. Fitzgibbons of Highland Park has opened her Palm Island home, and was a hostess last Sunday for the Spanish fiesta sponsored by Miami's Sociedad Español at Miami Springs.

The Joseph Vails, the A. J. Biglers, and the David J. Malloys have all opened their cabanas at the Bath club. Mr. Malloy returned to Chicago after a few days spent in opening their Miami Beach home.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Brown of Lake Geneva will open their new home in the little town of Surfside in January.

George F. Getz of Chicago has arrived on his yacht Virago and is at the Flamingo docks between cruises. Mr. Getz entertains many prominent political lights during his seasons here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Russ Dashiell are aboard their yacht Carolyn at the Nautilus docks for the winter. Mr. and Mrs. Peter T. Parks of Chicago have as their guest at their Miami Beach residence Mrs. Caroline Griffith, also of Chicago.

Dr. Williams Harvey and his daughters, the Misses Anne and Alice, of Chicago, guests at the Tower hotel, on the ocean front, were recent dinner guests of George Ade.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hughes have returned from spending the summer in Chicago and have opened their home on Greenway drive in Coral Gables.

Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt Brown have opened their home in Coral Gables following a summer spent with their daughter, Mrs. Theodore Sauvinett Gary, in Chicago.

PLANS SPRING WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Ziegler of Evanston have announced the engagement of their daughter, Lorraine, to Carl A. Priess Jr., son of Carl A. Priess of Spokane, Wash. The wedding will take place next spring. Mr. Priess and his bride will live in Seattle, Wash.

Sailing on the Queen Mary Wednesday to spend Christmas in the Scandinavian countries were Mr. and Mrs. Gunnar Johnson, Mrs. Edith Johnson, Hanne J. F. Larsen, Eric Ernquist, Algot Johnson, Mrs. J. Jensen Bjerregaard, Alfred Rasmussen, Hans Nielsen, Hans C. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. John Helgland, John Martensen, and Peter Anderson. Wilfred S. Harling of Chicago will escort the group abroad.

Bound for Central European countries, a large group, in charge of Henry Weber, went over on the Queen Mary, while forty Irish-born Chicagoans sailed on the Scythia for their native land.

Many midwesterners were on the Washington when it set sail last Tuesday. Two days later a party of eighty, among them Mr. and Mrs. Ettore Bartolomei of Chicago, left on the Conte di Savoia for holidays with relatives in Italy.

E. S. McClure and E. R. Ehresman took the Savoia for a tour of Italy, Austria, Hungary, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, France, and England. Fellow passengers were Galliano Masini, who has just completed an engagement with the Chicago Civic opera, and Mrs. Masini; Miss L. Bacon and F. Schloemer, bound for Egypt, where they will do research work; Mr. and Mrs. Alessandro Vescovo, Mr. and Mrs. Henrico Arduini, Guiri Rubino, Pasquale Perratta, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stern.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Fuller, who intend to devote two months to travel abroad, embarked on the Queen Mary Wednesday. Also aboard were Mrs. Maria Zerk and Miss Tosca Zerk, who will be in Vienna for Christmas; Bertrand H. Jones, Mrs. Cedric H. Smith, E. H. Pantling, N. R. Frahair, H. H. Aidvan, and Chester F. Ericson, all of Chicago, and George J. Brown of Milwaukee.

Leaving on the Washington were Benjamin Green-Field, C. R. Hutchings, Miss Jean Kilgour, Dr. and Mrs. Max May, Mrs. Olga M. Shanat, Charles F. Scholl, and Isaac Herskovic, all of Chicago; A. A. Meyer of Maywood, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Callahan of Rennselaer, Ind., and Miss Madeline Horn of Bever Dam, Wis., speed skating champion of the United States and Canada, going over to take part in the meet at Oslo. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Petersen and their son, Jorgen, of Milwaukee, left Tuesday on the Scanyork to spend Christmas in Copenhagen.

Mrs. Celia Reuter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Marshall and their sons, John and Thomas; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Wicks, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Levin will celebrate Christmas aboard the Pennsylvania, which left San Francisco yesterday to cruise to New York by way of Panama.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Clyde White, Mrs. Charlotte P. Purcell, Henry L. O'Keefe, Mrs. Bernice T. Zimmerman, and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Goldstine sailed from Europe yesterday on the Normandie to reach Chicago in time for the holidays.

"Christmas villages" are going to sea these days. Made of Lebkuchen [gingerbread] and frosted with colored icing, the miniatures are a part of the decorations on the holiday sailings of the Hamburg American Line-North German Lloyd. They are complete with churches, farmhouses, windmills, stables, and bridges. Tiny lamps, artificial snow, tinkling bells, sprigs of natural evergreen, and replicas of frozen ponds are used to embellish the scene.

"Christmas in Five Countries" is to be Dudley Crafts Watson's topic in a talk at the Old Heidelberg inn Thursday afternoon.

A new travel feature was started on the radio last Sunday. Malcolm LaPrade, known as "the man from Cook's," is giving the talks, and Lew White is providing incidental organ music. The program is heard over WMAQ at 1:15 each Sunday.

Havana, Port au Prince, Haiti; Trujillo, Dominican republic; San Juan, Porto Rico, and four other West Indian ports will be visited on a cruise aboard the Queen of Bermuda this winter. The trip will begin Jan. 15.

Ski addicts in Rainier National park this winter are using a new ski tow, consisting of an endless rope mounted on poles and operated by motor. All they have to do is grab the rope and hold on until they reach the top of the hill.

Nearly 700 Chicagoans gathered at the Lake Shore Athletic club Tuesday evening for a showing of colored movies entitled "Circumnavigating South America." Guy A. Bingham presented the films under Raymond-Whitcomb sponsorship.

"Nowadays the pleasant task of leaving winter behind us is only a matter of from 24 to 36 hours out of New York," said Mr. Bingham in the course of his lecture. "Two-thirds of the trans-Atlantic liners—including some of the biggest and fastest ships afloat—are cruising southward.

"We Americans are insisting on really living instead of merely existing. We can't take it with us, they tell us. Before the depression we had a lot of money that we no longer have—and we could have used in cruising with much greater benefit to ourselves. In these days we are taking advantage of what we have. We are going more places, seeing more things, and living more fully than we ever did before."

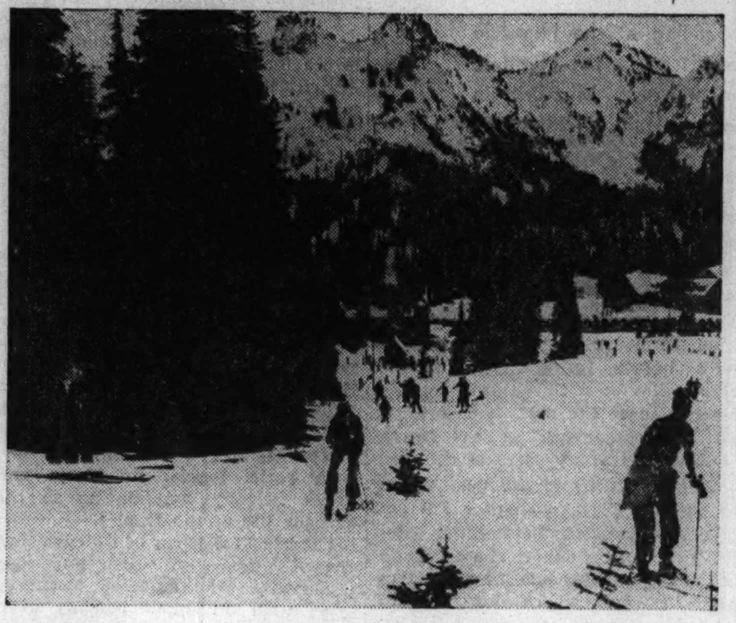
Starting yesterday and continuing until March 26, a series of week-end winter sports parties is being held by the Pere Marquette railroad, the Whitcomb hotel at St. Joseph, Mich., and the Wigwam hotel on Paw Paw lake. The parties will leave Chicago at 5 p. m. each Saturday.

Hailed as the most beautiful train in the world, the new Chicago and North Western-Union Pacific streamliner, City of Los Angeles, made its début here Wednesday. Nearly 18,000 persons inspected it at the North Western station. There they saw fourteen modern cars, along with the three cars housing the 5,400 horsepower Diesel-electric locomotive.

Today the 1,266 foot train will leave New York on its inaugural run—a trip to Sun Valley, the winter sports center in the Sawtooth mountains of Idaho. It will arrive in Chicago at 6:30 a. m. tomorrow and leave for the west two hours later. It will go into regular service Dec. 27, with the first run from Los Angeles to Chicago. Its first westbound regular run from Chicago will be on Dec. 29.



Winter sports at Paradise inn, Rainier National park, with peaks of the Tatoosh range in the background.

Next month half the countries of Europe will be occupied with winter sports. The program calls for cycle ski races, torchlight ski contests, and racing on skis behind high-powered automobiles. In Sweden, novel races include skate sailing on the ice. Ice yachting in the same country often attains the speed of 110 miles an hour. Horse races are held every month in Europe, but in January Switzerland has one on the ice of Lake St. Moritz. Norway will put on one of the big motor events of the year: the auto race to Monte Carlo. Vienna is to have a folk costume festival and London a folk dance festival, while Scotland will hold its quaint Viking pageant at Lerwick. Everywhere, New Year's day and Twelfth Night will see the observance of age-old customs.

Christmas travel is opening up earlier and in heavier volume this year, says W. G. Brown, passenger trafic manager of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Both long and short haul business is showing an increase.

The Dixieland, Florida flyer, will make its 1938 inaugural run from Chicago on Jan. 2. This was announced last week by E. H. Batchelder, general passenger agent of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad.

Judging by advance reservations, California travel this winter will be the heaviest in years, says John O. Pollock, manager of the Chicago and North Western-Union Pacific department of tours. Bookings for the holidays greatly exceed those of a year ago.

Count Phillippe de Pret.

Count Phillipe de Pret of Belgium went into action last week as the new ski instructor at the Broadmoor hotel in Colorado Springs. A trainload of winter sports fans will leave for the Pike's Peak playground Dec. 26 over the Denver Zephyr, and another group will start Dec. 26 on the Rocky Mountain Limited.

The first gateway has been started at the Italian end of the St. Louis bridge near Grimaldi.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

Anyway, They All Observe the Holiday

By Frederic Babcock.

This is a fifteen minute Christmas tour around the world. Those embarking upon it will find, if they stay aboard, that nearly all the Christian nations, along with a few that pay no homage to the Nazarene, will unite next Saturday — even though in widely divergent fashions—in observing the anniversary of one of the few really important birthdays in history.

The tourists will discover that some of these nations are about to remember Christ's vital teaching of attainment through spiritual rather than physical force, and that others have long since forgotten it.

There won't be much rejoicing in Spain this year. The people there are too busy clawing at one another's throats.

In Russia, where Santa was officially declared dead when the soviets came into power, he has miraculously been brought back to life. But he is traveling incognito. In that country he is known as "Grandfather Frost." That's because religious observance is frowned upon there. He will appear in bourgeois garb—fur trimmed coat, high boots, large mustache, and overflowing beard.

In Germany the authorities last year forbade the use of Christmas trees at the solstice festivals, and in the state of Oldenburg the governor decreed that Christian symbols and pictures should not be used in the schoolrooms. Otherwise, the celebration will go on about as usual.

In some parts of Sicily blind men still go about during the days of the Christmas novena singing before the doors of houses simple couplets on the birth of Jesus and accompanying themselves on the violin or triangle. Before little altars with figures representing the Christ-child, Mary, and Joseph, groups of strolling singers and bagpipe players sing the carols that have been passed on from generation to generation.

The Sicilians still perform a play first given in Castrogiovanni on Christmas day in 1848. In the original production one act depicted the stable in Bethlehem. Before the crib came singing hunters, a gardener, a miller, and a soup paste maker, each bearing gifts for the new-born child. Gypsies brought swaddling clothes, and finally came angels and shepherds singing in alternate choruses. Sometimes in the course of the performance of this pastoral the angels and the devils in the cast started mussing each other up. The battle ended, of course, in the defeat of the devils, who fled emitting flames of resin. This part of the show has been toned down in recent years.

In Italy, where the celebration two years ago was tempered by the tragedy of war with Ethiopia, peace is smiling once more [for the time being, at least], and the pomp and pageantry are in full swing.

In Rome, the Presepio, founded by St. Francis, is adopted by church and home as the poetic atmosphere for the occasion. The Franciscan churches hold midnight masses, and the memory of the saint is recalled by the tolling of bells, which chime and echo in a symphonic chorus. Flames from millions of flickering candles light misty domes and vaulted ceilings. The rich frescoes are enlivened below by altars framed by the valets of the commune in medieval costumes. At Santa Maria Maggiore the relic of the holy cradle is carried in procession. Outdoors, the midnight scene is etched by the floodlighting of public buildings, fountains, and squares, and the streets are alive with celebrants.

In workaday Italy it is the day of universal handouts. Buon Natale, signore [Merry Christmas, sir] calls for a reply in cash. Clinking millions of small coins change hands. Janitors, charwomen, garbage men, window washers, and grocer's, milkman's, baker's, and butcher's boys are among the chief beneficiaries.

In England, the "twelve days of Christmas" is a phrase that has lost much of its significance in this hurrying age. Only in a few remote villages is the festival now prolonged until Epiphany, or Twelfth Night. Here and there, however, the mummers still make the rounds.

In the fishing villages of West Cornwall the streets are nightly invaded by bands of young people attired in grotesque costumes. The boys are dressed as girls and the girls as boys. Disguise always has been an essential feature of the makeup, and this accounts for the name, "guise dancing."

Until recent times it was customary for every house to stand open to the guise dancers, who were assured a warm welcome and plenty of refreshments. Even today the spirit of carnival prevails. If the weather is favorable, the young people group themselves at the street corners and put on an impromptu dance to the accompaniment of drums, mouth organs, and concertinas.

In the villages of Longparish and Overton, in Hampshire, the mummers are attired mainly in fluttering strips of wallpaper, giving these sober countrymen something of the wild extravagance of native dancers of the jungle. Their performance is far removed from the Charles Dickens conception of Christmas.

In Poland, Christmas lasts until Feb. 2. A deeply religious people, the Poles prepare for it by fasting and follow it with feasting. The wilia, or feast, is not served until the first star appears in the sky. In the homes of both the rich and the poor the tablecloth is placed over a layer of fragrant hay, in commemoration of the manger. Before any food is touched, the oplatki, or blessed wafers, paper-thin and imprinted with the figure of the infant Savior, are broken, while the persons about the table exchange good wishes. The banquet is an almost endless succession of varied and complicated dishes. After the wine, wishes are made in silence, and then hands are thrust into the blades of hay under the cloth. A long blade means that the wish will come true; a short one denotes denial.

In France it is a day of gifts for children only. On the night before the visit of the French Santa, "Père Noël," the youngsters put their shoes near the fireplace, there to be filled before morning. In private homes Christmas trees are rare, but in the Elysée palace, official home of the president, one is set up for orphans and poor children.

The children of Hungary believe their presents come from the Christ-child, who has the angels bring them. The holiday starts early in December, when St. Nicholas pays his calls, leaving boxes of candy decorated with little jumping devils. After his visit the youngsters are on their best behavior. They start writing letters to the angels, telling of the gifts they would like, and they know that the angels are everywhere, observing which boys and girls are good and which are bad. Sometimes they find bits of tinsel on the floor. This, they are certain, is angel's hair, proving that the heavenly spies have been on the job.

In Belgium the children already have put aside their toys. The gifts arrived on Dec. 6, St. Nicholas day. Now the youths are busy preparing a special letter to their parents. On New Year's morning they must read this composition aloud. In it they wish their father and mother a happy new year and promise to be better for the next twelve months.

In Denmark no one is left without a remembrance. Even the animals are in line for gifts. The cattle are fed especially well, as they were in pagan times; the cat gets a lavish share of porridge and warm milk, the chained dog at the entrance to the farmhouse is given a hot supper and a fine packing of straw to keep him warm, and the birds are awarded a sheaf of food.

In Germany Santa Claus, advance messenger of the king of kings, goes about the country several weeks before Christmas, rewarding the good and punishing the bad. He has various names; in the larger cities he is the "Christmas Man," and in the rural parts of western and southern Germany he is Saint Nikolaus. Sometimes he has with him his servant, who whips bad children while the saint is giving fruit and pastry to the good.

In some regions of China a holiday falling at Christmas time has been celebrated for 400 years as a day of friendliness. This year most of the Chinese will be too busy with the Japanese invaders to give much thought to friendly feelings.

In the Philippines the natives greet travelers with Ma-ayon-Pascua, or Merry Christmas. If the visitor happens to enter a village mission house for the Christmas services he's apt to find a barefooted organist at the melodeon, and chickens, dogs, and pigs drifting in and out through the open doors.

In the far north of Sweden there is no Santa for the nomad Lapps, even though that is supposed to be one of the first stops on his annual journey. To them the reindeer is only a beast of burden and a source of food. On Saturday these reindeer will munch extra portions of hay while their owners sit down to a meal including marrow of boiled reindeer bones, rolled in grated reindeer oil.

And in the Holy Land, where it all began nearly twenty centuries ago, a multitude of worshipers reverently will hail another Christmas. There the Church of Nativity, built over Christ's traditional birthplace, has remained unchanged for more than 1,500 years. There pilgrims gather from all over the world to intone "Glory to the New-born King."

Blossoms and Fireworks for This Christmas

KINGSTON, Jamaica, B. W. I.—Snowflakes and mistletoe in the north; flowers and fireworks in Jamaica! But it's still Christmas—just different places, different celebrations.

This Caribbean isle puts on a dress of exotic blooms for the festival season. Many of them have names strange to dwellers in northern climes. There are the Christmas vine, clusters of small white flowers resembling gypsophila; Christmas feefee, a milky white, pealike bloom, hooded with purple shading into crimson; yellow and white Christmas "pops"; huge morning glories of midnight blue, and yellow and scarlet poinsettias.

Another variety might be popular for New Year's eve parties, "Johnny-go-to-bed-too-soon." But Johnny probably won't if he's celebrating in Jamaica.

It's Never Night in This Village in Midsummer

By Mason Warner.

KUOPIO, Finland. — The twenty hour journey from Savonlinna to Kuopio affords the inquisitive traveler opportunities to investigate various systems of water transportation on lakes, rivers, and canals.

Leaving Savonlinna harbor about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, our small wood burning steamboat proceeded through a narrow sound with strong currents flowing from one lake into another, then into the Oravi canal. From there the route was exceedingly narrow and winding at times, alternating with broad expanses of water as we crossed the lakes. We steamed through channels, straits, sounds, bays, and lakes. Sometimes the water was broad and deep; again we followed a narrow, shallow course, dotted with small islands, and with dangerous spots marked with spar buoys.

Not a single mile of the cruise was uninteresting. Even the slow progress through canal locks was kept from becoming tedious by the activities of the man or boy who operated the windlass to open and close the water gates. Within a distance of less than two miles we went through two locks, one raising the boat five feet to the water level above, and the other raising it eight feet. Midway between these two was a drawbridge. The pivot pier in the center of the bridge was placed at the water's edge, so that half the bridge was over land, making it easy to swing open to allow the passing of a boat. A small boy, who evidently welcomed the task, merely pushed the end projecting over the shore around parallel to the stream's bank.

The steamer stopped at the village of Heinavesi, on the shore of Kermajarvi lake, for what, from force of habit, was called "the night." But, as Heinavesi is at 62 degrees 30 minutes north latitude—more than 1,200 miles north of Chicago—and the season was midsummer, there was not enough darkness to deserve the appellation.

Twenty of the thirty passengers on the boat were women, traveling in pairs or in parties of three or four. The partitions between staterooms were so thin that they did not interfere with the intrusion of human voices from adjoining compartments. The Finnish language is rhythmical and pleasing, and the voices of Finnish women are sweet and low. But at midnight, and at 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 o'clock in the morning, conversation still drifted into my room, not only from the two rooms next to mine, but from those beyond.

It was a bit trying, particularly to one who had spent the forenoon of the previous day climbing the stairs of the tall towers of St. Olaf's castle at Savonlinna. Those women must have had a lot to tell one another and I am still wondering how any of them heard anything that was said.

From Heinavesi the steamer made its way north across a lake, through a canal, across another lake, and through another canal into the large lake of Kallavesi, with Puijo hill and the town of Kuopio on the opposite shore.

In the days of Swedish rule Kuopio, founded in 1782 by Gustavus III., was the capital of the province of Kuopio as well as the intellectual and economic center of the surrounding country. With only 20,000 population the town is proud of the noted men who lived there, and of its old churches, educational institutions, monuments, fine administration buildings, and public parks. A statue of J. V. Snellman, a native son who did much to kindle the spark and fan the flames of national independence in Finland, is one of the city's pride inspiring possessions. Another is the granite monument, "Broken Bonds" by the sculptor Eemil Halonen, raised over the graves of those who fell fighting in the war for the liberation of the country in 1918.

hill, which rises two miles from the market square of Kuopio. The hill is 750 feet high and is popular in the season of winter sports on account of its good bobsled run. At the top is a stone view tower and the visitor must climb 168 steps to reach the lookout gallery. The climb is well rewarded. The foreground of the panorama consists of fields of tall wheat bowing to the breeze, tidy farm houses with patches of potatoes and vegetable and flower gardens, and cows grazing in pasture. In the pastures, one noted in passing, grew daisies instead of dandelions.

The cleared farmlands are a small part of the landscape. Forests of pine and birch cover greater areas than those reclaimed for agricultural use. And there are wooded hills and dales, rivers and lakes to be seen in every direction. The larger lakes are flecked with green islands. There is water, water everywhere, and every drop is fit to drink.

Speaking of drinking water [we were, were we not?] recalls the fact that Finland was one of the pioneers in the movement to control the liquor trafic by legal means. The first prohibition law was passed in 1800. The sale of vodka, whisky, brandy, and the like was made unlawful, but their manufacture was not. The result was that a still was established in almost every peasant's home. Liquor drinking actually increased, and the law was repealed.

Another prohibition bill was passed in 1919. Finland had the same experience with law-flouting distillers, smugglers, bootleggers, and gangsters that the United States passed through. This law was repealed in 1932.

Now the manufacture and sale of liquor appears to be successfully controled by the government. Beer can be bought with a meal at any hour before noon. The smallest sandwich counts as a meal, but it is said even this liberal definition does not preclude all overeating. After 12 o'clock licensed hotels and restaurants serve wines and liquors with food orders. There are no saloons or bars for the exclusive retail sale of beverages that intoxicate.

The "bottle trade" is handled by government stores, and there is no restriction on the quantity sold to an individual customer. Man or woman can buy one or a dozen bottles. Tourists require no permits.

The government liquor stores close at 1 p. m. on Saturday. Long lines of buyers begin forming at noon, many of the women carrying capacious shopping bags and some of the men coming prepared with small suitcases. The trade is handled with speed and satisfaction.

It was a bit puzzling to detect how some of the sturdy millhands and factory workers of Kuopio could distribute four or five bottles of liquor in the pockets of their ordinary working clothes and not disclose any attention attracting bulges. Propably this expert disposal is the result of practice in prohibition days.

A queer twist in the present law is that a great share of the government's profits on its liquor trade must be devoted to the promotion of the cause of temperance.

Freshwater Bass Fishing at Orlando

Orlando, Fla.—A different part of Florida—the orange land spreading across the state's midsection—will unfold its beauty this year before more visitors than during any previous winter.

Adding to such natural attractions as hunting and freshwater bass fishing, this playground has arranged a sports and social program which will keep guests active till next April.

Topping the sports list will be the Florida open tennis tournament.

Winter Is One Long Carnival for Austrians

By Virginia Creed.

From the moment when the first snow sifts down over Austria the people, young and old, give themselves over to the matter of making one long carnival of their winter. Thousands of visitors, including some 3,000 Americans, join in.

The mountains that cut the country off from the outer world provide the endless slopes for the ski maniacs and hold off biting northern winds from the valleys. The mountains have also imprisoned the mirrorlike lakes and filled the rivers that make skating a national pastime.

In western and central Austria, where the mountains are highest and the snow comes earliest and lasts longest, the accent is definitly on skiing, although in the more international resorts ice sports, ski joring, and sledge racing are also favored. At St. Anton the season begins at Christmas and goes on well into March. Its most important ski event this winter is the Khandahar downhill race, scheduled for March 19 and 20.

Innsbruck, Tyrol's gothic capital, dominates the resorts of the Inn valley. Among its major events is the downhill race, to take place over the perilous Glungezer run on Feb. 6. At nearby Igls, in addition to skiing events, emphasis is placed on bobsled runs, while Seefeld offers not only the Anton Seelos medal race, many sporting contests and social events, but the riotous Dutch ice carnival.

Over the line in Salzburg province, Saalbach, patronized by sporting Americans, lives an informal life on slope and in hut, but Badgastein waxes exotic with "panther runs" and night ski races with torches, while Hofgastein specializes in children's ski events. Zell am See has several international jumping contests booked for this season.

Vienna, besides being the scene of one of the most lavish of the continental carnivals, is the capital of the art of figure skating. There, on the largest artificial ice rink in the world, a large portion of the populace waltzes to the strains of Strauss. There, in January, Austria's skating artists will compete for the championship in dancing on skates.

The Viennese also have skiing well within their city limits. They take to the woods on week-ends, and sometimes go to Semmering to sample central Europe's playground. Sleighrides under the stars are a specialty. They usually terminate in some wine tavern in the suburbs, where the old songs are lugubriously sung and the new wine is copiously consumed.

Skiing in the Austrian Tyrol.

Wausau to Have Longest Ski Tow

Wausau, Wis., Dec. 18.—The longest ski tow in the United States will soon be ferrying skiers to the top of Rib mountain, near here.

C. L. Harrington, superintendent of state parks and forests for the Wisconsin conservation department, says this will be the first ski tow in the midwest and will be the longest and most modern in the country, not overlooking the equipment at Sun Valley, Idaho. It will be more than 3,000 feet long.

Construction of the tow is part of the extensive development of Rib Mountain state park for winter sports, and is a joint effort of the state conservation department, the national park service, the Wausau chamber of commerce, and other local groups. It permits a person to be carried, without removing his skiis, from the lower levels to the top of the mountain.

TIPS TO TOURISTS

What's your travel problem? Address queries regarding where to go, how to get there, costs, and accommodations to the Travelers' Guide, Chicago Tribune, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Please tell me something about the aquariums at Marineland, Fla. D. R.

They will be opened in February at a cost of $500,000, contributed by Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney and his associates. The aquaria are to be situated on the new Ocean Shore boulevard at a point 18 miles south of St. Augustine. Seals, porpoises, sharks, rays, giant turtles, coral fish, and many other specimens of marine life are being assembled for the display. In many places of that kind each species is found in a separate tank, but at Marineland all will be placed together, so that the struggle for existence will continue in much the same manner as it does in the ocean.

When does Sun Valley in Idaho open its winter season? E. K.

Dec. 21.

Yes. The Empress of Britain will spend five days there.

Christmas Carols at Arkansas Spa

Hot Springs, Ark., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Observance of the Christmas season in Uncle Sam's century old spa will again center around the community caroling event sponsored jointly by the national park service and the chamber of commerce.

On Christmas eve hundreds of white robed singers, carrying lighted candles, will march from Hot Springs mountain to a platform built below a bluff overlooking the heart of the city. On the bluff, behind the massed choristers, three biblical tableaux will be staged.

Expert Tells How to Plan Your Cruise

Good cruises don't "just grow," but, like good food and good parties, owe a large share of their success to preliminary thought and planning.

That is the opinion of A. K. Dawson, who, after more than a score of years both as a cruise taker and a cruise director, speaks with authority. In the following ten suggestions he gives the distaff side more than an even break, because experts have observed that 60 per cent of all cruise passengers are women:

Cost—The cost of all West Indies cruises is about the same: Around $11 to $15 a day for minimum rate cabins and nearly double that for the best room on the ship.

How Much to Pay—Pay according to the type of hotel accommodations you would get if you were traveling on land. And don't charge your cruise clothes entirely to your cruise budget, for if you plan them wisely you can use them next summer for sports and outdoor life at home.

How to Budget a Cruise—Consult an expert travel service or agency, just as you would consult an architect in building a house, for there are many incidentals, such as tipping and shore excursions, which you may forget to include in your calculations.

How to Choose Your Ship—Don't rely entirely on the advice of friends. Remember that every one gets sentimental about the ships he has sailed on, and what your friends consider a crackerjack vessel may prove a fizzle to you. An expert travel service or agency, on the other hand, knows all the ships and can advise the ones most suited to your tastes.

Can You Save by Buying Tickets in New York?—No. Not a penny. Steamship tickets are standard commodities with standard prices. They cost exactly the same no matter where you buy them—and the success of your local travel service or agency depends on its ability to please you and keep you as a repeat customer.

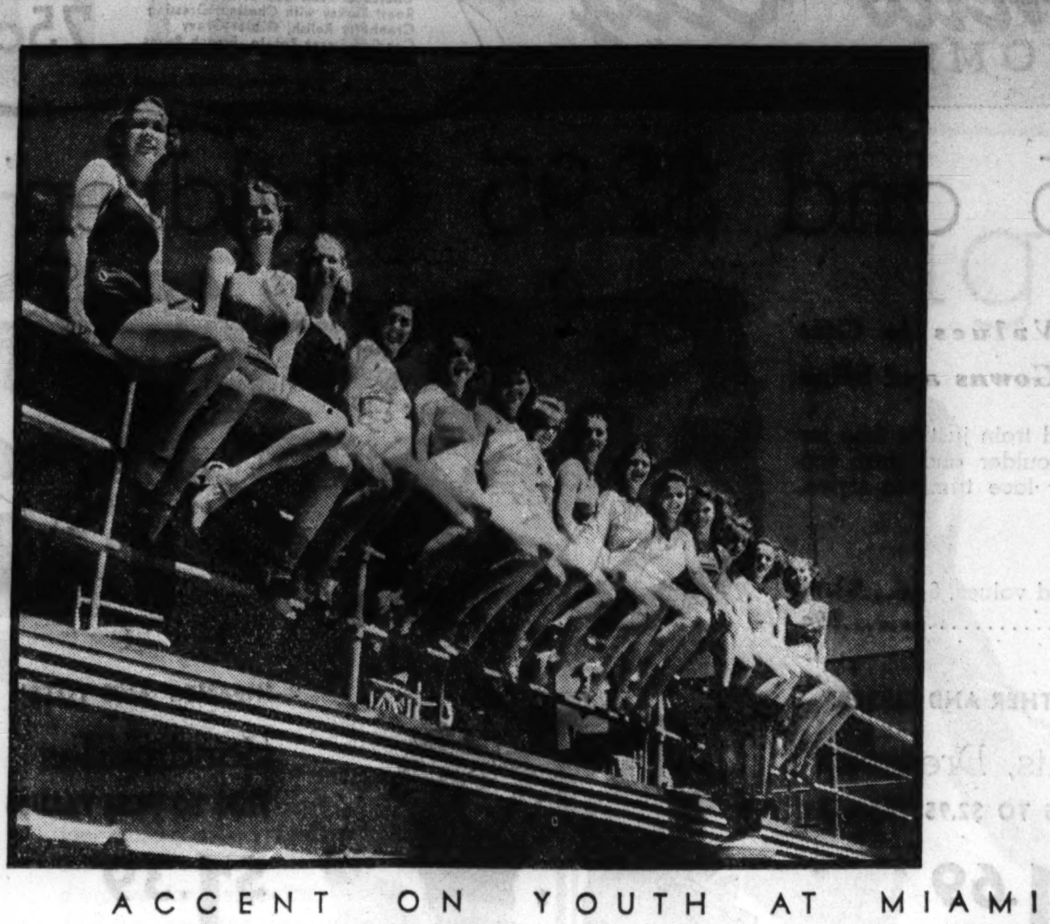
How Much Does a Travel Agent Charge?—Nothing on cruise bookings. He receives a commission from the steamship line, in return providing you with expert advice for no fee whatsoever.

Which Is Safer, a Big Ship or a Small One?—The size has no bearing on either safety or comfort. When seas are calm—and the Caribbean usually is—all ships are steady. When she blows, they all roll, and don't let any one tell you differently.

How Important Is Your Cabin?—Since you probably will spend a minimum amount of time in it, it is of secondary importance. Better investigate instead the swimming pool, lounges, decks, and ballrooms of the ships you consider, since in these places you will spend most of your leisure.

When to Go—Almost any winter cruise ship will be pleasantly filled; otherwise, the steamship company could not afford to run it. Master that desire to go when "every one else is going," for on the less crowded sailings you will find less crowding in the West Indies resorts you visit and will have more opportunity for relaxation.

Baggage—Trunks if you must, but large bags will easily hold the wardrobe for a West Indies cruise. Take only sports and evening clothes, build your wardrobe around one or two basic colors, and wherever you go in the West Indies you'll be all set for a real vacation.



ACCENT ON YOUTH AT MIAMI

Tropical Park to Open Tomorrow

Miami, Fla., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The gates of Tropical park, scene of some of winter's richest horse racing purses, will swing open Monday. Tropical and Hialeah tracks will continue their programs until April 9, posting such stakes as the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup race and the $20,000 Flamingo stakes.

New Year's day will find Miami's new stadium the scene of the Orange bowl intersectional football game between Michigan State and Auburn, an Alabama team which defeated Georgia Tech and other powerful southern elevens.

On Christmas day the Orange bowl will be the scene of a north-south high school clash between Miami and Oak Park, Ill. Oak Park, suburban champion of the Chicago area, was selected from a field of ninty-one candidates.

St. Augustine Plans Four Golf Tourneys

St. Augustine, Fla.—Golf once more will hold the competitive spotlight at the St. Augustine links this winter, with four of the major tournaments of the Florida circuit scheduled. Included are the eleventh annual national championship of club champions, for the Walter J. Travis Memorial trophy, Feb. 14 to 19; the fourth annual national amateur-professional best ball match play championship, March 16 to 20, and the Florida east coast women's championship, for the Mrs. William R. Kenan Jr. trophy, March 1 to 5.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

EVERY INCH A QUEEN.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—To the Travel Editor: Referring to the article by Jack O. Felt, relative to winter cruises, in the Travel section last Sunday:

In reading the article, especially that paragraph relative to top bracket ocean giantesses, we notice the Empress of Britain classed as an "intermediate" ship, or "middle" class. In our opinion, this is erroneous, as the liner is comparatively new, having entered service in June, 1931; is 759 feet long and 97 feet 5 inches wide, and many apartments average 27 feet in length. In fact, our slogan, "More space per cabin class passenger," is still applicable.

The Empress of Britain is decidedly not intermediate or middle class. It is ranked among the luxury liners of the Atlantic, and takes top grade in the present world cruise service.

K. A. COOK,
General Agent, Canadian Pacific Steamships.

THE SEASON'S GREETINGS.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—To the Travel Editor: Since my appeal was published in your columns nearly a year ago I have received scores of nice cards and letters from travelers. I have written to say "thank you" to many of them, but others signed only their initials, and so I couldn't answer them personally. I wish to let them know that I deeply appreciate their thoughtfulness. And permit me to add: For all your readers I wish a very merry Christmas, and health and lots of happiness in the new year and many more years of "The Voice of the Traveler." DORIS CONRADI.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—To the Travel Editor: I am the woman who wrote you on Oct. 20 that I was a shut-in most of the time and would answer all cards and letters sent me. I want to thank all those readers who did not give me their address for their lovely expressions. They have made my life brighter and happier. I know the grandest people in the world live in and around Chicago.

[MRS.] CAROLYN BAUTISTA.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—To the Travel Editor: A few weeks ago I wrote asking you to add Mrs. Elizabeth Logue of Meadville, Pa., to your list.

Now I want you to know how pleased and grateful she is for all the many greetings and letters she has received. She has received so many that she is in a continual state of excitement and new interest, looking forward to what each day will bring.

I can't express my gratitude to you and your readers for this kindness. It is a grand thing and I would like to help in some way. If there is anything I can do—along the line of sending greetings or letters to shut-ins—I shall be glad to do it.

Mrs. Logue is so happy she asks me to send you the name of a woman she has heard of who lives alone. This woman, Mrs. Peggy Mills of Cahone, Colo., came to this country fifteen years ago from Ireland. She lives in a log cabin somewhere in the wilderness, and makes her living by herding goats. I understand she is a most deserving and brave woman and will greatly appreciate hearing from travelers. [MRS.] HELEN M. PLOSILA.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

Stevens Point, Wis., Dec. 12.—To the Travel Editor: There's a group of us here at the River Pines sanatorium who'd like to travel, but can't, because we're shut-ins. All three of us have been here for more than a year, and would greatly appreciate mail from persons luckier than we are. Thank you, and merry Christmas!

FRANCES GALLAGHER.
ESTHER STACY.
MARY PANKRATZ.

St. Anne, Ill., Dec. 10.—To the Travel Editor: My sister, a shut-in, has a birthday Jan. 1, and I wonder if some of your kind readers wouldn't like to help me surprise her by sending her cards or other greetings, to reach her that day. I shall be deeply indebted to them. Her name and address: Miss Beulah Beaupre, Box 1, Route 3, St. Anne. R. B.

Elgin, Ill., Dec. 10.—To the Travel Editor: I have a shut-in brother, an elderly man who would be pleased to receive picture postcards, travel folders or booklets, or anything else to cheer him in his loneliness. His name and address: D. E. Smith, Route 2, East Court street, Flint, Mich. G. S.

FLORIDA? VACATION COSTS? HOW TO GET THE BEST FOR YOUR MONEY?
—Yes, Sir, We Have All the Answers!
Spending is economizing, if you know how to spend your money. Economizing on a winter vacation doesn't always mean stinting yourself on a cheap hotel room. Enjoy the best—and save expenses!
That's our proposition and already many people are taking advantage of it—making reservations in two of America's greatest resort hotels and booking themselves for THE MOST AMAZING VACATION EVER CONCEIVED, all for the one cost of accommodations.
Let us tell you about this revolutionary plan in a man-to-man interview or by personal correspondence. Our offices are handy—in New York and Chicago. Our vacation specialists, primed with facts and figures to help you anticipate holiday costs in Florida, will be glad to call on you, if you are in these metropolitan areas, in Boston, Philadelphia or Washington. Or they will answer your questions by letter. All they need is the "Go Ahead!" word from you. This service doesn't obligate you in any way, understand, and you will value the data they have to give you.
The playground? Miami and Miami Beach.
The hotels? Roney Plaza, America's finest oceanfront hotel, Miami Beach; Miami Biltmore, center of the wintertime world, Miami (Coral Gables).
The features of the plan? Too many to enumerate here. One special economy, however, may open your eyes to this guest policy, viz: free transportation to all the activities—races, theaters, night-clubs, jai alai, even the Florida keys' fishing grounds—in private aerocars (auto lounge cars). This alone saves you about one-third of your normal vacation expenses! We have the figures to prove it.
But there are many other extraordinary courtesies and privileges—such as guest membership, after approval by the membership committees, in three of America's finest sports clubs which would cost you thousands in initiation fees elsewhere. These clubs provide exceptional facilities for golf, fishing and surf bathing.
Plan your winter vacation sensibly . . . from first-hand information. Write, wire or telephone our northern offices: NEW YORK, 551 Fifth Ave., Room 712, phone MUrray Hill 2-0521; CHICAGO, 120 S. La Salle St., Room 1265, phone FRAnklin 4645.

Historic Crossroads of Civilization

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

IN THE CITY OF DAVID, called Bethlehem, in the land of Judea, approximately 1,940 years ago, Christ was born.

● As to the exact month and the exact day of the nativity the scriptures are silent. All Christendom, however, observes Dec. 25 as the birthday of the Son of God, a practice established centuries ago and based upon agreements among the early churches. Today, whether or not truly placed upon the calendar, Christmas is the holiest of holy days of Christians.

● Unlike the natal day, no uncertainty attaches to the birthplace of Christ. It was in a stable of an inn in Bethlehem that he was born. Bethlehem is definitly a city today, as it was more than nineteen centuries ago. It is in Palestine, the Holy Land, not far from Jerusalem and not far from the Dead sea. The natives call it Beit Lahm.

● Also in Palestine still are many of the places visited by Christ, who preached the kingdom of heaven as he wandered over the sun-scorched plains of Judea. There is Nazareth (en Nasrah), in which he grew to manhood; Jerusalem (El Kuds), wherein he was judged and condemned to crucifixion; the Sea of Galilee (Bahr Tiberias), upon the waters of which he walked; and the River Jordan (Nahr esh Sheriah), in which he was baptized by John.

● Palestine in the days of Christ and for centuries before and after was the crossroads of civilization. Through it ran the caravan routes that linked Asia with Africa, that connected the powerful nations of the north with ancient Egypt.

● Thrice holy because of its associations with the life of Christ, its cradling of the faith of the Jews, and its sanguinary defense over the centuries by the Moslems, Palestine has been a tragic land. Virtually every people in that part of the world at one time or another has stormed through that land with fire and sword or has established within its borders campfires, courts, and captains.

● The pictorial map above tells the story of western Asia for more than four thousand years, with particular emphasis on Palestine and adjacent lands, the goal of conquests and the center of racial movements. Western Asia and Egypt were lands of great antiquity at the beginning of the story as told by the map. They were the actual cradles of civilization, wherein definite cultures had been growing for hundreds of years even before the dawn of history.

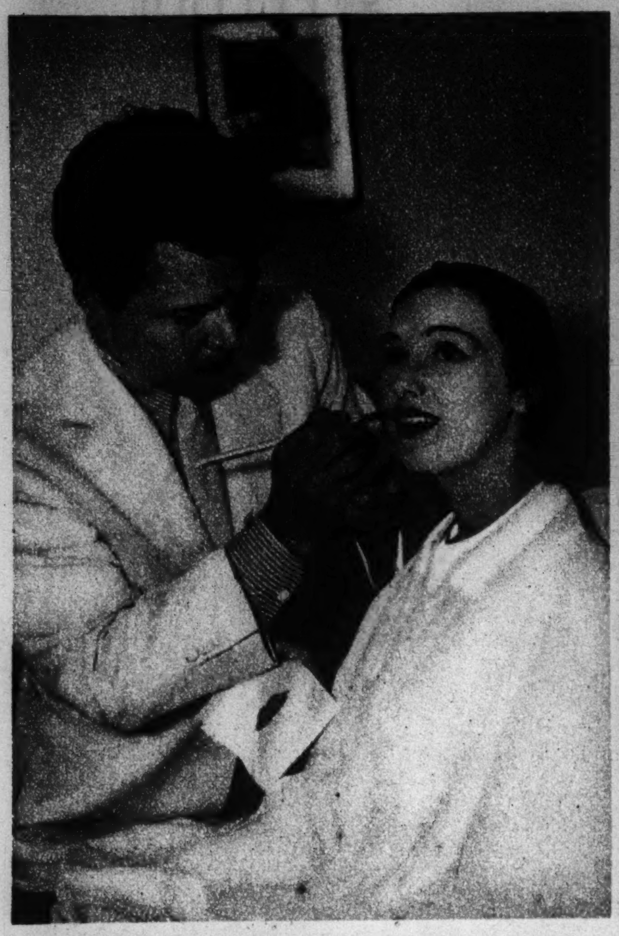
Stern Breeding Place of the Religions

indicates a movement into Palestine from Egypt 1,700 years before Christ. The giant pyramids of Gizeh, in Egypt, even then were 3,000 years old. The glorious civilization of the ancient Sumerians of the valley of the Euphrates had been forgotten for hundreds of years when the Egyptians, after having expelled the Hyksos invaders, marched into Palestine and Syria, thereupon establishing the first fixed item of historical record in the annals of the Holy Land.

● The Egyptians ruled in Palestine in a rather loose manner through puppet kings and princes for about four hundred years, which included the period that saw young King Tut-Ankh-Amen come to the throne of Egypt, reign for six years or so, and then take his place in the mysterious tomb that was not found until 1922, more than 3,200 years after his demise, presumably by foul play.

● When the hold of the Egyptians on Palestine began to weaken, about 1300 B. C., there rolled into the land in their war chariots from what is now Anatolia the fiercely fighting Hittites (Figure 2). These people maintained their capital at the city of Boghaz-keui. They were not only warriors but scheming empire builders, and when they concluded a treaty with the Egyptian King Rameses II. in about 1272 B. C. they tricked him out of much of the territory in Asia that Egypt had conquered in previous centuries. He still retained, however, a sizable portion of Palestine, which Egypt was clinging to in 1115 B. C., at the time of the first invasion by the Assyrians from the east (Figure 3). The initial movement of the Assyrians into Palestine appears to have been of no great consequence, (Continued on page eight.)

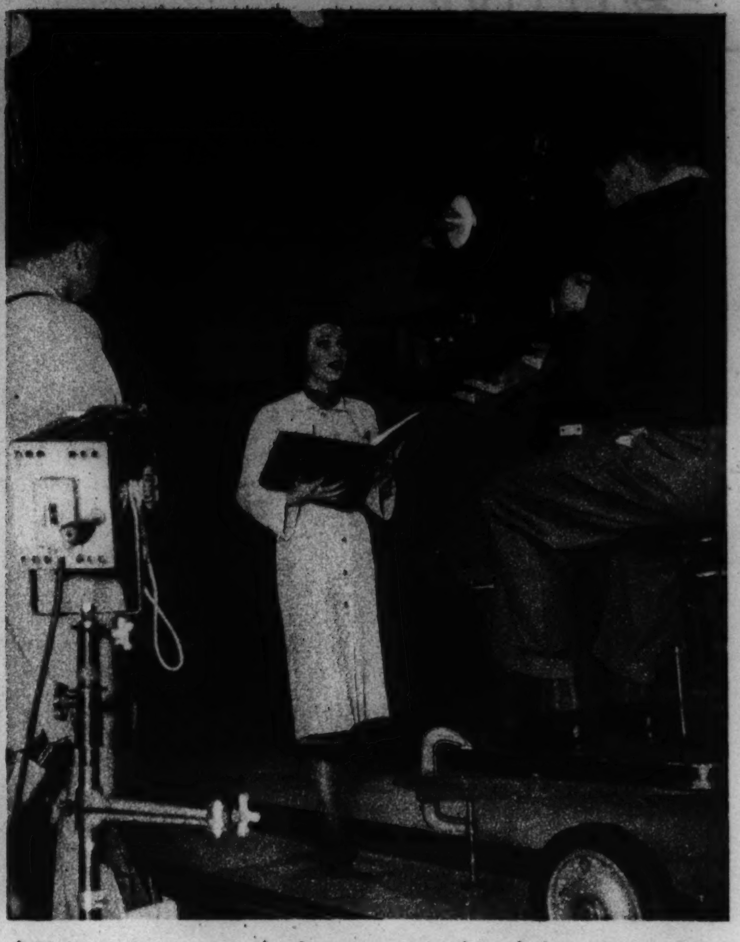
Looking at Hollywood with Ed Sullivan



1 Out after the leading feminine role in a new film, Rosemary Lane has Perc Westmore apply makeup for exacting tests.

2 Then Head Cameraman Rosher checks her makeup before deciding on just what lighting effects should be used.

3 Miss Lane takes her place, and the cameraman measures the focusing distance.



4 Lights and camera ready, the actress goes through the actions and the lines to make sure she will be at her best during the test.

In the contest for leading film roles it is the screen test that decides the winner.

50,000 Pounds of Hair for Movies to Make Into Costly Wigs

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood, Cal.

WHEN YOU SEE Norma Shearer in her return to the screen as Marie Antoinette the wigs she'll wear will have been made from the hair of Balkan peasant women. Of the twenty-two wigs which Max Factor is making up for Miss Shearer, at least two will cost $1,000 apiece. It sounds like a lot of money, but actually it isn't.

Factor recently bought up and imported 50,000 pounds of hair from the Balkan and Scandinavian countries, because of the war scare. He says that the residents of these countries grow the finest hair in the world for wigmaking. Human hair to him is just as casual a commodity as U. S. Steel would be to a stockbroker, and you might enlarge the parallel, because prices in the human hair market fluctuate just as rapidly as they do on the big board. The very finest human hair sells for as much as $8 an ounce! Only the stars get that.

KAY FRANCIS in blonde wig.

Miss Shearer's requisition of twenty-two wigs is only a small part of the total wig order for "Marie Antoinette." The Factor wigmakers are now at work making 5,100 wigs for the picture. One of them will weigh 19 pounds 4 ounces. It will be worn by Miss Shearer. I asked the 50-year-old Factor just how many pounds of hair would be represented in the total order. "About 2,500 pounds of hair," he said. "Each wig will take perhaps 150,000 single strands of hair, each one knotted to the other. The painful detail of knotting these hairs discourages most girls from entering the business of wigmaking, but it pays big salaries. Some of the girls here now—we call them 'ventilators'—are daughters of women who worked for me years ago. As with the glassblowers of Venice, the art descends from one generation to another."

KAY FRANCIS as she is.

Most expensive wigs, for obvious reasons, are those made of pure white hair. It is arriving now in bundles of 50 and 100 pounds from Europe as fast as the hair buyers in the Balkans can purchase and ship it. "Generally," explained the veteran, "the hair buyers go through the Balkan villages every two years. On this order I cabled them to get it immediately. These bundles you see in the shipping room have been arriving almost daily now for three weeks. For this picture I'll need 1,700 pounds of white hair."

Cecil B. De Mille, according to Factor, was the first producer out here to insist on human hair for wigs. In "The Squaw Man" and in "Joan of Arc" De Mille aroused the jocular gibes of other directors by ordering 500 wigs of real hair. Up to then horsehair and even upholstery moss was considered all right. De Mille proved, however, on the screen that real hair filmed so much better that the others swung into line.

Voice of the Movie Fan

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Many fans may differ in opinion to this, but my hat goes off to James Cagney. He is one actor I've liked since his very first picture. To me Jimmy appears to be the backbone of the screen. I have never missed a Cagney-O'Brien production.

JAMES CAGNEY
Called backbone of the screen.

Would you please print a picture of Jimmy and a short biography telling of his birth? His brilliant acting has thrilled me to the very core. Incidentally, I don't think a dictionary of words would be enough to express how much I enjoy your column. I am a small fan, but I know my actors. Thanks. ROCCO PIRRONE.

Editor's note: He was born in New York City, July 17, 1904. He's 5 feet 8½ inches tall, weighs 150 pounds, and has red hair and brown eyes. Educated Stuyvesant High school and Columbia university. His hobbies are drawing and athletics. He's married to Frances Vernon, professional.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have read your column in The Tribune for some time. I enjoy the readers' letters and your views. I am quite a movie fan. I like to collect movie stars' pictures.

I read and saw the picture in your column on Gloria Swanson. I have never heard of her before as a movie star. This letter amused me very much, because I know a girl, a neighbor, who has the same name.

I am inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. I would like to hear more about her. I'm sure our Gloria Swanson would be interested also. Would you please tell me about her?

I will be watching for my letter to be published in your Voice of the Movie Fan column. GOLDIE DESELMS, Imperial, Neb.

Editor's note: You never heard of Gloria! My dear, you will go down in history! Miss Swanson was born in Chicago, March 27, 1898. She's 5 feet 1⅛ inches tall and has brown hair and blue eyes. Educated in schools in Chicago, Key West, Porto Rico, and at the Art institute. She is divorced from Wallace Beery, the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudraye, and Michael Farmer. Miss Swanson started her movie career many years ago at the old Essanay studios in Chicago. The last film in which she appeared was "Music in the Air," produced in 1934.

Dear Miss Tinée: Why is it the movies always consider it necessary for the girl to marry a rich man's son? Aren't any other kind of men supposed to be able to give them happiness? We aren't given the privilege of choosing our parents, and most of us don't draw parents who have amassed a fortune—though they may have many other admirable qualities.

It's rather disgusting to always have it hammered home that only a silver spoon son gets the happy ending of a romance, no matter how weak and useless he is.

You know, a lot of girls take the movies seriously, and it's making a lot of them mercenary gold diggers. I've run into several who really place the possession of a lot of money above everything else.

Yours truly, ARLYN RAY.

Editor's note: That's a very apt criticism! Scenario writers please notice! Between you and me, Arlyn, I know some poor men who get by in great shape with their wives—and the world at large.

Dear Miss Tinée: I am a constant reader of your column, and I don't enjoy reading another column as I do yours. I know everybody appreciates it when you answer their questions. I, too, would appreciate it if you would answer my question. I would like to know the name of the actor who played opposite Betty Furness in "Gridiron Flash." Please write a biography of him and print his picture. Thank you.

EDDIE QUILLAN
Played opposite Betty Furness.

Your constant reader, ELEANORE SOWINSKI.

Editor's note: Glad to be so popular with you, Eleanore. Eddie Quillan played the rôle of Tommy (Cherub) Burke in the film "Gridiron Flash," opposite Betty Furness. Mr. Quillan was born in Philadelphia, Pa., March 31, 1907. He's 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds, and has brown hair and eyes. Educated Mount Carmel High school and received his stage training playing in the Quillan act with his family. Come again!

Dear Miss Tinée: Please inform me as to whether Frankie Darro was the young man killed with Jackie Coogan's father a few years ago.

Sincerely, VIVIAN ZABLEN.

Editor's note: It was Trent (Junior) Durkin, a juvenile actor, who was killed in an automobile accident with Jackie Coogan's father. Frankie Darro played the rôle of the jocky in the film "Saratoga."

Dear Miss Tinée: "Life Begins in College" turned out to be a very disappointing picture. The Ritz brothers, as usual, were swell, Joan Davis and Nat Pendleton tops—but why do they put a swell actor like Tony Martin in such an awful part? In my opinion he is one of the handsomest young men on the screen, has a swell voice, and he can emote—and so they give him about three scenes, while the rather hammy person who took the part of the football captain monopolized the whole thing.

VERA MALLOY.

Editor's note: Tony and I are glad you like us. Here's about Alice Faye's nice new husband:

Tony Martin was born in San Francisco. He's 6 feet tall, weighs 175 pounds, and has brown eyes and black hair. Was educated at Oakland High school and St. Mary's college. Before going into pictures he played in an orchestra on N. B. C. radio programs.

A Field Heiress Will Marry

Barbara Field, a bride tomorrow.

By CHARLES COLLINS

THE MARRIAGE of Barbara Field, daughter of Marshall Field III., to Anthony A. Bliss in New York City tomorrow will be the first in the third generation of direct descendants of Marshall Field I., inheritors of the major portion of the princely estate that has been an important factor in Chicago's commercial history.

Barbara, nearly 20 years old (she was born on Jan. 6, 1918, daughter of Marshall Field III. and his first wife, Evelyn Marshall), stands in the first rank of American heiresses, but is not of the ostentatious type. She is marrying with the quiet dignity that has been a tradition of the Field family. Her change of name by marriage will reduce the number of living Fields (of the name and the blood) to eight, for although the family has been large and its ramifications widespread, it has been prolific largely on the distaff side.

The family tree of the Fields contains ninety names as descendants of John Field (1798-1876), who married Fidelia Nash and begot Marshall Field I., with his four brothers and four sisters. Of these Fields of the blood sixty-eight are living and twenty-two are dead. The sex categories are almost equal; there have been to date forty-six males and forty-four females. Yet by some curious trickery of genetics the name-bearing male lines have dwindled rapidly. The daughters have been numerous, marriageable, and fertile, and thus the Field blood has been diffused among many other families.

The contemporary Fields are: Marshall III., grandson of the founder of the fortune; his children, Marshall IV. (aged 21), Barbara (aged 19), Bettine (aged 14), and Phyllis (aged 1); Stanley, nephew of the founder, aged 62; Stanley's son, Joseph Nash II., aged 26; Norman, brother of Stanley, aged 57; and Henry III., grandnephew of the founder, aged 35, who was born a Gibson and adopted the ancestral name.

Of these only Stanley, his son, Joseph Nash II., and Henry III. are now Chicagoans. Stanley has two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Clifford Rodman and Mrs. Russell Phelps Kelley, also of Chicago. Norman, resident in England, married but has had no issue. Henry III., recently divorced from the former Betty Sturgess, has no children.

The other living descendants appear on the family tree under the following names: Clegg, Ismay, Rodman, Kelley, Crossley, Wardell, Edmonstone, Tree, Beatty, James, Lowell, Douglass, Gillette, Richards, Stevens, Burnaby, Lindsay, Petrasch, Dibblee, and Sprague.

A large number of these Field collaterals are British subjects, resident in England, because Joseph Nash I., brother of Marshall I., established his home there to manage the firm's British interests; and also because of marriages of American female descendants and collaterals to Englishmen. Another large branch of the family has remained in Massachusetts, where Marshall I. spent his boyhood. The families of Stanley and Albert A. Sprague, nephew-in-law of Marshall I., have been the chief Chicago representatives of the clan since Marshall III. moved to New York in 1921.

The Field fortune, handed down according to the terms of a will which is remarkable for its sagacity in the conservation of an estate, has been concentrated largely in a trust for the benefit of the direct heirs and their issue. A full genealogical [illegible] of these immediate de[illegible] is therefore in order. [illegible]ll I., who was born on [illegible]ar the small town of [illegible]lass., in 1835, and be[illegible]rchetype of Chicago's [illegible] princes," married [illegible]uglas Scott (1868-[illegible]d three children by [illegible]ond marriage, contracted in the last year of his life to Mrs. Delia Spencer Caton, was childless.

His firstborn, Lewis, died in infancy. The two younger children were Marshall Jr. and Ethel. The former's son is the chief beneficiary of the major trust established under the terms of his will. This is the well known Field estate which has constructed in Chicago the Conway, Pittsfield, and Field office buildings and the Marshall Field Garden apartments. This trust will terminate when and if Marshall Field III. attains the age of 50, which will be in 1943—only six years hence.

Marshall Field Jr., born in 1868, died in 1905 of a gunshot wound, about six weeks before his father's death. His children therefore became the principal heirs under his father's will, a document about 20,000 words in length which provided for every possible contingency through the next two generations. The will states in its first paragraph the father's concern for the health of his son, as follows:

"The health of my only son has long been a subject of deep solicitude to me. Never the possessor of a strong constitution, he has suffered much from illness and is at times compelled to make his own physical well being almost his chief concern. With this in mind it is my aim to make my provisions for his benefit in such form as shall lighten so far as practicable his burdens in the care of property."

Marshall Jr. married Albertine Huck of Chicago and begot five children, two of whom died in infancy. (His widow, remarried to Capt. Maldwin Drummond, a British subject, died in 1915.) The surviving children were Marshall III., born in 1893; Gwendolyn, born in 1902 and married to Archibald Charles Edmonstone, a British subject; and Henry, born in 1895, died in 1917. Under the will Marshall III. was the most favored grandchild, but the others were richly endowed.

Marshall III. has married three times and begotten four children, three by his first wife, Evelyn Marshall, now Mrs. Diego Suarez. These three children are, in order of age, Marshall IV., born in 1916, now a student at Harvard university; Barbara, born in 1918, who becomes Mrs. Anthony A. Bliss tomorrow; and Bettine, born in 1923. By his second wife, Mrs. Audrey James Coates, he had no issue. By his third wife, Mrs. Ruth Pruyn Phipps, married on Jan. 15, 1936, he has had one child, Phyllis, born Nov. 3, 1936.

The issue of Gwendolyn Field Edmonstone, also great-grandchildren of Marshall I., are Mary Bettine, born in 1927, and Jean, born in 1931. Gwendolyn's husband was a lieutenant in the British army at the time of the marriage. He is the son of Sir Archibald Edmonstone of Castle Duntreath, Scotland, an estate which has been in his family for nearly 500 years. Their homes are in this castle (at Blanefield, near Glasgow) and on an estate called Husbands Bosworth, near Rugby, in England.

Henry II., younger brother of Marshall III., died at the age of 22, five months after his marriage to Nancy Kean Perkins. They had no issue. After his death a former American chorus girl named Peggy Marsh brought suit against the Field estate on behalf of her child, called Anthony Marsh, alleging that he was Henry II.'s illegitimate son. She lost the suit because of definite exclusion of illegitimate offspring in the famous will.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field III. Mr. Field will come into control of the entire Field estate in 1943.

So much for the line of Marshall Jr.—the most favored heirs under the will. But the story of Ethel Field, his sister, remains to be told.

This only daughter of Marshall Field I. was born in Chicago in 1873. At the age of 18 she married Arthur Magie Tree, son of Judge Lambert Tree, by whom she had one child, Arthur Ronald Lambert Field Tree, born in 1897. Her second marriage, in 1901, added to the Field family tree its chief historical figure—David Beatty, who was second in command at the battle of Jutland, who succeeded Jellicoe as admiral of the fleet, who became first sea lord and was ennobled as earl of the North Sea and of Brooksby. He holds a brilliant place in the epic of British sea power and the naval annals of the great war. He was born in Ireland in 1871 and was a captain at the time of his marriage He commanded the battle cruiser squadron at Jutland. He died in 1936. Thus Ethel Field became a countess. She died in 1932.

The offspring of the Field-Beatty marriage are David, second earl of the North Sea and of Brooksby, late lieutenant, R. N., born in 1905, and Peter Beatty, born in 1910. They share handsomely in the Field fortune under special provisions made in the will for Ethel and her issue.

Ethel's son by her first marriage, Arthur Ronald Lambert Field Tree, married Nancy Perkins, the widow of his cousin, Henry II. This marriage has added Michael Lambert, born 1921, and Arthur Jeremy Tree, born 1925, to the third generation of Field descendants. They live in England.

The other principal lines in the Field genealogy are those of Marshall I.'s brothers and sisters —Joseph Nash I., Henry I., Laura, and Helen Eliza. The eldest brother, Chandler Augustus, had only one child, a son, who died in infancy. A sister, Elizabeth, died at the age of 9, and the youngest brother, William, died in infancy.

The line of Joseph Nash I. has contributed Stanley Field and his family to the Chicago tradition and has run into the family names of Clegg, Crossley, and Wardell in England.

The line of Henry I. has given to Chicago the gifted anthropologist and archæologist, Henry Field III., born in 1902, who has been active in research expeditions for the Field museum, where he is an assistant curator. He is the son of Minna Field, daughter of Henry I., who married Preston Gibson, an occasional playwright, son of a United States senator. He changed his name years ago. His mother is now Mrs. Algernon Edwyn Burnaby of England. Henry I. had another daughter, Florence, who married Thomas P. Lindsay and had two daughters and one son.

The descendants of Helen Eliza Field, who remained in the east and married a certain Mr. James, form the Massachusetts wing of the family, of which little is heard. They bear the names of James, Gillette, Lovell, Douglass, and Richards. The two latter families (Douglas and Richards) live in the north shore suburban region of Chicago.

Laura Nash Field, youngest sister of Marshall I., founded an eminent Chicago family. She married Henry Dibblee, a business associate of her brother. Her daughter, Frances, married Albert A. Sprague, who has been a leader in business and civic life for many years. They have three children—Albert Jr., born 1903, who married Wilhelmina Gibbs; Laura, born in 1909; and Otho Sylvester Sprague, born in 1913. Mrs. Dibblee's other daughter, Bertha, became Mrs. John C. King; no issue.

The will of Marshall Field I., establishing the massive trust that will be dissolved and distributed in favor of Marshall Field III. when and if he attains the age of 50, on Sept. 28, 1943, is such a complex legal document that a layman's discussion of it may be regarded as an act of temerity. Nevertheless its copious details cannot obscure its clear intent, expressed in almost every paragraph—the conservation of the estate for the benefit of his direct heirs. The will has been criticized from a socialist point of view because it strove to keep the bulk of the fortune intact; it has also been defended from a capitalist point of view with cogency and force.

Arthur Jerome Eddy, one of Chicago's most brilliant lawyers —also an art critic and early spokesman for modernism in art —has answered the socialist argument in his work "Property" as follows:

"He left his millions exactly where they had been for months and years, in the hands of others who are using them productively."

The social value of this conservation of a fortune may be illustrated by the estate's construction of the gigantic Field building on La Salle street in the darkest period of the depression. This was the largest piece of building activity in the nation in 1931, and it put millions of dollars into circulation. In scope it was comparable to some of the pump-priming projects of the New Deal, which have filled many Utopian theorists with admiration.

The fact that the trust established by the will might continue to accumulate for an extended period beyond "lives in being" aroused some criticism. Albert Kales, an able attorney, wrote in the Illinois Law Review in 1906:

"In certain possible contingencies the accumulation of the whole residue of 125 million is directed until the youngest child of the testator's grandchildren living at his death reaches 21, which might be a period of from thirty-five to sixty-five years. . . . It may be estimated, therefore, that the provisions for accumulation of the residue in Mr. Field's will may result in that residue being increased before distribution from 125 million to nearly half a billion. This very forcibly reminds us that Illinois should have a Thelluson act."

The last sentence in this statement refers to an English law (30 and 40 George III., c. 98). The Illinois state legislature, no doubt because of this discussion, passed a copy of the Thelluson law in 1907. The act prevents the accumulation in trusts beyond a life or lives "in being" and twenty-one years thereafter.

Life, however, seems to be keeping the operation of the Field will within the terms of the Illinois Thelluson act.

The most important passage in the will is as follows:

"When my said grandson Marshall [III.] shall attain the age of 50, if he shall live so long, I direct that my said grandson shall receive, and said trustees shall forthwith distribute, convey, transfer, and deliver to him for his own use absolutely forever, the share in the trust estate to which he shall then be entitled."

Marshall Field as a young man.

There is a similar passage relating to Henry II., now dead without issue; and also a provision passing Henry's share to Marshall III. in the event of his death before the age of 50 without issue.

All this refers to the residuary estate, which formed the great mass of the fortune; Marshall III. to receive two-thirds, Henry one-third. Among the other specific bequests were:

$5,000,000 in trust for Marshall Jr. and his children after his death, each grandson to receive twice as much as any other child.

$5,000,000 in two separate trusts for Ethel Field Beatty; and also one more million in trust for her, to go to her son, Arthur Ronald Lambert Field Tree, if he survived her, which he does. Out of Ethel's six million she was permitted to settle one million upon each of her two sons by Beatty and also one million upon her husband (Beatty) if he survived her, which he did. She received one-half of the income from this fund until she was 40 years old and all of it thereafter. At her death the residue, after the deduction of the four million which she was permitted to bequeath to her sons and her husband, returned to the main estate for the benefit of Marshall Field III.

$1,000,000 in trust for his granddaughter Gwendolyn, to be distributed for the benefit of her children when the youngest shall have attained the age of 21 or, before reaching that age, shall die.

$500,000 to each of his sisters, Mrs. Laura Dibblee and Mrs. Helen E. James; also $250,000 in another bequest to Mrs. Dibblee.

$400,000 to Miss Nora Scott, his sister-in-law.

$250,000 each to his nephews, Howard James and Philip James; $50,000 to Dwight James; $100,000 to his nephew, Stanley Field (who also inherited handsomely from his own father); $100,000 to Mrs. Grace James Gillette, a niece; $100,000 each to Mrs. King and Mrs. Sprague; $10,000 to his nieces, Maud Field Clegg, Laura Field Clegg, Josephine Crossley, Minna Field Gibson, and Florence Field; $10,000 to his nephew, Norman Field.

$500,000 to Marshall Jr.'s widow, the former Albertine Huck.

$8,000,000 to the Field museum; including $4,000,000 for a building provided that a proper site shall be given for it within five years.

Numerous cousins and friends received $20,000 or $10,000 each; eight employés of the department store were remembered in amounts from $5,000 to $100,000; an old wagon driver of more than thirty years' service received $3,000; and $100,000 was ordered to be distributed among store employés of more than twenty-five years' service.

The charities that benefited were the Chicago Orphan asylum, the Old People's Home, St. Luke's hospital, and the Presbyterian hospital, $25,000 each.

An odd mistake in an otherwise classic legal document was the frequent misspelling of the name of Mr. Field's daughter Gwendolyn, as "Gwenderlyn." Attention was called to this error in an extra paragraph.

The will was drawn before Mr. Field's marriage to Mrs. Caton. A codicil announces the marriage and states that there had been a pre-nuptial settlement which provided for his wife. It also bequeathed to her, outside of the marriage settlement, $1,000,000 and the family residence. This mansion at 1905 Prairie avenue recently became the New Bauhaus, an endowed school of industrial design, by gift from Marshall Field III., to whom Mrs. Field gave it shortly before her death in July, 1937.

"I direct that investments shall be made with reference to the security of the trust fund rather than the rate of interest or income to be derived from it, and that where real and personal property have been given in trust a proper proportion be maintained between them. It has been my general intention to keep at least half of my property in real estate and the rest in personal property."

The value of the estate at the time of Mr. Field's death was generally estimated at about $125,000,000. The official inventory gave its value as $83,459,032.38, but this document listed at par value stocks which then had a market value of twice or three times par—34,000 shares of the stock of Marshall Field & Co., for example. Arthur Jerome Eddy states in "Property":

In addition to large holdings in Chicago real estate and shares in the department store business the estate contained stocks of 23 railroads, 5 street railways, 17 banks, and 27 industrial and miscellaneous companies; bonds of 30 railroads and 9 industrial companies; $2,000,000 in notes of various companies; $8,000,000 in loans to Marshall Field & Co., and nearly $2,000,000 in "subscriptions to various enterprises."

Money on deposit in banks was $4,295,378.76.

The trustees of the estate now are Marshall Field III., George Richardson, and the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, with offices on the forty-third floor of the Field building. The department store has become a separate corporation with no relation to the estate except for the latter's holdings of preferred stock and ownership of the land on which the retail buildings stand. The physical expansion of the store after Mr. Field's death, however, was carried out by the estate.

Germans Convert Bombers Into Airliners

Big Junkers Ship Uses 4 Motors

By WAYNE THOMIS

NEARY two years ago the German air ministry placed orders with several German aircraft manufacturers for large four-engined airplanes. It then was believed that very large aircraft offered advantages in speed, range, and military load over smaller machines—advantages which offset the increased initial cost and the larger numbers of trained men needed for crews of the larger machines.

These theories followed the trend of thought in the United States, where the army air corps purchased the Boeing B-17 and B-15 four-engined bombardment planes and the navy ordered four-engined patrol bomber flying boats from the Sikorsky and Consolidated companies. But conditions in Europe are very different from those in the United States. Great range was not as necessary there as it is here.

Smaller, less expensive military bombers were built and flown. They demonstrated that they were perfectly fitted for operations over the European continent, cost less for each ship, and needed smaller number of men in their crews. For a fixed budget and a small number of trained airmen, more of the smaller ships could be put into the air than of the larger bombardment planes.

Accordingly Germany's air ministry heads changed their policies to meet this situation. Orders for the large bombers were canceled, and the manufacturers, in order not to lose the funds already invested in engineering data and partial construction of the planes, transformed them from bombers into commercial airliners.

The first of these metamorphosed monsters to be completed and flown is the new Junkers Ju 90—named der Grosse Dessauer (the Giant of Dessau). Dessau is the town in which the Junkers works is situated. This ship is the German equivalent of the new Douglas DC-4 and the Boeing four-engined airliners which will be flying in this country in the early months of next year. The new Junkers is depicted in photographs reproduced on this page.

The Junkers company pioneered the all-metal low-wing type of airplane, building the world's first purely commercial machine to this formula in 1919. It has held to the same principle in all its subsequent craft, retaining it in this, its largest airplane built to date.

Many of the earlier Junkers machines had a corrugated outer skin, crinkled to add strength, but in the Ju 90 the corrugations have been put inside, with a perfectly smooth outer skin, as in the latest American machines. The Ju 90 is similar to American airplanes also in that its tail is of the popular double fin and rudder type, with these surfaces at the outer edges of the tailplane.

In its present form the Ju 90 is capable of carrying forty passengers at a cruising speed of 225 miles an hour. It is said to land at less than 60 miles an hour—due to the Junkers double wing flap and to a split trailing edge flap fitted under the fuselage. Incidentally, this is the first use of the split flap by the Junkers company.

This performance, which has been proved by test flights, is equal to if not better than the best similar American airplanes. The new Boeing, which has not yet been flown, is supposed to have a cruising speed nearly equal to that of the Junkers, but the Douglas is expected to be definitly slower.

The three ships are, however, not exactly comparable, for they differ in size, weight, and power. The Douglas will be a 60,000-pound machine, the Boeing a 43,000-pound craft, and the Junkers weighs 50,700 pounds fully loaded. Both the Boeing and Douglas planes will have 3,000-mile cruising ranges, while the Junkers has a 1,200-mile range with full passenger load or an 1,800-mile range with reduced pay load and more fuel.

Dimensions of the Junkers are as follows: Span, 114.8 feet; length, 103.5 feet; the main passenger cabin is 34.5 feet long and 9.8 feet wide. The seats are arranged in pairs on each side of a central aile. Four seats form a compartment, as shown in an accompanying photograph of one interior arrangement. There are large baggage holds behind the main cabin and under the flooring. Lavatories also are at the rear. In the nose is the pilot's cockpit, with dual controls, complete flying, navigating, and engine instruments, and a special seat for a radio operator-navigator.

The amount of room inside the plane is shown best by the photograph of the interior before the soundproofing was in place. Factory memoranda assert that the soundproofing has been unusually well done, virtually cutting off all motor roar.

The factory description of the plane states that its construction is robust, entailing minimum expenditure on maintenance and repairs. All important components have been designed for easy accessibility and replacement.

Any engines of 800 to 1,200 horsepower can be fitted. In the first machine Junkers Jumo 211 engines, V-12 inverted, liquid cooled, and delivering 1,100 horsepower for takeoff, are standard. They turn controlable-pitch propellers. The two main landing wheels retract in flight into the engine nacelles behind the inboard engines on each side. These engines are not Diesel types, but standard four-cycle, electric ignition motors.

The Ju 90 has a top speed of 255 miles an hour at 2,000 feet, with the engines delivering a full 960 horsepower at that altitude. This extreme speed is part of its heritage as a bomber.

At left: Inside the main cabin before the seats and soundproofing were installed. Note the simple construction, the absence of large main members.

Bali Sets the Fashion Today—In Figures

Glamor Isle Is the Paris of Poise and Stature

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1937: By the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.)

WHY IS a double chin born? How can it be prevented?

How can a foreshortened neck become a thing of swanlike grace?

What to do for that half-barrel back?

Travel to Bali, girls, for the answers. There you'll find the famous Balinese women, whose backs, necks, busts, and head carriage are world famous as standards of beauty.

It needn't be native to Bali, however. Here's a tremendous asset that you may appropriate as your very own, and I don't care how hopeless you yourself may feel about acquiring it. You may not manage the long, slender neck, but outside of that one item you certainly can contribute to your clothes, to your audience (private or professional), to your charm, and to your own self-esteem by appropriating the other features as your own. And, indeed, you will succeed in stretching your neck a little, no matter how short nature desired yours to be.

And if you don't think that concentrating on the features listed above is going to make a whale of a difference in your silhouette, you're mistaken. In correcting the features listed you will flatten your abdomen. You'll minimize your waist and you'll even slenderize your hips a bit. This, mind you, by the mere business of pulling yourself up and keeping yourself up during all your waking hours.

And what a difference that new Balinese back is going to make in your clothes! All the difference in the world. It doesn't matter how simple the frock or how elaborate. It will be good only in proportion to the straight-statured girl that is you inside of it.

In fact, a byword grown out of this new posture concentration is "hang straight."

Do you hang straight or crooked? Look at the crookedness of the model pictured here. Look at her rounded shoulder, her protruding midsection in front, her exaggerated back hip outcurve, and the sway back. And then study the same girl gone Balinese-backed.

Don't believe that the girl at the typewriter, sitting all hunched over, is meant to convey a lesson to typists only. When you sit at a telephone, at a sewing machine, at a kitchen table preparing food, you may present the same picture and be creating the same ugly lines of body.

Today there is no other mission in mind than to get all women conscious of the features required in this smart new setup. It's not new, really. Just a new name for it! Smart women always have had it. The youngest older women you know have all the points in their favor. The youngest young ones likewise.

All that is asked today is to get a mirror view of yourself when you've slipped and slumped into your habitual rounded posture. And keep that in mind. Think of yourself that way. Think of what you are doing to that lovely frock you bought not long ago.

2 Not many Bali girls use typewriters, but they probably would not assume this meal sack posture. This is a fault peculiar to housewives as well as stenographers.

3 Sitting erect isn't hard after you try it, and it is far less devitalizing. This posture completely eliminates those unsightly dowagers' humps, double chins, and flat chests.

Meat Dishes from Inexpensive Cuts

Beef Pot Roast or a Pork Shoulder Easy to Cook

By MARY MEADE

THESE two economy meat dishes are beef pot roast with noodles and carrots, and rolled pork shoulder with boiled onions.

The pot roast was cut from the rump of beef, but the chuck and part of the round are equally good for pot roasting. A roast cut from the round usually is the triangular piece known as the heel of the round, which is left after the round steaks are removed.

Pot roast is cooked by braising. Dredge the meat in flour and brown it well in hot fat. Season with salt and pepper, add a small amount of hot water, cover, and cook slowly until tender. More water may be added from time to time as needed, but only a little should be added at a time. Each time the liquid cooks away the meat becomes browner and the gravy more flavorful.

A pot roast of four or five pounds requires approximately three hours to cook. Temperature must be kept low or meat will not be as tender as it should be.

In this case noodles and carrots were cooked separately, but they may be cooked with the roast. They should be added just long enough before serving to cook them tender. It will be necessary to use more liquid if the noodles are cooked with the meat.

The liquid in which a pot roast is cooked makes a delicious gravy if thickened with flour smoothed in cold water.

To prepare rolled pork shoulder roast, have the butcher bone and roll a picnic shoulder. Season with salt and pepper and place on a rack in an open roasting pan. Roast in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until done. Forty to forty-five minutes a pound may be allowed. Pork always should be cooked well done.

Serve on a platter surrounded with seasoned boiled onions which have been sprinkled generously with paprika.

NEXT WEEK:
GROUND MEAT CAKES.

Noodles and carrots to accompany this pot roast were cooked separately, but they may be cooked with the meat if desired.

Stuffed dates are a treat, so treat your family to the finest . . . Dromedary Dates . . . the pick of the choicest dates in all the world—rich, moist, tender, luscious. Buy them pitted to save time. Stuff with:

1. Dromedary Cocoanut and fondant (½ and ½)—Never fail fondant: 1 egg white mixed well with 2 cups confectioners' sugar and 1 tablespoon water. Flavor with coffee, vanilla, almond, orange juice and grated rind, or with melted chocolate.
2. Candied pineapple or Dromedary cherries, cut small.
3. Peanut butter moistened with Dromedary Orange Juice.
4. Dromedary Crystalized Mixed Fruits, put through the grinder.
5. Walnut or pecan meats, broken.
6. Marshmallows, quartered.
7. Cream Cheese.

IMPORTANT: Be sure to clip these recipes and to remember one thing. Because dates have to be picked, packed and handled by many hands, be sure you insist on Dromedary Dates. They are the only dates approved by the Council on Foods of the American Medical Association because they are the only dates that are pasteurized, like milk, for your protection.

Germany Seeks Land in Africa

1 African territories have become pawns in the international diplomatic game, chiefly because of Germany's insistence upon getting colonies. Kilimanjaro peak, highest in Africa, rises out of Tanganyika, which before the war was one of Germany's African possessions.

4 Of all Germany's pre-war African possessions, only Togoland, on the equatorial west or "Gold Coast," was self-supporting. These natives provide the man power for an extensive trade in cocoa beans. Germany was largely responsible for the development of the territory.

5 Like the men, native women are often beasts of burden. Germany lost control of the lives of thirteen million of these when she lost her colonies.

6 Zulu bridesmaids of Southwest Africa line up for the ceremonial. Africa is as rich in resources as it is in color and oddities, and Germany is seeking a share in its output. Both Portugal and Belgium, controling rich lands in the Congo region, have warned Great Britain that they will not countenance any division of their colonies to satisfy Germany. Palestine – Holy Land of Three Religions

As in biblical times, shepherds still tend their flocks in Palestine.

and for well within the next two centuries this land was strangely abandoned by outsiders. For a period then of about 400 years there were no nations in the world powerful enough to impose their rule upon the inhabitants of Palestine. It was a time when lands were divided among small kings; when tribes rather than nations were in control. Consequently there appeared in Palestine a number of petty rulers, each claiming a bit of land and a handful of subjects.

These were the Jewish kings of the Old Testament. Their people were of the Semitic race, of the same stock as the Phœnicians and the Arabs, but whence they came to this day remains a mystery. The Hebrew tribes finally united to form a single nation, with their deity a national Hebrew god, the wrathful Jehovah. About 722 B. C. (Figure 4), however, this nation was split into two rival states, Judah and Israel.

Judaism, the religion of the Jews, which in modern times has spread over the world, thus was born among the Hebrew tribes of Palestine centuries ago. And so to the Jews of all times Palestine is the Holy Land. The jealous and wrathful Jehovah of the Old Testament was satisfactory among these early people as an inspiration for war, but there were other human activities that required inspiration, such as agriculture and the like, so over the centuries there gradually developed among the followers of Judaism new conceptions of the Supreme Deity. In other words, the God of the Jews today has become transformed, through thought, into a loving, suffering God. There is little if any difference, despite what hair-splitting theologians may contend, between widespread Jewish and Christian views of the attributes of deity.

As the map on page one reveals, Palestine was subject to invasions from Assyria in the period from 1115 B. C. to 750 B. C. (Figure 3). It was these people from the east who after the formation of the rival states of Judah and Israel imposed what would now be called a protectorate over Palestine. First Israel was dominated by the Assyrians, then Judah fell under their control.

The power of the Assyrians after a while began to wane. On the banks of a branch of the Euphrates river soon was to be built upon the ruins of the city of Babylon, ancient capital of Hammurabi, a new and more magnificent city of Babylon. Its builders, the Chaldeans, who are believed originally to have come into Mesopotamia from Arabia on a route along the coast of the Persian gulf, established a dynasty in Babylon in about 625 B. C. Twenty years later these neo-Babylonians, in alliance with the Medes and the Scythians, overthrew the old empire of the Assyrians. And by 600 B. C. the Babylonians were marching triumphantly into Palestine (Figure 5), marking another milestone in the tragic history of that land.

The kings of Babylon were not long destined, however, to control Palestine, although in their brief domination they imposed many hardships on the Jews. It was Nebuchadnezzar, one of the

History Is Filled with Conflict

Babylonian kings, who was responsible for the so-called Babylonian captivity, the deportation by force of captive Jews to Babylon. There were three of these deportations during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, the first occurring in about 597 B. C. Under the rule of Babylon the land of the Jews was in great turmoil. An Egyptian army which had attempted to assist the people of Palestine against the Babylonians had been driven out, the Jews themselves had revolted against their oppressors, and the whole land was laid waste as a result. But, as aforementioned, fate was not long to deal well with the kings of Babylon and their subjects.

In 539 the Persian King Cyrus appeared before the walls of Babylon with a well equipped army. Nabonidos then was king of Babylon. His son was Belshazzar. How Cyrus took the city is described in the Old Testament in connection with the famous episode of the "handwriting on the wall," but the Encyclopedia Britannica has this to say on the subject:

"The legends of Belshazzar's feast and of the siege and capture of Babylon by Cyrus which have come down to us in the book of Daniel and the 'Cyropædia' of Xenophon have been shown by contemporaneous inscriptions to have been a 'projection backwards' of the reconquest of the city by Darius Hystaspes."

Darius Hystaspes, referred to in the foregoing, it might be well to mention here, was a Persian governor and general, the father of Darius the Great.

Whether or not there occurred at the Persian capture of Babylon the events set forth in the scriptures, history shows beyond a doubt that Cyrus actually took the great city in 539 B. C. Soon after, or about 500 B. C. (Figure 6), the Persians advanced into Palestine. Among the Jews of this land Cyrus was regarded as the divinely appointed Messiah, the anointed one of Jehovah. Although he did not live up to the rôle, it is recorded that he was very tolerant of the Jews and their religion. Under the Persians, Palestine became a part of the largest empire of antiquity. For a time it flourished, and then internal dissensions set in. Egypt, which had been conquered by the Persians, rose and declared its independence as the Persian empire began to weaken. This had its effect on the inhabitants of Palestine, who again were about to fall under the domination of another group of conquerors.

At this stage in the history of Palestine, Europe came to be reckoned with. In Greece there had been developing a new civilization and a new culture which for many centuries was to be the dominant force in the then known world. In 333 B. C. the Macedonian King Alexander the Great defeated Darius Codomannus, the Persian, at the battle of Issus, thus settling the fate of western Asia. The Macedonian Greeks and their allies under the command of Alexander in 332 B. C. passed through Palestine on the way to conquer Egypt. Alexander left the Jews undisturbed as to their laws and their religion, although by 300 B. C. (Figure 7) this country of the Hebrews was in reality a part of the Grecian empire.

After the death of Alexander the Ptolemies, Grecian rulers of Egypt, came into possession of Palestine. The Ptolemies regarded Palestine simply as a source of tribute for their treasury and its great forests of Lebanon as a rich source of lumber supplies. Their hold upon the land of the Jews never was very strong, and when the Seleucid dynasty was set up in western Asia by Macedonian generals and warriors who had aided Alexander in his conquests as far east as India, Palestine easily fell under Seleucid domination. The Seleucids were stronger in their Hellenism than the Ptolemies. They built Greek cities and introduced Greek culture. Because these Seleucids erected great altars to their deity, Zeus, and made strenuous efforts to suppress the religion of the Jews, a wave of resistance to their occupation of the country swept through Palestine. A Jewish rebellion, led by one Judas (Maccabæus), at first was confined to guerrilla warfare, but later met with considerable success in important battles. Judas, the revolutionary, was slain finally at the battle of Elasa (161 B. C.) and the rebellion was broken, but the Grecian victors did not follow up their advantage. The Jews were allowed to keep control of their country after that with little interference on the part of the Seleucids; in fact, they were even permitted to extend Jewish territory to the east to a considerable distance into what is now known as Transjordania. Rome slyly encouraged them in this.

A sanguinary quarrel among various leaders of the Jews at this period gave Rome an excuse to capture the city of Jerusalem. When the smoke had cleared away there was presented the picture of the Roman leader, Pompey, ready to decide who should be the king of the Jews. That was in 63 B. C. (Figure 8), the year that saw the birth of Octavius, who as Augustus Cæsar was to become the founder of the Roman empire. Pompey selected Hyrcanus as the leader of the Jews, but instead of making him king he proclaimed him high priest. Rome definitly was in control of Palestine.

And now we come to the period of the history of Palestine most important from the Christian viewpoint. Augustus has become emperor of Rome. He has proclaimed that throughout Syria (also under Roman control) and Palestine there shall be taken a census for the basis of a general collection of taxes. Between the years 6 B. C. and 3 B. C. this census taking is being enforced in Palestine. Mary and Joseph travel down from Nazareth to the city of Bethlehem, for under the rules of the enumeration each family shall be accounted for in its own native district. Being of the line of David, Joseph takes Mary to Bethlehem, the city of David.

And there upon this auspicious night, perhaps three years, perhaps as many as six years before the actual beginning of the Christian era so far as the calendar is concerned, the Christ is born.

Rome at the time perhaps knew nothing about the birth in the stable in Bethlehem. Secular history fails even to mention this event that was to influence so greatly the history of civilization. The facts, as every one in Christendom knows them today, are supplied by the New Testament. How Christ preached a new religion of complete unselfishness to the people of Palestine, how he suffered in the cause of humanity, and how he died on the cross are told in the gospel narrative.

Some little time after Pompey had established the status of the leader of the Jews as that of high priest the Roman government, which by this time had acquired imperial form, relented and allowed succeeding Jewish leaders to take the title of king. But they were kings only as the emperor of Manchukuo today is an emperor. The real power lay in Rome, there were Roman governors in the land, and Roman soldiers in shining armor paraded the streets of Jerusalem and other cities of Palestine. Augustus later divided the land of the Jews into small kingdoms. To Herod Archelaus he allotted Judea (Latin for Judah), Samaria, and Idumea. To Herod Antipas went Galilee and Perea. To Herod Philip the Roman emperor gave Trachonitis, Batanea, and Auranitis. These three Herods were the sons of Herod the Great. For a short while later (A. D. 37-44) all Palestine was united under Herod Agrippa I., a grandson of Herod the Great.

The Jews in time grew weary of Roman occupation and of the eternal business of paying taxes to the Romans and being tried before Roman judges. In A. D. 66 they rebelled and gave the Romans considerable trouble until Vespasian and Titus with big armies were sent from Rome to stamp out the rebellion. The Jews made little resistance except in the extreme north of the land and in Jerusalem. They held Jerusalem against the army of Titus but finally were forced to surrender it. In spite of the orders of Titus to the contrary, Jerusalem was destroyed by the victorious Romans. That was in A. D. 70.

Palestine continued under Roman rule. In A. D. 395, when the Roman empire was divided, the land of the Jews fell to the emperor of the east. For 200 years there was comparative quiet in Palestine. Then for a brief spell there was trouble from an easterly direction. The Persian King Chosroes II. invaded Syria and Palestine and with the assistance of the Jews took these lands from the Byzantine empire. In A. D. 628, however, the country was recovered by the eastern Roman Emperor Heraclius.

As Heraclius was winning back Palestine for his empire there was growing up to the south, in Arabia, another great religion. Mohammed, the prophet and founder of Islam, was creating an irresistible force of militant zealots. Islam was on its way to spread from the doors of China to the western coast of Africa and up into the very heart of Europe. Mohammed had scarcely breathed his last (A. D. 632) when the Arab hordes from the south were pouring into Palestine (Figure 9). The army of Heraclius was utterly defeated by the Mohammedans in a battle fought on the Yarmuk river in 636. Palestine and Syria fell to the Arabs.

The first long line of caliphs of Islam were the Omayyads. These in 750 were deprived of their position by the more powerful Abbassids, who transferred the seat of the caliphate from Damascus to Bagdad. The Abbassids, therefore, soon extended their influence into territories conquered by Moslem armies. Palestine by 814 was under the domination of the mighty house of the Abbassids (Figure 10). In the meantime Caliph Abdalmalik had built in Jerusalem (684) the celebrated mosque, Dome of the Rock, one of the most beautiful buildings in the world. In the early part of the ninth century there came a great split in the Moslem world. Descendants of Fatima, daughter of Mohammed, set up an independent caliphate in Egypt. By 969 the influence of the Fatimites was dominant in Palestine (Figure 11).

In 1098 Palestine suffered its next invasion (Figure 12). The Seljuk Turkomans from Khorasan swept into the land and captured Jerusalem and other cities. Their goal was Egypt, but the Fatimites there repulsed the invaders, drove them back through Palestine and Syria, and retook the cities that had been captured.

And now for a period of nearly 200 years Christians from Europe were to figure prominently in the history of Palestine.

The shrine in the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem, where, according to tradition, the manger of Jesus lay.

In nine spectacular and successive waves the crusaders marched or sailed for Palestine. In some of the crusades they were successful in reaching the Holy Land; in others they did not even put a foot upon its soil. It was during the first crusade, in 1099, that Jerusalem was captured from the Moslems (Figure 13). The victorious leader of the assault upon the city, Godfrey of Bouillon, was proclaimed king of Jerusalem.

In 1190 the Kurdish leader, Saladin, who had captured Egypt, was successful in wresting Palestine from the Christians and restoring it to the Mohammedans (Figure 14). The second crusade reached no farther into Asia than Syria, and the third crusade, in which Richard the Lion Hearted distinguished himself, had only to its credit the capture of Acre. Jerusalem remained in the hands of the Moslems. The remaining crusades were more or less abortive, although it is recorded that the Emperor Frederick II. was permitted to occupy Jerusalem for a period of ten years as a result of the sixth crusade, of 1229. The last of the crusades took place about 1270 (Figure 13). In the meantime, by 1204 there was established firmly in Palestine a dynasty, that of the Ayyubids (Figure 15), that was to last for a half century. The previously mentioned Saladin was one of the so-called Ayyubite rulers of the Holy Land. He died in 1193.

Mongolians from inner Asia, some time after the year 1240, drove down through Palestine from the north, seizing Jerusalem and other cities and massacring the inhabitants. Finally driven out by the Mameluke sultans of Egypt, they retired, only to make room for a new set of invaders, the Tatar tribes from the wild plains of central Asia. The fourteenth century saw little of historical interest in Palestine, but the beginning of the fifteenth brought a new invader, the ferocious Mongol raider, Tamerlane. And then in 1451 came still another invasion, this of the Circassians (Figure 16).

In 1512 the Ottoman Turks overran Palestine (Figure 17), capturing the land from the Egyptian sultans, who had managed through three invasions from central Asia to keep a more or less precarious hold upon the country.

These Ottoman Turks, whose capture of Constantinople in 1453 had established them firmly as a power to be reckoned with in Europe, held Palestine for more than four centuries, or until the World war brought defeat to them and reduced their territorial limits.

Palestine, which was taken from the Turks by a British expeditionary force, today is a territory administered by the British government under a mandate from the league of nations. Its population is little more than a million, of whom 73 per cent are Moslems, 17 per cent are Jews, and only 8 per cent are Christians. Over the land to the north, the modern Syria, France has relinquished a similar mandate set up after the war.

Today Christian, Jew, and Moslem each holds this country to be a holy land.

Will a unity of faith finally bring everlasting peace to Palestine?

New Constitution Arouses Native Resistance

By SAM BREWER

London, England.

INDIA is in the news again lately because its inhabitants have balked at their new British-made constitution.

India has been in the news pretty constantly as long as there have been newspapers. Even before that it starred for centuries in travelers' tales as the country of incomparable wealth.

More recently, however, India has been cast chiefly as the scene of political trouble of one sort and another, and no end is yet in sight. The British say they have made all the concessions they will in the new constitution, and the people of India say it is not good enough.

In its simplest terms the cause of the trouble is that the constitution's self-rule provisions are a farce. All real power is reserved for the British provincial governors, and in the few matters left to the legislatures the governors can veto their acts, rule by decree when the legislatures are not sitting, and suspend the session if they see fit.

The charges of the people of India are true. To call it self-rule is a farce, but the British do not dare to give up those safeguards. If they did, they say, it would mean merciless persecution of the various minorities by stronger groups. At present the inhabitants of India are more or less united by their common hate of British rule, but even now they have frequent clashes.

India packs into an area roughly two-thirds the size of the United States of America one-fifth of all the world's people, three times the population of the United States of America. They represent practically all the world's religions and political creeds, at least twenty races as distinct as those of Europe, and 220 different languages and dialects.

To make himself understood all over India by the people a linguist would need at least a dozen languages. For the army, Urdu, a form of Hindustani, is used so that all may understand orders and commands. But more than half the recruits have to learn the language after joining the army.

To find a single constitution for all India is like trying to find a single constitution for all Europe, one that would please Hitler, Stalin, and Mussolini.

The British are "riding a tiger." If they keep a firm grip on India they are accused of oppression. If they let go, they think, the country will be turned upside down with internal fights.

The Congress—Indian nationalist party—has refused even to try out the new constitution. Since the governors refuse to promise in advance not to use their discretionary powers, the nationalists refuse to form ministries in the six provinces where they won a majority in elections last spring — Madras, Bombay, Central Provinces, Bihar, Orissa, and United Provinces. Those are being ruled by cabinets that do not have a majority behind them. The other five provinces, Bengal, the Punjab, Sind, Assam, and the North-West Frontier, went against the nationalists anyway.

Agitation to do away with the new constitution keeps on. Every few days the English newspapers carry brief, very brief, reports of trouble somewhere in India. Demonstrations are ruthlessly broken up by the police with baton charges.

Sixty wounded were taken to hospitals as recently as Oct. 24, for example, when police in Bangalore, in the native state of Mysore, fired on a nationalist crowd demonstrating because of the arrest of one of their leaders.

Suggestions that the sensible course for the people of India might be to try the new constitution and start trouble later if the governors used their powers unfairly have fallen on deaf ears. The nationalists will have none of it. At their head is Jawaharlal Nehru, 48-year-old successor to the Mahatma Gandhi as active leader of nationalist agitation. He charges:

"No dominion has ever been insulted by an act like the India act, passed in the teeth of the fiercest opposition, forcibly imposed and containing the concentration of power in the hands of the governors and the viceroy, with federal structure stereotyping autocracy, entrenching feudalism, and making social progress constitutionally impossible."

On the other hand, the British had great difficulty in getting even the present constitution's concessions against conservative opposition. Even British liberals feel that it does not concede much to the people of India, but the Tories think it gives them more than enough.

Each side has made it a matter of principle, and neither will yield. The result is continued fighting, with the prospect of more to come.

India is the richest of all the world's colonial possessions in its returns, and richest in trouble for those who direct it. It has brought Great Britain more wealth and more woe, made more British fortunes, and involved the British in more different fights than any other patch in their vast empire.

One of the great liabilities attached to British ownership of India is the need of keeping open the sea route through the Mediterranean, 6,300 miles from London to Bombay. Except for the 2,000 miles of it that lie through the Mediterranean the British have little worry about it at present, but those 2,000 miles account for most of Britain's real worries. If it were not for that stretch the British would not have to worry much about the recurring threat of war with Italy. Australia is easy enough to reach around the Cape of Good Hope, but to have to go all that way, even if there were no dangers along the road, as there would be in war time, would make trade with India much more costly and add many days to the trip. The Mediterranean route must be kept open, say the British. And nothing can bring a quicker reaction from them than a threat to that route.

India is Britain's best customer. It supplies one dollar's worth in every six that Britain buys abroad, and one dollar in every ten paid for British exports comes from India. Vast amounts of Indian money end up in England in other ways. Aside from salaries paid to Britons out of India's revenue, 27 cents out of every dollar of the central government's income is spent in England, though England supplies less than 2 cents in each dollar of that revenue. This year $125,600,000 of India's revenue is being spent here, a tidy "invisible trade balance."

Since 1600 Britons have grown rich exploiting India. And since 1600 Britons have lost their lives seeking fortune there. In that year Queen Elizabeth first chartered the British East India company, which became the most powerful trading concern the world has even known.

The British took over the government from the East India company in 1858 after a disastrous mutiny of the native troops in which thousands of Europeans were slain. But for a century before that—since the battle of Plassey in 1757 destroyed French hopes of empire there—the company ruled India, with its own army and navy to protect its wealth.

Since the early seventeenth century the spread of British power in India has been almost uninterrupted, though punctuated with bloodshed and brutality and occasional bloody massacres. Thousands upon thousands of young Britons have gone out there in the hope of getting rich. In the early days only one in four ever came back, but those who did came back immensely rich.

Now the pickings are less rich, but there is less risk. India's chief import from Britain, along with cheap Lancashire cotton goods, is poor but ambitious young Englishmen. Americans and Japanese can compete for the cotton trade, but the trade in men is still a British monopoly.

Britain's conquest of India was no swift victory. It began with a couple of tiny trading concessions—at Surat in 1612 and Madras in 1639. It has gone on ever since, through cession, purchase, conquest, and outright annexation. The Portuguese, the Dutch, and the French were all ahead of England in the scramble for the wealth of India. But the British forced them all out. The Portuguese have a few scattered little footholds still, and the French have three seaports. The rest of India is British. Queen Victoria formally received the title empress of India in 1876.

So much for the distant past. Although the Britisher of today likes to believe that the really stormy episodes of India belong only to that distant past, we have only to recall relatively recent events to show that belief is unfounded. As recently as 1923 British troops under orders from Gen. Sir Michael O'Dwyer shot down 1,500 unarmed Sikhs—men, women, and children — in a crowd packed into the square of their holy city of Amritsar. They gathered to protest British rule after they had been told not to. So British machine guns were turned on them.

Another sore spot is India's own little "Devil's Island" penal settlement, on the Andaman Islands in the Bay of Bengal 120 miles from the mainland of Burma. British officers who landed there to colonize the islands as recently as 1855 reported that the only inhabitants were "dog-faced" cannibals, as primitive as any people in the world. They won them over by building huts for them and giving them food. Now there are 5,400 convicts on the islands, 56 of them women, and 244 political prisoners, terrorists sent there lest they infect other prisoners with their doctrins if kept in the ordinary jails.

As long ago as 1926 the British stopped sending ordinary convicts to the Andamans. Indian nationalists have been protesting their continued use for political prisoners, and after a mass hunger strike last July the British agreed to return any who were asked for to the jurisdiction of their own provinces. This met one of the nationalists' more insistent demands and robbed them of one of their best talking points.

Beside all these political troubles, there is a fair-sized war going on in the North-West Frontier, with 33,000 troops in the field equipped with tanks, armored cars, and airplanes. The North-West Frontier, always capitalized in England (presumably in honor of its high cost in men and money), always has been a trouble spot.

For more than a year now the most modern weapons and methods the British can find have failed to subdue the wild tribes who live by raiding peaceful Indian settlements in the valleys. At a cost of $40,000 a day—to India, not Great Britain — the war is still going on. To date it has cost 221 casualties, including 58 killed, and about $1,500,000 extra on the Indian defense budget. And it is the tenth major campaign there in half a century.

But that is quite apart from the main Indian problem. Its only connection is that the rest of India would like to see the fighting stopped and the border closed with barbed wire and blockhouses. They are willing to let the tribes do what they want so long as they are kept out of India proper.

The British do not dare ignore these wild tribes for two reasons. It would be a blow to British prestige, in the first place. And, in the second, they are afraid of undue influence being gained over the tribes by Russian and Italian agitators, already busy among them. Italian agents in particular are said to be busy stirring up the tribes, which need little encouragement at the best of times, to revolt against the "British raj."

But the Indians as a whole have to foot the bill for all troops kept in India, and they resent it. About half their national income goes for defense in one form or another. Military expenditures for 1936-'37 were about $171,000,000, and of that the British paid only $7,500,000, less than one-twentieth.

The people of India scoff at British talk of possible invasion by Russia or Japan. That, they say, is propaganda to give an excuse for keeping big armed forces in India as insurance against revolt. Other countries, they say, want a share of India's markets but are not anxious to take on the thorny task of ruling India.

Complicating the Indian problem are the hundreds of native states. British India includes only about 60 per cent of the whole country, but it is not any single section. There are eleven British provinces and no fewer than 562 native states of every size and shape.

Native states vary from Jammu-and-Kashmir, one and a half times the size of Illinois, to mere properties of a few hundred acres. Some of them are little islands of territory in the heart of British provinces; others are huge blocks that stretch down between British provinces. Their rulers have varying degrees of

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

OXYGEN rather than bread is the staf of life. All vital functions require energy, and this energy is obtained when the atmospheric oxygen dissolved in blood attacks and consumes the sugar and fat in the animal organism. But oxygen is a deplorable nuisance when it takes a short cut and attacks human food before we have had time to eat it.

This undesirable action of oxygen is not exactly the same as that which takes place in the body. The latter is a complete oxidation, similar to burning, in which the fat and sugar are entirely converted into carbon dioxide and water. The undesirable action on stored fats is far from complete. Instead of converting them into gaseous products, it forms partly oxidized oils of evil smell and taste. The housewife calls the resulting oil rancid and throws it out.

Industries other than housekeeping have faced the same trouble with oxygen. Air slowly and incompletely attacks freshly distilled gasoline, particularly the cracked variety, reducing its anti-knock properties and forming small amounts of dissolved gums which accumulate in the engine and interfere with its operation. Oxygen changes vulcanized rubber from an elastic into a brittle material that breaks rather than stretches when subjected to a strain. The increased amount of oxygen that dissolves in pure organic antifreeze solutions accelerates the corrosion of automobile radiators.

Fortunately these other industries have long since found a way of blocking these incomplete oxidations. This type of oxidation is not a simple combining of so many oxygen molecules with so many molecules of the affected substance. Instead it is the effect of a relatively few oxygen molecules of high energy content. These active oxygen molecules attack and damage their molecular victim and in so doing release enough energy for the similar activation of other molecules. The total effect is thus the result of chains of reactions initiated by a few active molecules.

The petroleum and rubber producers have overcome the bad effects of these partial oxidations by breaking up the chains of reactions as soon as they get started. This is done by the addition of small amounts of compounds known as antioxidants. Gasoline and rubber antioxidants are organic reducing agents, similar in chemical structure to photographic developers. Because of the nature of their action, only traces of them are needed. The oxidative action of anti-freeze solutions is now likewise prevented by the addition of minute amounts of certain oxidizing agents which coat the exposed metal with an impervious film of an oxide of the metal.

Unfortunately, for a number of years no antioxidants could be used to prevent the development of rancidity in food oils or other products meant for human diet, because all of the effective antioxidants then known were poisonous. The small amounts of these substances did not present any danger when used in gasoline, rubber, or radiator fluid, but their use in food could not be tolerated.

However, in the last few years two valuable antioxidants have been discovered for foods. They were not synthesized in any laboratory, but are naturally occurring products, oat flour and lecithin. The nature of the former is obvious. The latter is a greasy solid containing phosphorus and nitrogen, found chiefly as a minor constituent of egg yolk and soy bean oil. The actual antioxidant effect of these two materials is due to the presence of a small amount of some unknown impurity.

Lecithin has been successfully dissolved in edible fats and oils to inhibit their deterioration. Small amounts of oat flour can be suspended in oils or aqueous liquids, or dusted on solids, to delay the development of staleness or rancidity. Among the products on which the favorable action of oat flour has been reported are vegetable oils and shortenings, dried milk, prepared flours, fresh and salted fish, peanuts, potato chips, and coffee.

It must be remembered that these two natural antioxidants are not preservatives in the usual meaning of the word. They do not prevent decay, since this is the result of the action of enzymes or bacteria which do not necessarily require oxygen for their action. The action of antioxidants is against the deterioration that results from the presence of atmospheric oxygen and which shows itself chiefly in the development of a rancid flavor in oils and oily foods.

Nor is their action permanent protection against rancidity. Antioxidants merely postpone the onset of oxidation or reduce its intensity. Nevertheless this allows greater convenience in storage and packaging of food products, a definite and long-desired gain for the food industries.

Bending Light Around a Corner

RECENTLY there was exhibited an interesting novelty in the way of an orchestra leader's baton which is probably the greatest single advance in the history of that worthy implement. The new baton appeared to be an ordinary glass rod. In the dark, however, its tip glowed brightly red when viewed from the audience. From the orchestra, toward which the baton was directed, the whole rod appeared faintly luminous.

The Germans light a spectacular ceremony. Some scientists think light will soon be piped like water.

The structure of the baton is quite simple. The light came from a small flashlight hidden in its handle and operated by the conductor. The light at the tip was reflected from a series of rings cut into the baton. The rod itself was not made of glass, but of a synthetic resin of the methacrylate type.

This device is not important for any revolutionary effect it may have on society. It is interesting in that it illustrates a peculiar property of a very few types of matter, that of conducting light as water is conducted by a pipe. Quartz is the only material other than methacrylate resins that shows this property. If a rod of either material is bent into a right angle and a light flashed into one end, the light rounds the turn without showing and appears practically undiminished at the other end.

Glass does not show this property. The reason for this is believed to be that glass is a totally noncrystaline body, while quartz and methacrylate resins contain invisible crystals in spite of their glassy appearance. Light rounding a bend in a glass rod is scattered by reflection from the surface, while in the cases of the other two substances it is completely refracted around the bend by the prismlike crystals.

There appear to be no useful applications of this unusual property other than in the manufacture of novelties and advertising devices. An imaginative scientist recently predicted that the future would see homes illuminated by light from a central light source, piped like hot water to the rooms. Going farther, he pictured the earth of the future as girdled by quartz pipes carrying sunlight to all quarters and creating perpetual day. However, there is no hope, or danger, of this situation arising for some time, because of the cost of the materials. Methacrylate resins are still rather expensive, and quartz, while quite cheap in its natural form of sand, melts at such a high temperature that it cannot be cheaply molded.

How to Select Your Christmas Puppy

IN JUST a few days Santa Claus will be appearing in countless homes with his bag full of gifts. Included in his pack this year will be thousands of friendly puppies—future companions and guardians for lucky children. The custom of giving puppies has grown more popular yearly as parents become more and more conscious of the value of a dog around a home.

Trying to decide "which is the best dog" for a child often bothers parents at Christmas time. Actually there is no one best breed—unless it is the one you like the most! It is true that breeds vary in temperament and other qualities due to their background, so one must pick the breed that is most nearly adapted to the use intended.

Here are a few points on the Christmas puppy that may be of help to Santa Claus during the next few days:

1. The breed to buy: No one is able to give complete advice on the kind of dog to buy. One must decide whether a long or short haired dog is wanted in the home. Do you like an active dog such as a terrier, or a quiet, more sedate breed? Do you like a fairly big dog like a collie, or a small dog requiring little exercise? Do you want a dog which is very friendly with visitors, or one that is aloof, like a chow? Do you have room for an active breed like a setter, or is living space limited? An active, healthy 8-year-old boy who likes to romp and play a great deal would probably enjoy a dog like a Scotty, fox terrier, Irish terrier, Sealyham, Airedale, Kerry blue, schnauzer, or other breed in the terrier group. The terriers are as a rule rough-and-ready playboys. They are popular as pets in America. But there are scores of other breeds to be considered, especially the nonsporting types. The Boston terrier long has been a favorite. Bulldogs, chows, poodles, and schipperkes are distinctive breeds in the nonsporting group.

The toy dogs are ideal for a home with limited space. They are alert, intelligent, and accustomed to people. Such distinctive small breeds as the Chihuahua, Pekingese, miniature pinscher, Pomeranian, toy Manchester, toy poodle, and others make interesting pets.

For those who like medium to big dogs the list is almost endless, because we have rather good-sized sporting breeds and working breeds, such as the Irish and English setter, boxer, pointer, greyhound, deerhound, collie, Doberman, German shepherd, the majestic Great Dane, Newfoundland, giant schnauzer, St. Bernard, and many others.

German shepherd.

The sporting group is a popular one. For example, the spaniels know how to hunt, and they also make good pets. The cocker and springer spaniels are affectionate and intelligent pets in the home. Other sporting group dogs which will work in the field and yet be good companions in the home are the golden retriever, Labrador, Chesapeake Bay, and Irish water spaniel.

2. The age of the puppy to be bought: Most experienced dog owners believe that the ideal age for a gift pup is from two to four months. Pups are fully weaned at this time and are at their most attractive age, so that a strong attachment can be formed between the child and the dog.

3. Care of the puppy after it has arrived in the home: It is always wise to take the new puppy to a veterinarian, who can advise the family about distemper, worming, rabies, feeding, and other problems. Veterinarians are always glad to give helpful advice to new owners. By all means have the puppy immunized against distemper.

DOG NOTES

There are many useful gifts which an owner may give his dog at Christmas. For example, a dish for food, a collar and leash, a hard rubber ball, or other similar articles. If you get a rubber ball for your dog be sure that it is well made of very tough rubber which the dog cannot destroy. If a dog swallows pieces of rubber they may make him very sick. All sorts of playthings made out of soft rubber are taboo for your dog.

When buying a puppy for a Christmas present it pays to do business with a reputable dealer. You get just what you pay for when you buy a dog, an automobile, or anything else. The prospective buyer should bear this fact in mind. It's impossible by all the rules of accounting and economics to procure a well bred, healthy puppy for a couple of dollars. Impossible because no one can raise a good puppy and sell it at that price unless he is a philanthropist and is giving money (and dogs) away.

What is believed to be the world's first sports section featured pictures, and the edition was "run off" on stone. This curious sports feature was published at the tomb of Amten, in the valley of the Nile, Egypt, between 4000 and 3500 B. C. The sport depicted was deer hunting, and the dogs shown were greyhounds, very similar to the breed as we know it today.

The dogs in our home always are dressed up on Christmas morning with big red bows tied to their collars. If you want your dog to add to the color and gayety of a Christmas morning, by all means give it a colorful touch such as this. You dress up for the occasion; the pup also would like to.

A good book either on general dog care and training or descriptive of a particular breed always is an ideal Christmas gift for a dog fancier. There are scores of such helpful books available this Christmas. They range in price from 25 or 30 cents to those with many pages and illustrations that cost several dollars. The cocker spaniel, dachshund, St. Bernard, springer spaniel, Pomeranian, and many other breeds are covered in well written breed books. One of the most inexpensive yet complete handbooks on dog feeding and general care is "The Dog Book," published by this department. It will be sent postpaid for 30 cents. The man who hunts might like to receive a book on the training of his spaniel, retriever, or bird dog. A number of such books have been published in recent years.

People Have to Foot Big Army Bill

independence. Two things none of them can do—negotiate with foreign states or make war.

In their internal affairs they are usually absolute, but they have British residents to check up on them and report if they seem to be going too far. They have their own armies, but those, too, are trained and supervised by British officers. They are no threat to the British, for there are only 40,000 of them. Sixty thousand British troops and 160,000 native troops of the Indian army always are on service in India.

In the World war the native states' armies were turned over to the British and did fine work for them. But the most famous of them, the Gurkhas, come from a little independent state, Nepal, which is not part of India, though lying on its borders and under British protection. Nepal supplied 200,000 fighting men from its total population of 5,000,000 during the World war.

The native rulers are familiar visitors to the west. They have created legend in America as well as England by their lavish living and spending. London is used to them, but it never gets tired of gaping at them and gossiping about their doings. They like to come here because it is part of the British policy to flatter them.

They bring their gaudily uniformed bodyguards and wear fortunes in jewels in their turbans alone. They take whole corridors of rooms in the big hotels and give lavish entertainments. They make dates not with single showgirls but with whole choruses at a time, and they shower the girls with magnificent presents. They go to all the big race meetings, and they shop in the west end for automobiles in sets of three and radio sets by the half dozen.

Less than a year ago English newspapers were full of accounts of the $75,000 super railway car built here for the maharajah of Indore to use on his private train at home. Just before the coronation the same maharajah again drew attention when he bought a $150,000 chunk of the famous American Jonkers diamond.

His father, who abdicated in 1926 rather than face a British inquiry into his private life, is a familiar and famous figure in Europe. When he came to the throne in 1911 the former maharajah was hailed as an enlightened ruler whose only desire was said to be to improve the condition of his people. In 1925, however, his mistress and favorite dancing girl, Mumtaz Begum, deserted him for a rich Indian merchant, Abdul Kadir Bawla. A group of the maharajah's retainers tried to kidnap her, and in the scuffle Bawla was killed. British officers who happened to be passing beat off the attackers and rescued the girl.

Three of the assailants were sentenced to death, and the British ordered an investigation of the maharajah's part in the affair. Rather than consent to it he abdicated in favor of his son.

Two years later, although he already had two wives, he married Nancy Ann Miller of Seattle, whom he had met in his travels. Despite opposition from many quarters she became a Hindu—the first convert in history admitted to the princely caste—and under the name of Devi Sharmishta was married to him in March, 1928, on the banks of the sacred River Godavari, by the shrankaracharya ("the Hindu pope"). They left on their honeymoon with 205 trunks.

The ex-maharajah bought a beautiful château near Paris, and his American wife has since presented him with three daughters. They have also a palace in Indore on which he is said to have spent $10,000,000. One bathroom alone cost $10,700.

He is not the only Indian prince married to a white woman. The Aga Khan, probably the best known of them all, has a French wife, daughter of a hotelkeeper at Chambéry. His first wife, who died in 1926, was Italian.

The Aga Khan is a familiar sight on English racecourses. He has a $5,000,000 racing stable, is the first oriental ever elected to the exclusive Paris Jockey club, and in 1930 crowned his racing career by winning the Derby with Blenheim.

But in world politics he is a far more important figure than that. The British were pleased at his election this year as president of the league of nations assembly, because they think he can do more than any one else to keep the world's Mohammedan subject peoples peaceful.

In India he is a demigod. Ten million Mohammedans of the Ismaili sect there and in Africa believe he is superhuman. As a descendant of the prophet Mohammed his least word is law to them. Though he rules no territory, he is more powerful than any other Indian prince and has been of incalculable value to the British in keeping the Mohammedan world friendly.

His son, Prince Aly Khan, has an English wife, the former Mrs. Loel Guinness, born the Hon. Joan Barbara Yarde-Buller, daughter of the late Lord Churston.

Indian princes completely stole the show from other foreign visitors at the coronation this year. Even Gen. John Pershing's "General Grant" full dress uniform paled into insignificance beside their scarlet tunics, jeweled turbans, and magnificent collections of decorations.

On the other side of the picture there is dismal poverty. Most of the people of India live on a scale far below anything Americans know. While huge sums are spent on defense, and the opium trade is still an important source of wealth for the government, only one in ten among the native adults of India can read and write his own language, or any other.

The death rate for 1932 was 22 in every 1,000. In 1934 it had risen to 25—one in 40—while in the United States of America it was only 11. In that year 80,000 persons died of bubonic plague in India, though the disease has been virtually wiped out in western countries for generations.

Six cents per inhabitant was the education budget in the United Provinces in 1935-'36, according to the official report issued recently, and even then inhabitants of the British provinces are far better off than those under native rule.

Complicating all efforts to improve things in India is a rigid caste system that makes Britain's ironclad social classification seem easy-going and democratic. A Hindu must live and die in the caste of his father and grandfather, and he may not marry outside it. Even in the army care has to be taken to keep the castes apart. A Hindu is defiled if he is even touched by one of a lower caste.

Forty-three million Hindus, one-ninth of the entire population, are untouchables, outside and below all castes, too low in the eyes of their fellows even to be counted as a caste. From them come nearly all the converts to Christianity and Islam.

Even the Indian princes are carefully graded. There are the big five—Hyderabad, Mysore, Gwalior, Baroda, and Jammu-and-Kashmir. The rulers of those states are treated as foreign sovereigns, with twenty-one-gun salutes, and are independent in all except foreign affairs.

The nizam of Hyderabad, with a fortune estimated at $1,000,000,000, gets on top of that an allowance of more than $2,500,000 a year from the revenues of his state, and his huge official expenses are paid as well.

All the native princes are friendly to the British. They know that British rule is their chief protection against revolt of their own subjects as well as against invasion.

British rule has had its good side, too. In spite of all its disturbances it has been as peaceful a period as India has known. As far back as history goes India had been fighting, either against invaders or among its own warring groups, until the British took charge.

The British also are improving living conditions in India with western ideas of comfort and sanitation, but there again progress is very slow. In that and in education, however, British provinces are better off than the native states.

British justice has replaced the merciless tyranny of native rulers in the British provinces, and in the native states any ruler who is too consistently cruel is likely to find himself removed by the British. None of that has been done through pure altruism, but the people of India have benefited and it must be credited to the British.

But the masses in India are hostile to British rule and in some measure to their own princes. They are filled with the nationalist spirit that has swept the world, and they want independence. Italian and communist agitators have taken advantage of that opportunity to sow their teachings in fertile ground, and Indian demands for freedom get careful coaching from interested powers.

The new constitution does not suit the people of India, and they demand its replacement by real self-rule. If they do not get it India probably will see bloodshed on a larger scale than for many years past.

Significant, in the meantime, is the fact that the new king of Great Britain, George VI., has not been crowned emperor of India in the customary pageantry of that land. The ceremony, at first postponed indefinitely, now is not expected to take place at all. It is understood political troubles have their part in this cancelation of a historic show.

A CHANGED CAR... IT WILL CHANGE YOU

THE Lincoln-Zephyr has changed, improved, without sacrifice of any of those unique features which set this modern car apart in 1936 and 1937—and still do!

It is still streamlined, but more so—resembling some fleet land-plane, gliding over the earth. It still has the V-type 12-cylinder engine built by Lincoln, proved by more than 45,000 owners. But the new engine is even smoother, quieter, with the same economy of 14 to 18 miles to the gallon!

In closed types, the car still has body and frame a single structure—even stronger and safer than before. It still has extraordinary room—but the wheelbase is lengthened to 125 inches.

The entire front compartment has been newly designed to give more space. And two new convertibles now increase the number of body types to six—open cars for open highways, for cloudless days and nights under the stars!

This new Lincoln-Zephyr will change your whole idea of the power, comfort and safety you can expect in the medium-price field. Lincoln Motor Company, builders of the Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr.

• Prices begin at $1295 delivered at Detroit factory. State and Federal taxes extra. The Sedan illustrated is $1395 delivered at Detroit factory; price includes white side-wall tires.

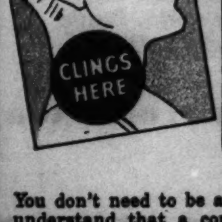
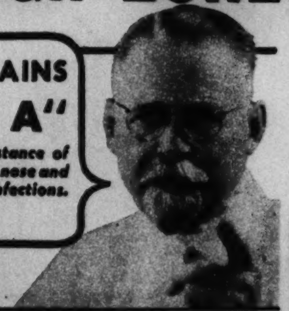
Medically Right! This cough syrup CLINGS TO THE COUGH ZONE



"AND IT CONTAINS VITAMIN A"

This vitamin raises the resistance of the mucous membranes of the nose and throat to cold and cough infections.



You don't need to be a doctor to understand that a cough syrup should do its work where the cough is lodged...right in the cough zone. Smith Brothers Cough Syrup is the thick, heavy syrup which clings to the cough zone. There it does three things: 1) soothes sore membranes, 2) throws a protective film over the irritated area, 3) helps to loosen phlegm. Smith Bros. Cough Syrup works without harsh drugs. It tastes good! Economical, 60¢!
